Lafayette McLaws.

The latest novel by the author of "When the Land Was Young" and "Jezebel," entitled "A Maid of Athens," in which Lord Byron is the hero, is said by her to be the first story written to treat of the poet in fiction. She asserts that she planned "A Maid of Athens" immediately after the publication of her two earlier novels by Little, Brown & Co. and before Hallie Erminie Rives wrote "The Castaway."

LITERARY SECTION OF THE NEW YORK TIMES

NEW YORK, MARCH 17, 1906.

TOPICS OF THE WEEK.

THE inquiry in THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW of Mr. Robert Waters of the West Hoboken public schools, touching the neglect of the memory of Henry Giles, author of "Illustrations of Genius," has inspired a tribute to Giles from Mr. Joseph O'Connor of The Rochester Post-Express. In his boyhood Mr. O'Connor twice heard Giles lecture in Rochester. He remembers that the lecturer was dwarfish and deformed, but strongly built.

> His head was magnificent; his face was strongly marked, and his eyes glowed under heavy brows, crowned with a mass of iron gray hair. That at least is the picture that comes somewhere from among the old impressions in the writer's mind.

Mr. O'Connor remembers that the lecturer's voice was resonant and sympathetic. His two subjects were "Daniel O'Connell" and "Irish Character, Mental and Moral." There were splendid eloquence, pathos, and humor in his discourses. Henry Giles was born in County Wexford, Ireland, and reared a Catholic, but he joined the Unitarian Church and became a preacher of that denomination. Mr. O'Connor says he was born in 1809; Allibone gives the date 1819. He came to this country about 1840. He died near Boston in 1882. All his life he was somewhat at odds with the world. As a Unitarian he was out of harmony alike with the Catholics and the Presbyterians of his native land. In New England he suffered from the strong prejudice of those days against the Irish. He was always a champion of the Irish, however, and proud of his race.

HENRY GILES'S book called "Illustrations of Genius in Some of Its Relations to Culture and Society," upon which Mr. Waters based his estimate of Giles's literary worth, was published in Boston in 1854. He had previously published (1850) "Lectures and Essays," in two volumes. This book was highly praised by contemporary reviewers, and is commended by Miss Mitford in her "Recollections of a Literary Life." Giles also published about this time "Christian Thought in Life." This was the era of the lecture platform, and Allibone describes Henry Giles as "one of the most popular of the many literary lecturers who draw crowded audiences in the United States." In 1868 Giles published his book on "Human Life in Shakespeare," a new edition of which was brought out in 1887, five years after his death. His "Lectures and Essays on Irish and Other Subjects" was published in New York in 1869. He seems, after all, to have enjoyed a fair measure of the esteem and applause of his contemporaries.

IT is quite the fashion of the hour in this country to attempt to belittle James Fenimore Cooper, who, nevertheless, was one of the first writers to make American letters known abroad, and whose novels were ranked, by our forefathers, with the best. It is the settled conviction to-day of many persons who never read a book of Cooper's that his Indians were unreal, his hunters and trappers sentimentalized, his protrayal of life out of drawing. Mr. William C. Brownell contributes to the April number of Scribner's Magazine an essay on Cooper which should go far toward the correction of this false idea of the work of a great American novelist. Mr. Brownell dwells particularly upon the breadth of Cooper's vision, the largeness of his view of life, and declares that "even his littlenesses were those of a large nature." Cooper unrolls for us a "splendid panorama of man, of nature, and of human life."

SINCE her return to London Mrs. Craigie, in a cheerful mood, has been talking to Mr. James Milne of The Book Monthly about her impressions of literary America. She thinks that American publishers, as a general thing, are both enterprising and wise. Sensational advertising, she tells Mr. Milne, has fallen off. She thinks well of American reviewers—but let that pass. The American reviewers think pretty well of Mrs. Craigie, for that matter. She thinks well of our plan of opening our columns to correspondence, after a review has been published, and permitting the author, his friends, and the "general reader" to say their say. She found well-written and artistic books even among our "best sellers." She noted that American readers "are taking a notable interest in matters of style." She has no doubt "that the basis of a great American literature is being well and surely laid." The phrase is Mr. Milne's, but Mrs. Craigie accepts it. Mrs. Craigie is a charming woman and Mr. Milne an astonishingly good fellow.

PROBABLY among the well-known poems accounted cryptic and largely unintelligible by the great majority of English readers, Emerson's "Brahma" ranks next to Browning's "Childe Roland to the Dark Tower Came." It is an agreeable surprise, therefore, to read in the Harvard Graduates' Magazine, of a little schoolgirl (presumably in Boston) who chose that poem in preference to others by Emerson to learn and recite in school. The teacher had told the children each to learn and recite one of Emerson's poems. We quote from the article:

> She expected the "Rhodora," "The Mountain and the Squirrel," or "Each and All." A little girl came in and recited "Brahma." The surprised teacher asked, Why? The child said she found she couldn't understand most of the poems she tried, but this was easy:—"It just meant God everywhere."

There was a precocious intellect, indeed, though we doubt very much if the child could have taken the verses line by line and found a meaning for every phrase. Her confession that she could not understand the simple poems indicates a certain measure of disingenuousness in her professed understanding of "Brahma."

A MORE striking example of infantile precocity is set forth in one of the volumes of the new series of "Life Stories for Young People," translated from the German by Mr. George P. Upton, and published in Chicago by Messrs. A. C. McClurg & Co. The particular story is that of "The Little Dauphin," (Louis XVII. of France,) and the German author is Franz Hoffmann. It describes vividly, and with quite unconscious pathos, part of a day in the life of the unfortunate Prince early in his sixth year. He is described as "about five years old." We are bold enough to assume that he must, at least, have passed his fifth birthday. In the morning, under a military guard, he weeds a flower bed and spades the soil, setting out some young plants. Then he picks and arranges a bouquet for the Queen, visits his pet rabbits, and gives a gold coin and a few words of tender commiseration to a poor woman who stands on the other side of the iron railings. Then he visits his royal father, and is gravely rebuked for inadvertently whistling at his lessons the day before; also for running among some thorny bushes, and replying to his protesting tutor: "It is the thorny path that leads to glory." He listens attentively to a lecture on the glories of his ancestors, and replies intelligently. Then he submits to a course of lessons in "religion, reading, history, and geography." Then he reviews and addresses the regiment of the Dauphin. Then he visits his royal mother, and is punished for a boyish prank. As he is a Prince and a Colonel he must be punished by proxy; so Mouflet, his dog, is shut in a dark room. The injustice of this proceeding weighs upon his mature and logical mind. Mouflet is released, and the Prince subjects himself to incarceration. Hoffmann rejects in silence the stories of Naundorff and Ebenezer Williams. He states positively that Louis died in the Temple, June 8, 1795, early in his eleventh year. Undoubtedly the privations of imprisonment hastened his end, but, after reading this translation of Hoffmann's book, we fancy that he must have died of old age.

MENTION has already been made in these columns of Mr. Ralph A. Lyon's little anthology called "The Mocking Bards," a collection of parodies published in a pretty volume by the Ridgeville Press, at Evanston, Ill. This, as our readers already know, preserves the correct versions of Ernest L. Thayer's "Casey at the Bat," S. E. Kiser's "Maud Muller on the Links," Bert Leston Taylor's "The Breakfast Food Family," S. W. Gillilan's "Finnigin to Flannigan," and T. A. Daly's "Leetla Giorgio Washeenton." It also includes many other bits of comic verse well worth preserving, from English as well as American sources. For instance, there is "When Father Carves the Duck," by E. V. Wright, a simple expression of the tragedy of domestic life. In a jesting age Mr. Lyon's little book is a useful one to have at hand.

THE appeal in our readers' columns for the establishment of a purely literary or All Essay magazine has been taken up rather seriously, but not, so far as we know, by anybody who is willing to risk capital in such an undertaking. The essay, for that matter, is not wholly disregarded in our foremost magazines. The two editorial departments of Harper's, for instance, are essays, month by month, written by brilliant essayists. The Atlantic Monthly finds room for essays, and so, at times, do The Century and Scribner's. McClure's Magazine has been publishing charming literary essays by George Woodberry. The Newark Evening News, in a pleasantly written article, warmly commends the idea of an All Essay Magazine, and names Samuel McChord Crothers, Henry van Dyke, Frederick R. Marvin, Bliss Carman, Agnes Repplier, John Burroughs, and Hamilton Wright Mabie in a list of possible contributors. To these many other names might be added—W. C. Brownell, James Huneker, Ferris Greenslet, T. C. Evans, Henry W. Boynton, and Prof. Brander Matthews for instance. But it is not always easy for the existing publications to get all they want from some of these writers. They are not looking, as a general thing, for outlets for the expression of their ideas. An All Essay magazine, however, undertaken seriously, edited from an elevated point of view, would be possible only if established as, it seems, Alfred Harmsworth, Lord Northcliffe, has re-established the historic Gentleman's Magazine in London.

OF the first number of The Gentleman's, under the editorship of Mr. A. H. Bullen, Mr. Clement Shorter, an astute critic who knows the world he lives in as well as he knows the books he reads, says:

> I doubt very much if the enterprise can possibly succeed, from a financial point of view, and with any other organization than one of the great syndicates I should say it was impossible; but that makes it the more worth doing.

The articles in The Gentleman's are unsigned, in accordance with an old established custom, though one of them on "The Pepysian Treasures" is easily identified as the work of H. B. Wheatley, the latest editor of Pepys and a writer of large distinction. Probably all the other articles were written by men as eminent in their respective departments of literature. The outlay in conducting such a magazine, with all possible economy, must be large. It must always depend for support on comparatively few readers. The pictures, the "sensations," the "timely articles," attract the multitude.

SIR FRETFUL PLAGIARY'S plan of printing and publishing his plays so that the public might judge of their merits for itself, is now followed by many American dramatists. Mr. Winston Churchill's comedy, "The Title Mart," for example, is now at hand in a neat volume. (Macmillan.) Needless to say, it is smartly written, and reads well. The contrast of the rustic mind with metropolitan swiftness is humorously set forth. A play that fails to exactly hit the mark in the theatre often turns out to read as well as a good novel. "The Title Mart" is worth looking into. "The Pipe of Desire, and Other Plays," by George Edward Barton, (Boston, the Old Corner Bookstore,) is a volume of pretty mysteries, a collection of dramatic pieces, in which the influence of Maeterlinck and Yeats is strongly revealed. The piece which gives the little book its title is a sort of tragic cantata, symbolizing, perhaps, the impatience and impulsiveness of youth and the irreverent disregard for traditions which distinguishes lusty young manhood. Note that we say—"perhaps." These fluent verses have been set to music by Frederick S. Converse. "The Sewing Machine" is a little tragedy of the sweatshop, grimly horrible. "The Thing to be Done," another of Mr. Barton's plays, is a mystical drama in two acts. "A Premature Socialist," by Mary Ives Todd, (Broadway Publishing Company,) is a dramatization of "An Altruist," a novel by Ouida. We judge from the preface that it was written for public performance. "Axel and Valborg" (The Grafton Press) is a historical tragedy in five acts, "translated from the Danish and German" of Adam Oehlenschlager by Frederick Strange Colle. The scene is a church in Norway, the time the twelfth century. Its story is the old one of lovers parted by craft and treachery and reunited in death, with a background of old Norse warfare.

OUR cable dispatches announced some time ago the forthcoming publication of a volume of hitherto uncollected essays by William Makepeace Thackeray. "The New Sketch Book" has now appeared in London. It is made up of eleven articles contributed anonymously to the Foreign Quarterly Review between April, 1842, and July, 1844. Mr. Robert S. Garnett is their editor. He is, we believe, a son of Dr. Richard Garnett, though Mr. Edmund Gosse, who reviews the book for The London Standard, cannot seem to place him. Mr. Gosse, however, praises the editor's work, and finds the evidence he produces to prove Thackeray's authorship convincing. Mr. Lewis Melville, in The Chronicle, finds the evidence almost as satisfactory, and is glad, it seems, to accept these articles as from Thackeray's pen, because they help to fill up gaps in his bibliography. Mr. W. L. Courtney is equally certain that Mr. Garnett's conjecture as to the authorship is correct. Mr. Gosse, however, regrets the publication of the book. He finds it only another volume which "tends slightly to cloud the lustre of 'Vanity Fair' and 'Esmond.'" Mr. Gosse does not like many of the expressions of literary opinion in "The New Sketch Book." They do not show a penetrating vision. There is a lack of comprehension of Balzac and Hugo, an exaggerated idea of the importance of Sue and Frederic Soulié that seem strange to a twentieth century reader. Mr. Courtney, who finds more to praise, admits that Thackeray "was by no means an ideal critic of foreign literatures."

MR. LOUIS WINDMULLER, Treasurer of the Legal Aid Society, has reason to be proud of the souvenir programme, prepared under his direction, of the performance of Humperdinck's "Haensel und Gretel" given for the society's benefit at the Metropolitan Opera House last Thursday. It is the kind of publication theatrical collectors are fond of buying up and hiding away until it becomes scarce. It will appear again and again in the sales of theatrical collections in the next generation. It is well printed on well-chosen, heavily calendared paper. Some folks will snip out the advertisements at the back of the pamphlet and bind it in leather or boards. It contains the cast of the opera, a notable one, a lucid sketch of the plot, a bit of critical analysis by H. T. Finck, sketches of the work of the society by Mark Twain, Louis Windmuller, Arthur V. Briesen, Brander Matthews, and Lyman Abbott. There are capital illustrations, both portraits and pictures of scenes in the opera.

TO mark the two hundredth anniversary of that blameless and always dignified diarist of the Restoration, John Evelyn, two new editions of his diary are appearing in London, one of them edited by Mr. H. P. Wheatley, the latest editor of Pepys. A revival of interest in the man and his faithfully recorded impressions of the life of his times is inevitable. Evelyn is, of course, no Pepys. He always holds himself in restraint. He is never seen in undress. There is no such rich fund of humor (often unconscious humor) in his diary as in that of the little, self-satisfied, cheerful, keen, frankly vulgar, wonderfully observant clerk. Evelyn was a gentleman with a high sense of honor and justice, who neither condoned the frivolity of the age of Charles II. nor went out of his way to set its manifestations down on paper. Of course, the diary of Pepys is the more valuable. We must inevitably like it best. But we respect the diarist more when we read Evelyn's. Together they have preserved an incomparable picture of the social life of an epoch.

THE PORTUGUESE SONNETS.

Elizabeth Barrett Browning, Born March, 1806.

NOR sombre doubt she knew nor changeless ill;
Calm prisoner of pain, her steadfast gaze
Sought the diviner light in life's dark maze.
So with impassioned utterance to fulfill
The perfect purpose of the eternal will,
Love overtook her on pain's cloistered ways
And wrought a miracle of magic days
Whose lofty music holds the rapture still.

Love the immortal with soft footfall stole,
Lo! with a mightier stroke he swept the lyre
And woke the glory that had slumbered long,
The matchless glory of the heart's desire;
Up from the sacred well-springs of the soul

Ecclesiastical Books.

At this time of the year it is interesting to note the display of ecclesiastical books at the house of Robert Grier Cooke, Inc. Particular attention is paid by Mr. Cooke to the printing of these volumes, and he has special paper and fonts of type, each appropriate to the form and style of each work.

NEWS OF THE BOOK WORLD ABROAD.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES. [Copyright, 1906.]

LONDON, March 16.—Still another new "Life of John Wesley, written by Dr. Fitchett, is almost ready to appear. It will show Wesley's career in historical perspective, and its relations to this as well as to the eighteenth century. It will be a study of great spiritual forces and their effect on secular history. Fisher Unwin will soon publish "Schiller's Dramas and Poems in England," by Thomas Rea. The author's purpose is to show what influence Schiller's works exerted on English literary thought in the first half of the nineteenth century.

MESSRS. CHATTO & WINDUS will publish in May "Annals of Covent Garden Theatre," by Henry Saxe Wyndham. The story runs from 1732, when the original house was opened by John Rich, down to the present, and contains memoirs of many celebrated persons connected with the stage and dramatic authorship. John Lane will publish next week "Historic Dress, 1607 to 1800," by Elisabeth McClellan, with copious illustrations by Sophie B. Steel and others. Another dress book is coming from Messrs. A. & C. Black, to be devoted to English costumes from the time of William I. to that of George IV. Dion Clayton Calthrop is the author.

THE next volume in "The Plantagenet Roll of the Blood Royal," which Messrs. Jack & Co. expect to publish this Spring, will treat of the descendants of Anne of Exeter, a sister of King Edward IV. Mrs. Francis Blundell has a volume of stories, appearing from Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co.'s, entitled "Simple Annals." They deal with the lives of workingwomen. Messrs. A. & C. Black will soon publish a book by F. G. Aflalo, the well-known writer on sporting subjects, which discusses the question of the right sort of weather for angling.

"SPIRIT OF THE TENNESSEE MOUNTAINS."

Reviewed by HENRY IRVING BROCK.

TO write about one's own peculiar people and one's own corner of the hills for the eyes of the greater world, and to write simply, faithfully, is a thing hard to do, and, truth to say, rarely done. The writer may know, but the consciousness of the alien audience possesses him, (or her,) impedes sincere expression, and results now in uncouth incomprehensibility, now in a merely literary something which is false to the spirit and distorting to the facts.

This reflection is suggested by a little book called "The Spirit of the Mountains," published by Messrs. James Pott & Co. a year ago, and brought to present attention by the sight of one of a small number of copies, charmingly extra-illustrated by the author in pen and ink and in water color.

Emma B. Miles, the author in question, has written of her Tennessee mountain people, among whom she was reared and whose lives she has shared, with perfect sincerity, and put what she has to say in a literary form singularly unaffected and appropriate. There is idealization, of course, but it consists not in softening and toning the details, but in the interpretation of what is behind and beneath the rough exterior. The sketches of mountaineer life—of the school, the cabin, the church; of the men's work, of the women's work, of mealtime, meeting time, stress of childbirth, the round of a primitive existence—are so convincingly transcripts of pictures from the writer's own memory, so vividly fresh there, and so vividly conveyed, that you can feel the actuality of it—almost you can see the sunlight on the clearing and smell the supper bacon frying as you read.

This when you have no more to go on than the printed page and chance glimpses of the region as a stranger sees it. Those who, like the author, know the heart of the country, declare that the inner characteristics of a peculiar people are as faithfully reflected as any accidents of log-cabin structure, quaint speech, anachronistic theology, or homespun garb. Mrs. Miles is proud of her Tennessee mountaineers, boasts (not unpardonably or quite without historic warrant) that they are untouched survivals of the pioneer age, sees no reason to picture them other than as they are, and frankly regrets what civilization, as imported by Summer visitors, is doing to change them. The transition from homespun to cheap calico is certainly not too inspiring, even if it is a step down necessarily preliminary to a step up.

No other book that we recall has given so convincing a proof that a fragment of a past century lingers, wonderfully preserved, in this corner of the Appalachian highlands, and no book, by necessary sequence, is likely to give a better idea of what the life of that past century—now mostly seen through a romantic haze—really was. The strength of the writer lies chiefly, of course, in the passages where she deals with the basic matters of a woman's life in this anachronistic environment. Mrs. Miles was not, it appears, actually born in her hills. She came there as a small child, grew up among the natives, married one of them, has shared their poverty to the utmost—as certain autobiographic touches in her work hint. Outside birth sharpens, no doubt, her appreciation of the peculiarities which otherwise might have escaped her; her life's contact has given her understanding and sympathy. One must wonder how in the narrowest of narrow mountain circumstances, with the cares of many children, a woman ever found time—however much she saw and felt—to make a book of these things. But here the book is for proof, and the fact that Mrs. Miles has lived most of the life she describes, stands well vouched for. All this apart, the simplicity already noted as the chief literary merit of her work is a quality of her own, and gives the book a value quite out of proportion to its very modest pretensions.

A GERMAN VIEW OF OUR SCHOOLS

DR. PAUL COHN of the Technological College of Vienna, who came to this country as a member of the jury of the St. Louis Exposition, made an extensive investigation of our school system during his stay here, which he has just published in pamphlet form, (Vienna: Alfred Holder.) Despite its modest size and appearance, it covers its ground thoroughly, and is a most interesting account of our school and college systems as seen by a trained observer.

Dr. Cohn divides his book into seven chapters, with introduction and conclusion. Of the chapters, the first five and the seventh deal with the lower schools, the colleges, the American university, the combination of college and university, the State universities, and the independent polytechnic schools; the sixth discusses the influence of Germany on the universities. The introduction notes briefly how the United States has developed in less than four centuries, where, upon an English and Dutch foundation, a homogeneous nation has been founded; and this result he attributes to the American educational system wholly.

The author was especially interested in the question of sectarian as against nonsectarian education, and in the great private gifts to found or maintain colleges—gifts absolutely unknown in Europe. He finds that our youth leave school and college life to enter the world "with energy, practical ideas, and perseverance," not tired of study, while in Germany and Austria they have to sit too long on their books, and enter life wearied with their studies. In fact, he approves heartily of our school system, which he declares is the cause of our place among nations today.

The opinion of a clergyman who knows the real conditions in the stockyards, as represented in "The Jungle" by Upton Sinclair:

NEW HAVEN, CONN., March 8th, 1906.

MY DEAR MR. SINCLAIR:

For the past three years (1897-1900) I was pastor in Chicago, during which time I preached in Plymouth Church Sunday mornings, and gave my evenings to mission work in the district which you describe. Having lived most of my life as a workingman—five years of that time, on and off, as a common sailor—I had the workman's point of view, and found myself in full sympathy with him. Men will say that you have overdrawn the thing; it is not so. You had the novelist's rights, of course, but you have not misused them. Your book is true—true as life—true as death. Men who do not know should keep still. Men who do know, and deny it, are liars. Men who know, and say nothing, are cowards.

Tolstoy, Zola, Gorky—these are the men with whom I compare you. None of them has done anything greater; at least more significant. You have a surer hold upon the raw facts of life, as deep a vision, and that rare witchery of treatment that creates a new world out of chaos. In "The Jungle" one feels how unutterably tragic is the life of the oppressed poor—how much of beauty and joy they miss. The man who can read it without being moved to the depth of his being may know that judgment has been passed upon him. Already he is a dead soul. From chapter to chapter the story unfolds with the inevitableness of fate. I can compare it to nothing but the full sweep of the tide. It is strong and fine—fine in every detail. You are true to facts, you are sure of your material, but, above all, you get down into things that cannot be defined. Already I am crying it from the housetops. I shall preach on it when the time comes. Some of the University men have promised to read it. One man—economics—has told the men in his classes to get it. People must read it. Those who know what you have done must take hold and lift. Here is the chance we have been waiting for. Men may rejoice in or hate "The Jungle," but they will never look at the social question, after reading it, in quite the same way again.

Further Contributions to the Dispute About the Definition of Poetry.

I.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

REGARDING the question of "A Perplexed Subscriber," March 3, may I suggest that it would perhaps be as difficult to give some simple rule by which to distinguish prose from poetry as it would to give one by which to distinguish the significant from the insignificant? Prose and poetry seem to be about as inextricably mixed up as good and evil. Both have rhythm, and though there is supposed to be some difference in the rhythm of prose and that of poetry, it would be difficult to define the difference. It may be said that Pope wrote poetry and De Quincey prose, but that is only a way of speaking, and not wholly satisfactory.

Is it quite fair, anyhow, to say that Mr. Gilder's "There's No Place Like the Old Place" "ignores completely the laws of rhythm"? There are movement and music and harmony, though of a more irregular kind than that which we are accustomed to class as blank verse. By the use of the freer, more elastic form, does not the poem gain in the naturalness, accuracy, and completeness of the emotions rendered? Is not the style, too, better adapted to just that kind of emotion, the dreamy, irregular, rather formless musing with the poetic transfiguration of memory? I fear that I get but a glimmer of the significance of the poem, but it certainly seems to me very lovely and genuine and admirably expressive of the particular emotion meant to be expressed, and I for one am willing to call it poetry.

I am interested in poetical experiments of this kind, products of the borderland. I feel that they, like the chrysanthemums loved of Maeterlinck, should somehow reveal some secret of import, what I do not know. And I hardly know whether to call Mr. Gilder's poem a wild rose or a cultivated one, but it has fragrance.

II.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

"A Perplexed Subscriber," under the heading "What Is Poetry?" cites Mr. R. W. Gilder's recent so-called poem "There's No Place Like the Old Place," and then very reasonably asks, if such writings as this and Walt Whitman's "panoramic programmes" are to be called poetry, then what is the difference between prose and poetry?

I appreciate "A Perplexed Subscriber's" dilemma, and while not certain I can make matters any clearer, yet, with the tolerant permission of the editor, I will offer a few remarks.

I would say of Mr. Gilder's lines that they breathe a poetic aroma; but this may be said of much literary production that makes no claim to being anything but prose. But poetry is not a poem until it is reduced to metrical and rhythmical expression. The most perfect poem, other things being equal, would be a literary composition in which poetry received a metrical, rhythmical, and rhymed expression. In proportion to the degree in which a poetic composition deviates from this standard does it lessen its claim, I should say, to being considered a poem.

Whitman's "Leaves of Grass" does not constitute a poem or a book of poems, although there is much poetry to be found in its pages. Throughout visible and invisible nature there is poetry, but it is poetry in solution, so to speak. And so it is with "Leaves of Grass"—poetry is there, but it is in solution. "Leaves of Grass" is not a poem nor a series of poems, but, like nature herself, it is a vast and manifold poetic suggestion. Or, in other words, it is not a poem nor poetry that Whitman offers us, but a poetry-bearing quartz which he has carelessly picked up in his rambles about the base of Parnassus.

A poem is a song. A song presupposes harmony. You might as well think of producing music without harmony as a poem without rhythm. Mr. Gilder's lines above discussed and "Leaves of Grass" are not songs or poems, but are rather pages of prose recited to the thrummings of the lyre. WILLIAM H. BRASHEAR.

Zola as Translated.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Emile Zola is considered a very efficient author by the French people. They revere his name and cherish his books. But we Americans are unable to read his original works. We must be satisfied with enduring such abominable translations as the one by Ernest Alfred Vizetelly. In this translation all the beauty is lost. Even ordinary paragraphs are distorted and conjured with in such a manner as to ruin the entire context. What we desire is a translation that will accurately describe the author's actual thoughts.

The translator's paragraphs are abominally long and wearisome. His descriptions are entirely uninteresting to the readers, because they are written in a listless manner. Following is an example of how Mr. Vizetelly describes a reception rooms: "The great reception rooms were on the ground floor, looking on to the spacious courtyard, and preceded by a little Winter garden, which served as a vestibule, where two footmen in liveries of dark green and gold were invariably on duty." By scanning this paragraph we find altogether too many words. The entire thing might be condensed, as no doubt it was before being translated by our able authority. Two or three sentences could easily have been made from this paragraph, thereby strengthening the thought.

If we are to have translations from the works of Emile Zola let us have good ones. A bad translation is worse than a bad egg. Both are unfit for use. I trust that I am not too harsh on Mr. Vizetelly, but I know that others will agree with me after reading "Paris," which is the particular book I refer to.

Burroughs and Dogs.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Perhaps I can best answer the questions of your correspondent, "One Who Loves Dogs," by telling briefly what is to be commended in Burroughs's book "The Ways of Nature."

First, the spirit with which he approaches the task of investigating animals' intelligence is admirable. His standard of good observation is "to see no more and no less than is actually before you; to be able to detach yourself and see the thing as it actually is, uncolored and unmodified by your own sentiments or prepossessions." (Page 238.) This is the scientific attitude. With no lack of love for the animal world, he yet realizes that this is a problem for the intellect, not for the heart, and that sentiment should not be allowed to veil facts. In his preface we read: "Let us hope that the result of the discussion * * * will not be to make the reader love the animals less, but rather to love the truth more."

The force of this sentence is illustrated in Burroughs's attitude toward "this new school of natural history romancers that has lately arisen and that reads into the birds and animals almost the entire human psychology." His opinion of their work is as follows:

"So far as these writers awaken an interest in the wild denizens of the field and wood and foster a genuine love of them in the hearts of the young people, so far is their influence good; but so far as they pervert natural history and give false impressions of the intelligence of our animals, catering to a taste that prefers the fanciful to the true and the real, is their influence bad." (Pp. 13-14.)

Burroughs's estimate of these writers is, I think, just. They do pervert natural history and teach a false psychology. Unquestionably most psychologists of to-day would support Burroughs in his statement that many people falsely interpret animals' acts by reading into them human experience. As the result of this reading in process powers are attributed to them for which there is insufficient evidence, such as the ability to reason, to teach, (that is, to impart knowledge,) of such sentiments as justice, beauty, and shame. Numerous examples of this fallacy are cited in his book, and should prove helpful to every student of nature. For scientific treatment of the subject reference may be made to the writings of C. Lloyd Morgan and to E. L. Thorndike's "Animal Intelligence." J. B. ADAMS.

Wordsworth.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

I have been much struck with the fact that after a half-century of semi-oblivion, during which another class of poets, typified by Tennyson and Longfellow, has occupied the thoughts and filled the imaginations of all English-speaking people, William Wordsworth has been, so to speak, resurrected, and has come to the front again and taken the place that of right belongs to him as a mighty master of poetic power. I find among my papers a sonnet to Wordsworth, written some years ago, but never printed, in which there almost seems a prediction of the fact alluded to above. I send it to you. Perhaps the readers of THE NEW YORK TIMES BOOK REVIEW might be interested in it:

WORDSWORTH.

Like a fair river rolling on its way,
Broad, silent, deep, pellucid, and serene,
With mountains mirrored in its waters
seen,
And banks all beautiful in bright array—
Pausing at times in playful mood to stray
Around some rock or little grassy isle,
Which, though it seems at first scarce worth its while,
More fully doth its character portray:
Such is thy strain, O bard of Rydal
Mount!
Such depth, such breadth, such weakness,
and such power,
Such calm profoundness is they muse's
dower;
And they who drank in youth from passion's fount
And scorned thy lay experience bids return,
To quaff refreshing draughts they once did spurn.

Mrs. Stowe and Lord Byron.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

Many years ago Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe exposed the life of Lord Byron in a published work which created a tremendous storm of opposition at the time.

So far as my memory goes now, there was hardly a publication that came under my eye which did not condemn Mrs. Stowe. On the supposition that the account of him in her book was true, I did not see the occasion for the general sentiment which at that time seemed to prevail, but the impression I received then was that the critics of Mrs. Stowe did not believe her story was true; but I may be in error in this opinion.

Now, after many years, THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS has referred to a book of like exposure, one copy of which has reached this country and become public, written by a relative of the Byron family. I looked for a similar outburst of indignation on the part of the press, or at least some mild expression of disapproval but as yet I have seen no reference whatever to this evident confirmation of Mrs. Stowe's book of my childhood days.

On seeing the contrast between the reception of the two works—both evidently true, and similar in trend—one is led to ask whether the press is not sometimes too hasty in condemnation, or too lenient toward sinful men, especially if talented along certain lines. One would infer now, at least, that Mrs. Stowe was fully warranted in the matter of the truthfulness of her book, if not also in exposing the life of the man at that time, as her account seems to be confirmed by this last book recently issued. England and Spelling.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

K. H. R. evidently got rid of a somewhat splenetic load when he refreshingly informed us that he hated the English. On reading this piece of petty ingenuousness I felt something like the schoolboy of happy memory who, upon having the letter "A" pointed out to him for the first time, exclaimed, "Good God, is that 'A'?" Surely, K. H. R., you can't mean it? Heaven help these pestilent English. Beshrew me, they must mend their spelling, or who knows what foes England will be raising up against herself?

But I am really impelled to write you on account of some remarks by S. J. Fisher on the unreasoning partisanship of the English, their puerile hate of great teachers; for that is just exactly what S. J. F.'s comments amount to. Pray, how long is it since England has had a sacred monopoly in that respect? Are no storms of calumny and obloquy raised here? Are all our teachers instantly acclaimed? Is it true that Robert Buchanan appealed to the readers of The London Daily News for funds to make happy the latter days of Walt Whitman? When will we get over this senseless filibustering? And if facts are to be lucidly faced, are not their hatreds at least honest and open? It seems to me that an American, least of all, (let me say it with shame,) should fling out in this way, when one recalls the filthy vituperation of a great section of the American press, and the bestial revenges of great cliques.

Glancing over this brief note, it seems a veritable storm in a teacup. But, really, it is through such remarks as those of S. J. Fisher that wrong headed notions and absurd preconceptions prevail about our great cousins over the sea, whom we are to imagine as being stolid, illogical haters, void of humor, gross partisans, &c. To any one acquainted with contemporary literature and history, England holds a very honorable and proud place, and may we not once in a while be courteous, and accept the bulk for the sample?

An All-Essay Magazine.

New York Times Saturday Review of Books:

With the correspondent who suggests an all-essay magazine I sympathize as a presumable reader and a possible contributor, the latter point being interpolated, because, besides being candid, it is important. Every ambitious and surely every disappointed essayist would subscribe. The effect of this consideration alone would insure success. Such a publication should adopt the new simplified form of spelling, and should produce only pictures that would elucidate as well as adorn. A subject I have in mind in a sufficiently advanced state to be put on paper as soon as an objective point at which to hurl it can be discerned is the desirability of dispensing with the barbaric custom of swearing legal testimony. An Assistant District Attorney recently admitted that evidence relating to certain cases of jury-fixing was invaluable because it had not been given under oath, thus almost conceding that swearing is more sacred than truth.

Of course it would be irrelevant to pursue the subject here, but I may point to the encouraging likelihood that an embryo editor would have an early opportunity of exercising the endearing prerogative of rejection.

That in digging the ground

Guide with Colored Pictures.

A new guide to Rome and its environs is being issued by the Macmillan Company in this country. It has been compiled by Eustace Reynolds-Ball, author of "Cairo of To-day," "Jerusalem," "Paris and Its Splendor," &c., and contains eight illustrations in color by Alberto Pisa and three plans. It is printed in large type and bound in flexible covers. Special attention has been paid to hotel accommodation, hints for sightseeing, routes, &c. The most important objects in the Eternal City are described in detail sufficient for the tourist who has a few weeks only in which to "do" Rome, while the traveler who is more at leisure will also find the accounts sufficient.

"IN MEMORIAM."

LORD TENNYSON during his lifetime was often pressed to explain various passages in what is perhaps his greatest work, and occasionally he acceded to this request. He did not like the task, and must have felt the repugnance of all great poets to put in other words the feelings they had put in their best words. His son, the present Lord Tennyson, has collected the annotations, and has added to these a few notes of his own and of Lady Tennyson's, and prefixed to these annotations all the family material relating to "In Memoriam."

Much of this has already been printed in the excellent memoir of the poet written by his son, but it is perhaps a convenience to have the whole material collected together with the text of the poem. Whether the edition thus produced of "In Memoriam" can be regarded as a substantial or an adequate one is another question. Many passages which the ordinary reader would like to have elucidated are left without annotation, and the actual information given is somewhat sparse and rarely illuminating.

There already exist studies of the poem by Dr. Rolfe, Prof. Genung, and Dr. Jacobs on a more elaborate scale than this one. The chief additional information contained in it consists of three rejected poems originally intended for "In Memoriam," but rejected, on the whole, wisely, by the poet, from the final edition. The book itself has all the typographical attraction of the Golden Treasury Series, and this is perhaps its best recommendation.

EXTRAVAGANZA.

DO you remember the days when an Olympian's casual mention of an unfamiliar word opened up a universe of hobgoblin, fairy and romance lands?

If you do then you will want to accompany Sue Betty a hunting after Mousse or whisking over roofs in Plutarch's wake to a big tenement and the garret in it where people don't have to pay rent and where the poor Prince and Princess Carabas live.

If you like Plutarch "the best ever" because he can take up one or other of the nine lives of the cat that he is at will, and when he is Puss in Boots can talk English to a nicety; well, Sue Betty, too, is wonderfully capable when she is using that one of her two precious little lives that is called the dream life.

You must not show the least astonishment at her bravery about that great hulking furnace that would go out nights on larks, nor at her cleverness in taking the pirate's boat. Nor must you marvel at how boldly she marched up the path marked "for editors only" as soon as she found the one set aside for "contributors" led to nowhere. Neither must you raise an eyebrow at her waylaying the editor himself and later making pictures of leaping salmon to illustrate her cousin's article on government.

If you can swallow these and other capers with a straight face you will almost rival Sue Betty; and, as Plutarch said, it was wise not to neglect either dream of everyday life, so it would not be unwise to send Peter Newell's pictures of these particular dreams to somebody you may know. For surely the children of Little Brook and the children of the Four Winds Farm and the other four to whom Hildegarde Brooks dedicates her six stories are not the only folk, little or big, who will like them.

BOSTON NOTES.

Mrs. Thruston's Novel of Maryland in War Time — Dr. Hyde on College Men and Women —New Novels.

I WILL write a book which will be a fragmentary piece cut out of life, like a square of turf you cut with perhaps no whole weed in it," says one of the two women in American novels who are both ladies and journalists, and this is what Mrs. Lucy Meacham Thruston has done in "Called to the Field," which Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. will publish March 24. The life is that of a little family placed on the edge of the Virginia battle zone, and possessed by the civil war, from the day of secession to the very end of the contest. Hunger so keen as to rejoice over the coming of the dandelion in the Spring, privation so great that even a pine knot was precious, and toil incredibly bitter came to the young wife and made up this "fragmentary piece." The poetry and the hum of the deadly struggle have been written by Mr. Thomas Nelson Page, and many another; this book shows it as the woman saw it, smileless prose, exactly reproducing the Revolutionary legends still cherished in the family histories of the Delaware and the Hudson Valleys.

Mr. Rupert Sargent Holland's "The Count at Harvard," now in type at Messrs. L. C. Page & Co.'s, might almost be called a series of similar "fragmentary pieces," for its single-scene sketches have no logical connection, except the hero's growth in the graces and mild disgraces of his station, which is that of a student passing four years at the university as a matter of social policy, not because he desires knowledge, or even athletic sports. The preparation of a musical drama, the entertainment of a son of Eli, the pleasures of class day, when anxious mammas, unlovely daughters, inconsiderate fathers, old graduates in general, and even the sisters of one's classmates, intervene between the Senior and The Girl, are among the simple drolleries of the book of which the truth may be accepted without the smallest allowance.

That the university has room enough even for such a one is made evident in the preface of President Hyde's "The College Man and the College Woman," to be published by Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin & Co. to-morrow. Dr. Hyde plainly says that the main reliance of a college for its molding of men and women is not preaching or exhortation, still less rules and regulations, least of all threats and penalties, but actual living in an atmosphere of freedom, where each person has returned to him frankly, swiftly, mercilessly the social judgment that his acts invite and his character deserves; so that the heedless youngster who goes to college because it is the thing to do really submits himself to its strongest influences. The marks of the true college man and college woman, says President Hyde, are good fellowship and courtesy, kindliness and courage, thoroughness and patience, sincerity and sympathy, serviceableness and self-sacrifice; and the man who takes these from the university can dispense with many things on which the Faculty can set examination papers. The book is dedicated to Theodore Roosevelt, with an enumeration of the eight titles which successively he has borne and the addition of a ninth title, "Peacemaker."

In one of the sermons included in President Hyde's book he speaks of the just, generous, brotherly, brave, social service for which the Christ of the twentieth century stands. Now, the Lothrop, Lee & Shepard Company is bringing out Paul Karishka's "Twentieth Century Christ" this week, and this author, too, has his conception of the present Christ, or Jesus, as he prefers to say. According to him the Jesus of the first century was "superb in one thing alone—the Law, the Law, the Law." "Find me another," he cries, "who as a teacher or as a descended god is even to-day striving to absolutely put in practice the law which he believes." That law, he says, is the Law of Rhythm. The atonement, an at-onement with this basic law in consciousness, that is balance or justice, and therefore sinlessness. The steps by which he arrives at this decision are curious, and the book, although certainly not orthodox, is not violently hostile to Christianity, but belongs to the school which uses solvents rather than blows to break up old foundations.

The companion volume of Paul Karishka's book, as far as date and publisher are concerned, happens to be Mr. Stratemeyer's "Under Togo for Japan," with three young heroes, and their elderly friend to make a fourth virtuous person, and bad Russians and a bad Japanese as their enemies, so that there is no comfort for the good, let them range themselves under whichever flag they please. The story leaves them bound for San Francisco, by way of Manila.

"The Clammer," which Messrs. Houghton, Mifflin issue to-morrow, needs no introduction to Atlantic readers, but the slight quaintness in the proportions of its page and the rubricated title and ingeniously illuminated cover make it remarkable in appearance.

The great body of Leon H. Vincent's published work in a certain sense holds itself apart from the needs of the reader seeking instruction, and addresses itself to him who desires amusement in watching the play of delicate satire and humor; but in his new book, "American Literary Masters," he writes to instruct, but has the happy inspiration of retaining all the graces which he displays for the fastidious. Discussing the nineteen men whose work was pre-eminent in the half century between 1809 and 1860, he sets what he has to say under the heads of "Life," "Character," "Writer," and "Writings," subdividing the last two when an author's appearance in more than one field of work makes the arrangement necessary. Such is the sinful nature of fallen man that one naturally turns first to Poe and Whitman, to find him delightfully moderate, yet not given to concession. The work of Poe as critic is ground on which other critics necessarily betray themselves. Says Mr. Vincent: "Of all harmless creatures authors are the most harmless, and should be allowed to live out their innocent little lives. But Poe took literature hard, and authors had a disquieting effect upon him."

Messrs. Little, Brown & Co. will issue Mrs. Spofford's volume of stories, "In Old Washington," next Saturday, and have placed a correctly dressed belle of the civil war period on the cover. The stories are charming in dignified humor, and here and there the initiated will catch a fleeting allusion to real persons.

The Irving which Messrs. J. W. Luce & Co. are bringing out in the "Men of the Age" series will be illustrated by portraits of the actor as Robespierre, Macaire, Badger, and Dubosc, and also by a portrait, and a reproduction of a poster representing Irving as Don Quixote. Mr. Gordon Craig's work needs no introduction in this country, and he has naturally spared no pains on that done for this book.

Mr. Charles G. D. Roberts is working with even more than wonted earnestness on the book which Messrs. L. C. Page & Co. will publish for him in the coming Autumn; but he has not yet decided whether its title shall be "Haunters of the Silence" or "By the Waters of Fundy." It will be a companion volume to "The Heart of the Ancient Wood."

STEPHENSON BROWNE.

In the North.

"The Spoilers" is the title of a story (now running serially in Everybody's Magazine) which the Harpers announce for book publication early in April. The author is Rex E. Beach, and the narrative deals with primitive matters of passion and commercial greed in the Far North, where, according to Mr. Kipling, the laws of God and man are more honored in the breach than in the observance. There are gold mines in Alaska, and politicians and plutocrats at home, who conspire against the rightful owners. A pretty girl goes out to Nome as agent of the villains, all unconscious of the wreck she is to bring to honest men. And rude matters, expressed in rude language, follow after. The story is described as one of power and daring after the modern school of Jack London. The book is provided with full-page illustrations by Clarence F. Underwood.

Students' Guide to Europe.

"Travel in Europe" is the title of a new guide to Europe, compiled by Harriet Bernhard Clapp, and published by Robert Grier Cooke, Inc. It has been written not only for tourists, but also for the confirmed traveler and the student. The most important places and objects in Europe are described, and the usual directions and suggestions for traveling, such as routes, hotels, &c., are given. In addition, there are suggestions for reading in connection with the sights and places to be visited.

Thomas Hardy's Country.

That part of southern and southwestern England described by Thomas Hardy, and known as Wessex, is the subject of the new color book which the Macmillan Company is about to bring out. Clive Holland furnishes the text, which deals with the people, history, and romance of "the fayre land of Wessex." The seventy-five water-color drawings are reproductions of pictures by Walter Tyndale.

HARPERS BOOKS

Silas Strong
Emperor of the Woods

In this new novel Irving Bacheller returns to the scenes of "EBEN HOLDEN." The chief figure is an Adirondack "guide and contriver," as he styles himself—a philosopher of the woods who expresses himself always with laconic brevity and characteristic humor. His shy, silent courting of the woman who has waited long years for him to speak, is an original and delicately tender contribution to the literature of wooing; and the scenes in which two small children and a real dog appear are rich in humor. There is a delightful woodland maiden whose virginal romance breathes of the mountain air. The whole book is redolent of the woods in Spring.

Chatwit
The Man-talk Bird

Philip Verrill Mighels, author of "Bruvver Jim's Baby," has written another story of the West, wholly out of the way of conventional fiction. Chatwit is a magpie who learns "man-talk" while in captivity and escapes to the wilds to astonish birds and beasts alike with his weird accomplishment. There are exciting scenes in the plots of the animals who take sides with or against Chatwit.

Their Husbands' Wives

This is the initial volume of HARPER'S NOVELETTES, edited by W. D. Howells and H. M. Alden. Each of the novelettes is by a well-known writer, and, as the title subtly indicates, each story deals with the same interesting phase of married life. The writers are—Mark Twain, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps, Abby Meguire Roach, Emery Pottle, George Hibbard, and Grace Ellery Channing. They are not the ordinary short stories. Each is peculiar, and the fact of its admission to the series is a guarantee of its absorbing interest.

The Genius

A novel of stirring plot, by Margaret Potter, with a striking presentment of the artistic temperament in its most interesting phases. The story, based upon the life of a famous Russian composer, is a strange and deeply moving tale of shifting fortunes and dramatic episodes.

Miss Primrose

The romance of Miss Primrose, as told by the little boy living next door, is naive and charming in the extreme, and full of irresistible humor. Roy Rolfe Gilson is unequalled in his interpretation of child life.

MARCH

THE OUTDOOR LIFE OF WINTER.

Written for THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY REVIEW OF BOOKS by

MABEL OSGOOD WRIGHT.

WHEN the growing season is upon us the eye is constantly filled with color, and the pace set by the rapid pulsing of new life is swift, so that we can only clutch at the most compelling objects as they whirl past, while the backbone of things as well as many delicate details pass unnoticed. The drapery of leaves conceals the form of trees and vines, while flowers and luxuriant fronds of fern and other undergrowth hide the equally beautiful mosses that carpet the woods and swampy places, some clinging close to the ground and others having the bristly vigor in miniature of the pines and spruces under which they grow.

Especially is Winter the time to begin the study of trees through their general form, bark, and bud, for this form, next to that of the land, is the "reason why" of the landscape, and has had much to do in founding the schools of architecture peculiar to various countries. The gothic arch never could have been born in a land of palms, nor the Moorish type in a country of pines and slow-growing forest trees.

The Tree Book of Miss Rogers comes to us, therefore, in due season, especially in a Winter where the wood paths have been as open and inviting to walkers as in late Autumn weather. A number of excellent popular books about shrubs and trees have been published during the last ten years, ranging from the inexpensive little guide books of Knobel through Matthews's "Familiar Trees and Their Leaves," Miss Keeler's "How to Know the Trees," Alice Lounsberry's book illustrated in color, and J. Horace MacFarland's "Getting Acquainted with the Trees," the latter being especially noticeable for the broad and artistic treatment of the subjects illustrated by photography. All these volumes are of a more convenient size for carrying to the haunts of the trees, but Miss Rogers's book has a cyclopedic completeness that could hardly find scope in a smaller volume.

IN the pleasant introduction, which at once puts author and reader upon terms of intimacy, two passages are quoted from John Muir, the pure-voiced nature interpreter of the Yosemite, that put us thoroughly in harmony with the subject of tree study or comprehension—different temperaments may prefer the different terms, for, as the author says, "to know a tree's name is the beginning of acquaintance—not an end in itself. There is all the rest of one's life in which to follow it up. Tree friendships are very precious things."

> Surely nobody can find anything hard in this; even the blind must enjoy these woods, drinking in their fragrance, listening to the music of the winds in their groves, and fingering their flowers and plumes and cones and richly furrowed boles. The kind of study required is as easy and natural as breathing. * * * To learn how they live and behave in pure wildness, to see them in their varying aspects through the seasons and weather, rejoicing in the great storms, putting forth their new leaves and flowers, when all the streams are in flood, and the birds singing, and sending away their seeds in the thoughtful Indian Summer, when all the landscape is glowing in deep, calm enthusiasm—for this you must love them and live with them, as free from schemes and time as the trees themselves."

Few indeed can go apart in this way if they would, but by a careful reading of this book they may bring the forest and its many meanings nearer to their everyday lives. The technical arrangement of the subject is admirable and most practical, the volume being divided into four parts:

> Part I.—Introduction, Names of Trees, A Sketch of Tree Families, and a simple key to the chief of these, followed by fifty biographical chapters, each treating of a family—thus in order and scope: Conifers, pines, larches, spruces, hemlocks, firs, the big tree and redwood, arbor vitaes, incense cedar, cypresses, junipers, torreyas, yews, palms and palmettos, yuccas, walnuts and hickories, poplars, willows, hornbeams, birches, alders, beeches, chestnuts, oaks, elms and hackberries, mulberries, Osage orange and figs, magnolias and tulip tree, pawpaw and pond apple, laurels, and the sassafras, witch hazel, and sweet gum; sycamores, apples, mountain ashes, service berries, hawthorns, plums and cherries, pod bearers, lignum vitaes, prickly ash and hop tree, Paradise tree and ailantus, mahogany and gumbo limbo, sumachs and smoke tree, hollies, burning bush, maples, buckeyes, buckthorns, lindens, gordonias, mangroves, Hercules club, tupelos and dogwoods, rhododendrons and mountain laurel, persimmons, silver bell tree and sweet leaf, ashes and fringe tree, the catalpas, viburnums, and elders.

PART II. deals intelligently yet simply with forestry in the United States, and much of the information is of great value to those having even half a hundred trees upon their bit of ground. Profitable tree planting, the wood lot that pays, transplanting trees, how trees are multiplied, how trees are measured, the pruning of trees, the enemies of trees, are all of vital interest to the country dweller if he owns a range of woodland, an old farm, or a single acre. Part III. deals with the uses of wood, and Part IV. with the life of the trees, the work and growth of leaves, their fall, and how the tree spends the Winter. There is an appendix, in which trees are grouped in various ways, according to shape of growth, quality of soil required, flowers, fruiting, &c., and a copious index. Besides the technical information given, the book contains much of a pleasant biographical order that makes it good reading, the story of the famous Newtown pippin being an example worth quoting:

> Two centuries ago a chance seed fell near a swamp on the outskirts of the village of Newtown, R. I. A seedling tree came up and was ignored, as such trees are, until some vagrant passing by saw and tasted the first apples it bore. And the very golden apples of Hesperides they were for the village and the country side! Clons of this tree became the parents of great orchards in the Hudson River Valley. Up and down the coast among the colonies they were scattered.
> In the year 1758 Benjamin Franklin, our representative in England, received a box of Newtown pippins, and he gave some to his distinguished friend Peter Jollinson. Thus were American apples introduced with éclat to the attention of the English. The trees did poorly in English orchards, but the fruit in London markets grew in popularity. In 1845 the orchard of Robert Pell, in Ulster County, N. Y., which contained 20,000 pippin trees, yielded a crop which brought in the London market $21 per barrel. The tables of the nobility were supplied with these apples at the astonishing price of a guinea a dozen—42 cents apiece!
> And yet, almost within the memory of men now living, the old tree still stood on the edge of the swamp, and men came from far and near—even from over seas—to cut clons from the original Newtown pippin tree.

The illustrations of "The Tree Book," are in many respects very interesting, but lose a certain quality through being printed on both sides of the coated sheets; this probably having been rendered necessary in order to reduce the bulk of the volume.

The section of woods showing rough bark and the inner surface in both polished and unpolished state (evidently photographed from the splendid collection of woods presented by Morris K. Jesup to the American Museum of Natural History, though I do not find their source accredited) are frequently too small to be of value.

The colored plates, with the exception of that of the white pine facing Page 24, are unfortunate, that picturing the glory of Autumn trees reminding one of the chromos of one's extreme youth. The Mortimer Menpes press sends us such good color work from over seas—as exemplified recently in the illustrations to Miss Waterfield's "Garden Color," Alfred Austin's "The Garden That I Love," and Arthur Paterson's "Homes of Tennyson"—that we rebel at the crudity of much of our domestic "color photography." It is said to satisfy a popular demand; so be it, but it cannot further the cause of training the eye of the masses to the true value of color. It is attractive as the colored beads and bit of red cloth to the savage—to be sure it is through these elementary objects that they are finally led to appreciate proper clothing.

A FEW years ago the Clutes gave us the best, most comprehensive book that we have concerning our ferns in their haunts, and now they have accomplished a yet more difficult task, that of writing and adequately illustrating a guide to the more obscure kin of the fern tribe.

The fern allies thus treated belong to the highest order of the so-called flowerless plants, and among them are the familiar horsetails or scouring rushes that make the moist wayside look like miniature tropic jungles. The lycopodiums or club mosses also belong in this group. These are mostly evergreens, from the trailing club moss with dark green stems and forked fertile spikes, that half hide among dead leaves in low woods, to the ground pines of several species that is much sought for Christmas greens. Here we also find many of the delicate creeping plants of moist woodlands that clothe both ground and rocks with many tints of green, that the novice sums up usually under the vague word "mosses," and we may learn to remember the family name if not always the specific title of the tufts of rich, moist green in which he wraps the root of some cherished plant on the homeward trip. These mosses always bear a strange fascination with them, perhaps because of their extreme diffidence in revealing their names; nor does the lucid description of Mr. Clute make it possible for these plants to fall so glibly from the tongue that there is any fear of familiarity breeding contempt.

Among these allies may also be found the marsilia—the little plant for which Bantam Lake, Conn., is famous—having floating leaves that resemble the magic four-leaved shamrock, the quillwort and the pollwort, of both moist and running water, with threadlike roots and the round pill-like spore cases from which the name is derived.

Taken by themselves, mosses may seem intangible sort of things to the novice, but should they be suddenly stripped away and their silent haunts know them no longer, the importance of the niche they fill would at once be realized, and this feeling is embodied and given a place in literature through a little poem of Edgar Fawcett's called "Moss," beginning:

> Strange tapestry, by Nature spun
> On viewless looms, aloof from sun,
> And spread through lonely nooks and grots,
> Where shadows reign and leafy rest,
> O moss, of all your dwelling spots,
> In which one are you loveliest?

Oddly enough, it is by his poems of nature that he afterward in cynic mood would fain have disowned, that Fawcett is most likely to be remembered, and this remembrance has also a likeness to the humble moss that creeps on through cold and heat when other more showy but ephemeral blossoms wither and are forgotten.

"A GARDEN IN PINK" is an exquisite and perfect bit of bookmaking, from the dainty binding through the clear type of the 200 evenly printed pages, with their decorative borders and the India mounted photographs to the end; but having said this it is difficult to add anything in praise of the book's literary substance. This is like a box of bonbons, very pink, very sweet and monotonous in flavor, marshmallow within and rose sugar without, among which we search in vain for a single glacé nut or scrap of candied quince or ginger to relieve the cloyed palate, and finding none put down the attractive box with a sigh of disappointment. The whims and fantasies of people may be made attractive and compelling, but there must be a reasonable possibility of vital personality beneath them.

Fancy a pair (for necessarily it is Elle et Lui who are the motive powers in this garden) of sufficient age to own a garden, who even between themselves transform the name of the gardener, plain John Brown, to Giovanni Pinkolini that he may match the garden of wholly pink flowers! The male half of the motive power is called The Other One and the female The Best of All—terms suggesting American Wonder, First of All, Sutton's Satisfaction, and Philadelphia Extra Early, names of prize-winning varieties of garden peas. The mental attitude of the author speaking through The Best of All can most quickly be summed up by a single quotation from Page 113. The sister of the heroine, called the Prevaricator, possibly because she sometimes makes a sensible remark, says in crossing the lawn after having seen the pink garden: "I have loved pink always, * * * but I have just found out that I really never have known until now what pink in all its shades means.

> "It is—it is—well, there is no word to fit."
> "There wasn't any word," said I, "but there is now. I made one on purpose to supply the lack, for we need one, you know. It is so embarrassing not to be able to tell any one what the Pink Garden is."
> "Well, what is it?" asked the Prevaricator.
> "It is simply glorisplendibeautimarvelacious," said I triumphantly, but she gave me an amused look, and would not even thank me for coming to her aid in this matter.
> "You are a crazy child," said she, patronizingly.

And yet they called this person the Prevaricator! But we must not deal too harshly with a Garden in Pink, for pink in any shade is a color little suited to endure either the full light of the sun or of criticism. M. O. W.

Baron Kaneko.

The new and revised edition of David Murray's "Story of Japan," which the Putnams will publish in April, will have two chapters by Baron Kaneko—"The Russo-Japanese War and the Resources of Japan" and "Japan's Policy and Ideals, Domestic and Foreign." The history of the empire has been brought down to date by Albert White Vorse.

Publishers' Spring Moving.

A. S. Barnes & Co., the old New York publishing firm established in 1838, is moving into new quarters—11 East Twenty-fourth Street, the Metropolitan Annex Building—where the educational and general publishing departments will be located. Their printing plant is at Elizabeth, N. J.

There is a report that Charles Scribner's Sons contemplate changing their abode from Fifth Avenue to Forty-second Street, in the vicinity of the new public library building, and therefore not far from Dodd, Mead & Co., and D. Appleton & Co.

The group of publishers around Union Square—The Century Company, Baker, Taylor & Co., Brentano's, Doubleday, Page & Co., and Everybody's Magazine—will shortly be joined by Moffatt, Yard & Co., whose new offices will be at 31 East Seventeenth Street, the Jackson Building, where they will have more room for their growing business than they now have in Fourth Avenue.

Fox, Duffield & Co. have purchased the good-will, assets, plates, and entire publishing plant of Herbert S. Stone & Co., of Chicago. The latter firm succeeded in 1896 that of Stone & Kimball, founded in 1893. Among their literary "discoveries" were McCutcheon, George Ade, H. C. Taylor, and others. About two years ago they brought out the book in which one "Mary MacLane" professed to give an unbiased account of herself. The New York house was founded three years ago by R. K. Fox and Pitts Duffield. The latter received his business training with Charles Scribner's Sons, and is now manager of his firm. Mr. Fox was formerly connected with R. H. Russell.

The Wages of Success.

Mrs. Carroll Watson Rankin, author of "The Girls of Gardenville" and "Dandelion Cottage," is much besought by editors, but, nevertheless, she is "pegging away" at her sequel to "Dandelion Cottage." She has written her publishers, Henry Holt & Co., that as soon as the first note regarding this sequel appeared she received a large amount of mail. "Five clipping bureaus," she says, "wished to provide me with clippings. Three persons wanted to do my typewriting. Two yearned to criticise, revise, and punctuate my manuscript. Two dramatic agents longed to meet me some place to converse with me about dramatizing it. An enterprising stranger bespoke an autographed copy. And the book isn't written! But it will be. I have the chapters outlined, and every now and then I stuff scraps into a shoe box (a habit of mine) that is labeled 'D. C. Sequel.'"

Sixteenth-Century Wales.

A reprint of John Leland's "Itinerary in Wales," extracted from his manuscript, has been arranged and edited by Lucy Toulmin Smith, and the Macmillan Company is bringing the book out in this country. It describes traveling in Wales in or about the period from 1536 to 1539. The notes and narrative are broken in many places, owing to the fact that the manuscript has been in many hands, and, when finally collected, many pages were found to be missing. Leland was born in London in 1506, and, after going through St. Paul's and Christ's in Cambridge, went to Paris to study, and became a practiced scholar and linguist. He was Library Keeper to King Henry VIII., and later was made the "King's Antiquary." He is best known by the record of his notes and descriptions of England and Wales. He died in 1552, before finishing his work on these countries. In 1576 it was copied by John Stow, the London antiquary. The present volume contains a map of the probable routes taken by Leland on his travels.

A Book by Caruso.

A volume by the well-known Italian tenor, Signor Caruso, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, entitled "Caruso's Book," is being published by Robert Grier Cooke, Inc., and, it is reported, is already attracting much attention. It is a series of caricatures of members of the company, as well as the staff. Each caricature is colored by hand, and each copy of the book contains the signature of the singer. Signor Caruso announces that he will give the profits of the sale of the book to the Italian Benevolent Institute and its hospital. An interesting introduction has been contributed to the series of sketches by Henri Pène du Bois.

Clara Driscoll's New Book.

The tales "In the Shadow of the Alamo" the new volume by Clara Driscoll, to appear shortly through the Putnams, present aspects of Texan life and history from the early days of the Spanish conquest down to the present time. The author has woven legends and traditions into them. The book has been beautifully printed, the text being inclosed in scenes of old Texas.

POETIC EXPRESSION OF MOTHERHOOD.

Two New Compilations of Verse and an Older Book Touching the Same Subject.*

LEWIS NATHANIEL CHASE.

WITH these two books may also be grouped "Songs of Motherhood," selected by Elizabeth Johnson Huckel, (Macmillan,) which came out a little more than a year ago. It is smaller than the others, and it is more frank in stating the method of selection used. But the three are essentially alike—collections of rhymes on certain phases of domestic life, and together they furnish material for a consideration of the verse expression of motherhood in its inclusive sense.

"A Mother's Year" will make its strongest appeal undoubtedly to those women who cultivate the sweetly solemn and pious mood. Unlike the other books, it includes prose extracts. Mr. Roosevelt's approval of a passage of Scripture is given, and on another page the passage he approves of is quoted. There are other Scriptural passages quoted besides. Whether Mr. Roosevelt approves of them or not is not stated. It may be remarked at the outset, however, that he would be perfectly safe in approving of everything in the book which, from a religious point of view, is, without qualification, unobjectionable. Its title indicates its general nature, and the introduction announces that there have been "gathered together * * * bits of inspiration and cheer for each day." From nearly 200 authors of all ranks and times it is, then, a compilation of what are technically known as helpful daily thoughts. Under the circumstances it is perhaps unfortunate that a collector of short homilies should not have been more punctilious about giving credit where credit is due than by imparting the impression of anonymousness to "God thought to give the sweetest thing," (p. 190,) by J. Newell Lovejoy; "There came to port last Sunday night," (p. 8,) by George W. Cable, and "A dreary place would be this earth," (p. 62,) by one John Greenleaf Whittier.

Further exception may be taken to the plan of quoting the first and third stanza of a poem without using a sign to indicate that the second is omitted. This is done with Mr. Cable's "The Last Arrival." Throughout there are several instances of unacknowledged exclusion of two or three stanzas of a four or five stanza poem. "We Are Seven," for example, is hardly recognizable in its mutilated form. It may be claimed that giving the impression of wholeness to a part is not censurable in a calendar. At any rate, with these deductions made, and the book placed where it belongs, among semi-devotional works, it should be pleasurably received in numerous households because of its many well-chosen fragments of admirable quality. It is appropriately illustrated.

"Songs of Mother and Child" is a collection of about a hundred and fifty poems by about a hundred writers. The subdivisions are entitled "The Mother Heart," "Evening Songs," "The Father's Love," "The Child World," "Child Pictures," "Ministry," "The Empty Nest," "Ideals," and "The Long Ago." The sub-titles are apt, and satisfactorily suggest the nature of the whole. There is comparative variety in the selections.

MEDITATION on these books and their like leads into various and unexpected paths. Many an excusable essay might be written on some of the points called forth. But three, perhaps, are a little more immediate and fundamental than the rest: the nature of this poetry, and the fame and the sex of the authors.

Motherhood poetry, to be sure, is poetry that appeals to a mother as such. Whatsoever appeals to a mother as such is essentially the same from generation to generation. It follows as a matter of course that the expression of motherhood-appeal in literature should tend toward definite lines, should tend toward crystallization into a type. A perusal of these volumes leads to the inference that the type is a cross between devotional and society verse. A strange union—apparently and really incompatible, yet, judged from certain popular successes in it, not so utterly impossible as one might suppose or hope.

The most prominent note in these volumes is the religious. Great as the temptation is, it is too easy to ridicule it, too easy to point out that it is directly responsible for much decidedly inferior verse, some of which has crept into all of these collections notwithstanding their counterbalancing merits.

But ridicule would be superficial as well as supercilious, and would attempt to shun the determining factor, which is that the religious note is inherent in motherhood, and hence inherent in motherhood poetry. The fact of motherhood itself raises a woman spiritually so far above the best of men that she dwells in a world apart, she realizes the divinity of her office, and thus it is that the story of the Madonna and the Babe is lived over actually from age to age. Perhaps this accounts for the sameness of the tone in the verse, for the repetition of the imagery—the lambs, the stars, the Child in the manger—and for the prayer in the last stanza. On the other hand, in this workaday world the mother is part of the home, and herein lies the legitimacy of the vers de société note, of society or familiar verse, as it is sometimes called.

The best motherhood verse seems to belong to either of these two types in its purity, to the kind embodied in the "Cradle Song" of Isaac Watts, or in the "Little Mamma," by Charles Henry Webb. The trouble comes in the attempt to combine the society and the devotional elements. Frequently tried and supported by the practice of some widely known writers, the poem is a hybrid, nevertheless. It is represented by the short lyric which opens in a light, sometimes in a playful, manner, and ends with rhyme, but without reason, in prayer. It is false art and the masters seldom resort to it. For the professional verse writer the device is not difficult, but it is peculiarly exposed to commonplaceness and sentimentality, if not to insincerity.

THE NUMBER of contributors to these editions who are unknown to fame is noticeable, upon whose identity the biographical dictionaries of the living or the dead throw no light. There is a goodly sprinkling of anonymous verse and some of it is of surprisingly high quality. For a large part of these verses was originally published within the last quarter of a century, some of them within the last five years, and the fact that there are writers of genuine talent among us who do not yearn for publicity suggests that the ranks of modest ladies and gentlemen who are incidentally poets are not so depleted as cynics would have us believe.

There are many charming verses in "Songs of Mother and Child." The book is so conscientiously edited and well arranged that the gems are easy to find and re-find; the searching for them arouses interest, and their merit rewards the searcher. In frankness it should be added, none the less, that there are some names included that have been more successful in other departments of literature than in motherhood verse. Perhaps it would have been kinder not to challenge comparison for them with writers of less general talent who are more successful in this field. Possibly a graver qualification, however, is the absence in the list of authors of the masters of this kind of writing.

Any long list of the masters would be refuted at least in part. Any list of the real masters would be short. Not to mention others worthy of mention, there are none who in the verse expression of certain aspects of mother-life and its corollary child-life have excelled Swinburne, Blake, and Field. One other, too, demands recognition, in spite of his very few verses of this character. There is no literary exponent of parenthood who has looked at it from a mother's standpoint with greater dramatic success or who has expressed it with greater poetic power than Coleridge, whose claim was convincingly set forth in The Nation of Nov. 17, 1904. In his "American Poems" Mr. Augustus White Long truly remarks that, "It is not too much to say that nobody in American letters has surpassed Eugene Field in writing graceful, tender, and endearing verses about children."

Blake "never lost the simplicity and intensity of the child's mind that was in him," according to his latest critic. "There is nothing in all poetry like the 'Songs of Innocence.'" And Swinburne is the high priest at the altar of childhood, author of "a delicate, intimate, worshipping poesy of which the like in English is not to be found," as his latest critic has phrased it. He is represented in the "Songs of Mother and Child," although inadequately; Blake by one poem for which he gets no credit in the list of authors; Coleridge and Field not at all. It is but fair to state that "A Mother's Year" covers a wider range of authorship including extracts from these poets, but the mutilated condition of many of the selections makes them unserviceable. Praed, Prior, Herrick, the Elizabethan lullabies, to speak at random, are unrepresented in "Songs of Mother and Child." Not that it matters much, perhaps, for, as it is it is pleasant reading. But inserting one more poem of Dinah Mulock Craik than of any other writer exaggerates her importance.

THE question of deepest import, perhaps, that comes to the mind as one turns the pages is, Why is it that most of the songs of motherhood are written by men? Of the fact itself there is no doubt. Two-thirds and three-fourths of the selections in these two books, respectively, are of male authorship. In the section called "The Father's Love," "The Welcome," by Margaret E. Sangster, is the only poem out of thirteen written by a woman. It is doubtless natural that a woman should not think of imagining herself in a father's place, because it is generally admitted that her love is greater than his. On the other side, two-thirds of the selections in the section called "The Mother Heart" are by men. The inference was stated with penetrating if seemingly ungallant directness in the number of The Nation referred to above:

> A fairly discriminating florilegium * * * from the sum of English metrics would show that parentage has evoked a higher order of thought as well as of expression from the poets than parentage through maternity has from the poetesses. In other words, in a field of experience peculiarly their own, women do not seem to have been carried away by emotion, introspection, or imagination, to heights of poetic utterance unattainable by the other sex. This is at least curious.

MR. A. C. BENSON has looked out "From a College Window" and has offered a suggestive and profound explanation to this query. The fact that he extends his remarks to all art, and is not thinking of the poetry of motherhood, makes them no less apposite to our issue; rather intimates that meditating on these things leads into various and unexpected paths. Mr. Benson says:

> It is not, I think, often enough realized that the basis of the successful artistic temperament is a certain hardness combined with great superficial sensitiveness. * * * Deep below the rapid current of changing and glittering emotion there often lies, in the artistic nature, a reserve not of tenderness or depth, but of cold and critical calm. * * * Below the emotion itself there sits enthroned a hard intellectual force, a power of appraising quality, a Rhadamanthine judgment. * * * I have sometimes thought that this is in all probability the reason why women, with all their power of swift impression, of subtle intuition, have so seldom achieved the highest stations in art. It is, I think, because they seldom or never have that calm, strong egotism at the base of their natures which men so constantly have, and which, indeed, seems almost a condition of attaining the highest success in art. The male artist can believe whole-heartedly * * * in the value of what he is doing. * * * He can believe that all experience, all relations with others, all emotions, are and must be subservient to this one aim; * * * they can reveal and illustrate to him the significance of the world of which he is the interpreter. Such an aspiration * * * can lead a man to live purely and laboriously, to make sacrifices. * * * But the altar on which the sacrifice is made stands, when all is said and done, before the idol of self. But with women it is different. The deepest quality in their hearts is, one may gratefully say, an intense devotion to others, an unselfishness which is unconscious of itself, and thus their aim is to help, to encourage, to sympathize, and their artistic gifts are subordinated to a deeper purpose, the desire of giving and serving. One with such a passion in the heart is incapable of believing art to be the deepest thing in the world.

Let us shift the emphasis, return to the last few lines of the immediately preceding paragraph, and join Mr. Benson in gratefulness that such is the case.

Country Life.

The plans of Country Life in America include the following: In April it will contain articles on the ruffed grouse, trout fishing, and wild fowl. The May number will have a paper by John Burroughs dealing with bluebirds and Frank Chapman will tell how to make "A Bird Garden;" while in June the magazine will record fifty kinds of vacation on land and water. A. Radclyffe Dugmore will tell about and illustrate "The Golden Trout" of California, and various types of American houseboats will be described.

Books in Demand.

The circulating department of the New York Public Library reports the following books most in demand during the week ended March 14: Adult fiction—Ellen Glasgow's "The Wheel of Life," Hichens's "The Garden of Allah," Jacobs's "Captains All." Juvenile fiction—Lang's "Crimson Fairy Book," Barbour's "Half Back;" Alcott's "Little Women." Miscellaneous—Van Dyke's "Little Rivers," Irving's "The Alhambra," Wilkins's "Mrs. Fitzherbert and George IV."

The Double Spring Planting Number of The Garden Magazines.

Ready to-day, will tell you how to make your garden and grounds beautiful and productive this year; it contains complete planting tables for the proper sowing of seed and for putting out of plants—so explicit as to be a revelation to you. All the information so necessary to have at one's finger ends is accessible at a glance. This number we believe is one of the most important issues of the kind ever published in this country. 84 pages superbly illustrated. At all newsstands, 25 cents a copy.

This number with the double Fall Planting Number in October, each selling for 25 cents on the newsstands, are included in a year's subscription at $1.00. This blank is appended for your convenience.

W. H. H., Waynesville, N. C.—Kindly advise where I can buy the autobiography of William Hayley, also his biography of Cowper. What else did he write besides his poems?

You cannot buy either Hayley's autobiography or his biography of Cowper except by chance. The first, in two volumes, edited by John Johnson, was published in 1823; the second in 1803. Hayley's works were: "The Afflicted Father," a tragedy, 1770; "The Syrian Queen," translated from Corneille's "Rodogune," 1771; "Ode to Cheerfulness," 1775; "Poetical Epistle on Marriage," 1775; "Epistle on History," 1780; "Poetical Epistle to Admiral Keppel," 1779; "An Ode to Howard the Philanthropist," 1780; "An Essay on Painting," 1781; "Triumphs of Temper," 1781; an "Elegy on the Ancient Greek Model," 1783; "Poetical Epistles on Epic Poetry," 1782; "Plays of Three Acts," 1784; "Poetical Works," 1785; "Philosophical, Historical, and Moral Essay on Old Maids," 1785; "Occasional Stanzas," 1788; "Les Préjugés Abolis," in French, 1790; "Life of Milton," 1794; "An Elegy on the Death of Sir William Jones," 1795; "An Essay on Sculpture," 1800; "Life of Cowper," 1803; "Triumphs of Music," 1804; "Ballads Founded on Anecdotes of Animals," 1805; "Life of Romney," 1809; "Three Plays With a Preface," 1811. He died in 1820, aged 75 years.

W. E. U.—What can you tell me of Henry Chettle, a contemporary of Shakespeare, author of "Kinde Harte's Dream," and of whom, in a brief biographical reference, it is said that he assisted at the writing of 200 plays? After the death of Greene and Marlowe he printed what is alleged to have been a vindication of Shakespeare in answer to certain allusions contained in "A Groat's Worth of Wit."

Chettle, according to Mr. Bullen, who is an authority on the Elizabethan and Jacobean dramatists, died not later than 1607. He wrote thirteen plays alone and thirty-five with other men. He was a man of a "full habit of body," and seems to have had a daughter Mary, who predeceased him by some twelve years. Very little is known of him personally.

L. B. S., Sandusky, Ohio.—I want to find the following poems, also to know the writers' names: "The Maniac," which is a drunkard's story, and "The Sculptor."

"The Maniac" seems to be by Matthew Gregory Lewis ("Monk Lewis") or by C. B. Beede. Lewis's version is in "Choice Selections," Part IV; Beede's in "Werner's Readings," Part XIX. "The Sculptor" is by G. W. Doane, Bishop of Albany, and is in "Open Sesame," Part I., and "A Year of Beautiful Thoughts."

LE ROY THOMAS.—Kindly let me know the names of the editors of the following magazines: Atlantic, Century, Cosmopolitan, Harper's, Critic, Everybody's, Munsey's, McClure's, Scribner's, Strand, and Collier's.

PRATT, 161 SIXTH AV.—FLAGELLATION, Apuleius, Catullus, Ovid, Suetonius, Petronius, Moll Flanders; any book.

Atlantic Monthly, Bliss Perry; Century, Richard Watson Gilder; Cosmopolitan, Bailey Millard; Harper's, Henry M. Alden; Critic, Jeannette M. Gilder; Everybody's, John Cosgrave; Munsey's, Frank Munsey; McClure's, S. S. McClure; Scribner's, E. L. Burlingame; The Strand, H. Greenhough Smith; Collier's, Norman Hapgood.

D. C., Baltimore.—Will you be kind enough to tell me the name and something of the life of the author of "The Martyrdom of an Empress" and the recent novel, entitled "The Trident and the Net"? Are there other works by the same writer?

The author is Margaret Cunliffe-Owen. She was connected with the Court of the late Empress of Austria; she is now married to Frederick Cunliffe-Owen, with whom she lives on Staten Island. Besides the books you name she and her husband write the "Marquise de Fontenoy" letters which appear in so many newspapers, and she has written "Imperator et Rex," (William II.;) "The Keystone of Empire," (Francis Joseph;) "Secret Memoirs of the Courts of Europe," Vols. XI. and XII.

H. V. P., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—I have often seen the words, "A poor thing, Sir, but mine own," given as a quotation, and have always supposed it was a misquotation of Touchstone's, "An ill-favored thing, Sir, but mine own." But I read the same words in Birrell's recent book, "At the Sign of the Bodleian," and I cannot believe he misquotes. Will you be so kind as to state whether there is authority for the first form, and where it is to be found in the original use?

Birrell's book, by the way, is "In the Name of the Bodleian." We find no original for "A poor thing;" as you say, Shakespeare's original is "An ill-favored thing." The version you question seems to be sanctioned by use; there are many other quotations better known in their misuse than in their correct form—"When Greek meets Greek, then comes the tug of war," for example.

D. M., Philadelphia—Is there a monograph on Cornelius Tiebout, an early American engraver, or where can I find full information about him and his work?

There is no monograph on Tiebout, and we think it will be a long time before one is issued. You will not find him mentioned in the dictionaries of engravers, but in the "Cyclopaedia of American Biography" you will find about 100 words referring to him.

KARL SCHNEIDER—1. Is it true that Burton's "Arabian Nights" were suppressed in England? If so, why? 2. How many volumes must a complete "Arabian Nights" published by Kamashostra Society have? 3. Is the same a story or romance or description of Eastern people or what else?

1. The book was published by subscription in 1885-7, and was not suppressed. It is in ten volumes, with a supplement of five. 2. Ten volumes. 3. The "Arabian Nights" is a collection of stories of the East, Persian, not Arabian, as a rule, connected by a thread of story, which tells how a Sultana kept her husband interested for three years, so that he did not have her put to death, as he had intended.

H. F. EDWARDS—It is said of Lincoln that he studied the "great English classics." Will you please tell me what they are?

The King James version of the Bible, Shakespeare, Addison, "Robinson Crusoe," Franklin's autobiography, Bunyan's "Pilgrim's Progress," were what Lincoln read. There are other English classics.

J. B. R., New York.—Having been told that a small book I have in my library is a literary curiosity, I shall be obliged if you can tell me if you agree with my informant. The book is entitled "Buonaparte's Voyage to St. Helena. Comprising the Diary of Rear Admiral Sir George Cockburn During His Passage from England to St. Helena in 1815, from the Original Manuscript in the Handwriting of His Private Secretary. Boston. Lilly, Wait, Colman & Holden. 1833." The introduction by the publishers states that the manuscript came into the hands of a connection of the said private secretary living in Boston, and that only one other copy was in existence, and that it was not published in England for reasons of state.

We do not find this book mentioned, and think that it must have been a fake from the start, with an untrue introduction to help it along.

THOMAS NELSON, New York.—Who wrote the Bridgewater Treatises?

They were treatises directed to be written and published by the Rev. Francis Henry Egerton, eighth Earl of Bridgewater; he left £8,000 for eight such works, "On the Power, Wisdom, and Goodness of God as Manifested in the Creation." The President of the Royal Society chose the writers: Thomas Chalmers, D. D.; John Kidd, M. D.; William Whewell, D. D.; Sir Charles Bell; Peter Mark Roget; William Buckland, D. D.; the Rev. William Kirby; William Prout, M. D. They were published separately, and have been republished often together.

H. LEE SELLERS, New York.—I wish to know where I can find some verses the first verse of which is as follows:

"Better than grandeur, better than gold,
Than rank or title a thousandfold,
Is a healthy body, a mind at ease,
And simple pleasures that always please."

"Better than Gold" is the title of the poem, which was by Alexander Smart, and is in "Harper's School Speaker," Vol. II.; "Beacon Lights of Patriotism," and the "Lincoln Literary Collection." The original has been lengthened by Mrs. J. M. Winton, and her version is in "Choice Selections," Part II., and in the "Delsarte Speaker."

We omit the stories of any living authors. Homer's "Odyssey" might be called a sea story, but here are more recent ones: "Robinson Crusoe," Two Years Before the Mast," (fact;) "The Swiss Family Robinson," "The Pilot" and "The Red Rover," "Tom Cringle's Log," "Peter Simple," "Moby Dick," "Midshipman Easy," and "Peter, the Whaler."

D. K., New York.—I have a copy of the first English edition of Mungo Park's travels in South Africa, dated 1799; also a small book published in Philadelphia containing plays written by Maria Edgeworth, dated 1817. What would you say their present value is?

There is no especial value for Park's book; it has never sold for more than $5. Miss Edgeworth's plays are in similar case.

S. HAUBEN.—Kindly inform me if there has been published a tenth edition of the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The ninth is the last edition. Some eight years ago The Times of London added a supplement of eleven volumes to the twenty-four of the ninth edition, and sold the thirty-five as the tenth edition.

A. S.—Can you tell me something of the bibliography of Whistler's "Gentle Art of Making Enemies" and the present value of the various editions, especially the large paper edition issued at Chelsea in 1890?

"The Gentle Art of Making Enemies" was published at Chelsea in 1890, in a large paper edition and an ordinary edition. It was republished in this country—possibly "pirated"—in two forms, ordinary edition, $2, and "de luxe" at $10. It was reprinted in England in 1890 in quarto, and in Paris the same year in quarto. In this country it was reprinted in 1904 in octavo. A copy of the large paper edition sold for 5 guineas two years ago, of the small paper for about $6, of the second edition from $8 to $40, of the Paris edition $5. The American editions do not bring high prices.

FIREPLACES—Is there any book giving drawings and sections of chimney flues to show the proper construction for avoiding smokiness on the Count Rumford plan?

William W. Christie has written two books on chimneys and fireplaces, which are published ($3 each) by the Van Nostrand Company of this city. A book on "House Chimneys" was published (at 25 cents) by the D. Williams Company, 238 William Street, this city.

FREDERICK—Where may I find Mrs. Alexander's "Burial of Moses"?

In Bliss Carman's "The World's Best Poetry," and in almost any other collection of modern poems.

W. E. GOFF—Kindly let me know what the sentence of the Wandering Jew was, and who he was.

The sentence was "I go, but thou shalt remain waiting until I return." The Jew is called variously Cartaphilus, doorkeeper to Pilate; Ahasuerus, a shoemaker; Joseph; Michob Ader; Butadaeus; Isaac Laquedem.

R. N. H.—Can you give me the exact date of the first message sent over the Atlantic cable—I mean over the final and successful line? Also the name of the sender of the message!

Field's "History of the Atlantic Telegraph" gives no account of the first message sent over the cable of 1866, nor of that sent over the recovered cable in 1868.

W. McBRIDE, Rutherford, N. J.—Can you tell me where I can find the verse containing the following lines:

"Maintain thy rank, vulgarity despise;

Crocott's "Familiar Quotations," an English book, contains these lines, describing them as "Anonymous, from Adams's Quotations." Adams was H. G. Adams, an Englishman. The lines seem by their sound to date back to Pope's time or thereabout.

G. W. ATWELL, Lima, N. Y.—If "H. C. B.," Carbondale, Penn., will read the twenty-eighth line of Book VII. of Wordsworth's "Excursion" he will find, "Deposited upon the silent shore of memory," &c.

Appeals to Readers.

J. O. M., St. Catharine's Ontario—I have an old book, folio, bound in parchment, entitled "Plusieurs Descriptions des Accoustremens tant des Magistrats et Officiers de la Porte de l'Empereur des Turcs, que des peuples asaujectis a son Empire." The second part of the volume is entitled "Tableaux Prophetiques des Empereurs severe et bon avec leurs Epigrammes predisans la ruine de la Monarchie des Turcs." This second title page has at the foot "Par Artus Thomas, sieur d'Embry Parisien." The book contains no printed date of publication, but has a mark that looks at first sight like M L, but may be M D L, the D being hardly distinguishable. Can you tell me anything about this book, as to its date and approximate value? The wood cuts seem to me particularly fine.

Z. T. F.—I should like to find the article which answers the following description:

About 1882 there appeared in many of the newspaper weekly editions an allegory representative of the lives of certain people—one in particular, about whom the narrative centres, being a priest, who finds himself in a cavern where there are passageways and at intervals niches with lamps in them, burning with varying degrees of brightness. In answer to his wondering query an angel conducts him from one to another of the lamps, telling him of the qualities, good or indifferent, of the person the lamp before him represents. Finally the priest asks to see his own representation, and is much cast down to find that it presents a comparatively dim appearance.

E. HEATH.—Can you inform me where I can procure the poem of which the following is a verse:

"A fire mist and a planet, a crystal and a Celt,
A jellyfish and a saurian, and caves where the cave men dwelt;
Man looking up to beauty, far from the soulless clod;
Some call it evolution, others call it God?"

Also the name of the author?

W. H., New York.—A very readable book is entitled "The Old Plantation and What I Gathered There." It is a vivid picture of life on the Lower Maryland Chesapeake in 1832, purports to be written by "James Hungerford of Maryland," and is dedicated to his mother, "Sophia W. Hungerford." It was published in 1859. The author apparently was a lawyer of Baltimore, but inquiry there reveals nothing of his life, &c. Who was he? The books seem to be quite scarce. Can you give me any information about Mr. Hungerford?

A. J. B., Melrose, Mass.—I am very anxious to find the name and author of a book which has Allen Cunningham's poem at the end or very near the end; the poem is "Hame, Hame, Hame," and the last line, "At hame in my ain countrie." Can you find it?

THE PUBLISHERS.

The Essays "From a College Window" to Appear in Book Form—A New Book by McCutcheon—Notes from the Presses.

AN interesting announcement is made by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Upon the title page of the volume of essays entitled "From a College Window," which have appeared in The Cornhill Magazine, by the author of "The Upton Letters," anonymously presented several months ago, will appear the name of the writer, Arthur C. Benson of Magdalena College, Cambridge, a well-known English man of letters, eldest son of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, and brother of E. F. Benson, author of "Dodo," "Mammon & Co.," &c. Besides the papers that have already appeared there will be six new ones in the volume. It will present the author's ideals in life and his expectations.

Dodd, Mead & Co. have down for publication March 28 George Barr McCutcheon's "Cowardice Court," Max Pemberton's "My Sword for Lafayette," Beatrice Harraden's "The Scholar's Daughter," Miss H. A. Guerber's "How to Prepare for Europe," and Burton E. Stevenson's "The Girl with the Blue Sailor." This last book, dealing with the results of a vacation spent in the Catskills, is entirely different from the author's popular detective stories, "The Holladay Case" and "The Marathon Mystery." Its illustrations, by Mrs. Ditzler, and its decorations by C. B. Falls, have been printed in two colors.

In about a fortnight Volume VI., completing "The English Dialect Dictionary," will make its appearance through the Putnams. The work has been edited by Prof. Joseph Wright of the University of Oxford. It aims to provide a complete vocabulary of all dialect words still in use or known to have been in use in the last two centuries.

The Japanese in peace forms the central figure in "A Summer in the Apple Tree Inn," by Mrs. Ella S. P. Lipsett, which Henry Holt & Co. announce for the end of the month. The Jap is a servant of some New England children. He tells Japanese legends and describes native scenes. A feature of the book is an outdoor play for children.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co. are publishing this week the 1906 edition of Dr. W. J. Rolfe's "Satchel Guide to Europe," a feature of which is the colored maps. The book has been brought up to date.

A new and revised edition of Dr. Christian A. Herter's, of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, "Diagnosis of Organic Nervous Diseases," is being brought out by G. P. Putnam's Sons. Many chapters have been entirely rewritten.

Little, Brown & Co. will publish next month "The Wire Tappers," the new novel by Arthur Stringer. The hero is an electrical inventor, the heroine a beautiful English girl. Both become associated with a man who attempts by wire-tapping to beat the poolroom.

"The Meaning of Good," the latest book by G. Lowes Dickinson, author of "Letters from a Chinese Official," &c., is now being issued by McClure, Phillips & Co.

Besides the regular edition of Leon H. Vincent's "American Literary Masters," Houghton, Mifflin & Co. are bringing out 100 copies in a special uncut style, with paper label. They announce for March 31 Miss Eugenia B. Frothingham's "The Evasion," with a portrait by Joseph Lindon Smith, who has been exhibiting in Boston a collection of paintings done in Egypt.

Miss Clara Morris's reminiscent stories, "The Life of a Star," will be published in book form before the end of Spring by McClure, Phillips & Co.

Little, Brown & Co. are bringing out the American edition of Major William Wood's "The Fight for Canada," with numerous portraits, colored maps, and a bibliography.

The Macmillan Company announces that it will publish Egerton Castle's new story, "If Youth But Knew," April 2. The scenes are laid among the Thuringian Mountains, in that little kingdom in Germany given by Napoleon to his brother Jerome under the name "Royaume de Westphalie."

The first of the series of articles on "The Railways of the Future" will appear in the April Scribner. It will be on "The Pan-American Railway," by Charles M. Pepper, United States and Pan-American Railway Commissioner. The article has been written from the industrial and engineering, as well as the "human," points of view.

The John Lane Company is preparing for issue in this country shortly a crown octavo of a series of 150 plates showing in their original colors "Asian Carpet Designs of the XVI. and XVII. Centuries from the Jaipur Palaces." The work has been divided into six parts of twenty-five plates each, and printed by W. Griggs. The text, by Col. T. H. Hendley, is to be surrounded with a sixteenth century Persian border in eight colors and gold. Among the designs to be reproduced are those of the carpets of the Maharaja of Jaipur and the Ardabil carpet in the Victoria and Albert Museum in London.

Constantin Meunier, the late Belgian sculptor, who made a specialty of statues of the working people, will form the subject of the article by Christian Brinton, the well-known art critic and connoisseur, in the next issue of The Century. It will be illustrated with examples of the work of "the Millet of sculptors."

Doubleday, Page & Co. are bringing out a uniform edition of Ellen Glasgow's important novels, including "The Wheel of Life," "The Voice of the People," "The Battleground," and "The Deliverance."

Herbert Paul has a paper in the current Independent Review of London on Lord Randolph Churchill, a biography of whom has recently been published by his son through the Macmillan Company. Another interesting contribution in this issue is by Miss Marjorie Strachey on "Shakespeare at the Theatre Antoine."

Part VII. of James Watson's "The Dog Book," dealing with terriers, is appearing this week from Doubleday, Page & Co. Part VIII. will be issued March 24, and will be devoted to mastiffs, St. Bernards, Newfoundlands, and Great Danes.

A. S. Barnes & Co. expect to bring out in April the new novel by Joseph C. Lincoln, author of "Cap'n Eri" and "Partners of the Tide." It is entitled "Mr. Pratt." The principal character helps two Wall Street men and their valet to lead the "natural life," with an astonishing result. The book is full of humor and funny misunderstandings, and is said to be as simple as "Cap'n Eri."

The forthcoming number of Scribner's will publish an article by William B. Boulton on the well-known English etcher, Sir Francis Seymour Haden, who, although 88, is very active and President of the Royal Society of Painter-Etchers. Another interesting article in the same issue will be devoted to Fenimore Cooper, and will be from the pen of the well-known literary critic, W. C. Brownell.

The "Almain Armourer's Album," containing numerous colored plates from original manuscripts in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, reproduced and printed by W. Griggs, chromo-lithographer of King Edward VII., is shortly to be issued in this country by the John Lane Company. An introduction and descriptive notes have been provided by Viscount Dillon, F. S. A.

"The Upper Hand" is the title under which Prof. Emerson G. Taylor's novel, originally announced as "The Secret of a Night," will be published by A. S. Barnes & Co. in May. In a New England village squire's house a tragedy was enacted one night. Later, a pirate appears on the scene and strange sights are witnessed in the village.

D. Appleton & Co. announce that, following the appearance this week of Robert Barr's "The Triumphs of Eugene Valmont," there will issue "The False Gods," by George Horace Lorimer.

"The Waters of Venice" will be described in the April Scribner by Arthur Symons. Some colored pictures have been made for the paper by Maxfield Parrish.

"The Privateer" is the title of H. B. Marriott Watson's new romance which will appear with the imprint of Doubleday, Page & Co. before the Summer. It deals with the adventures of two fortune-hunting Americans who abduct a British heiress.

Very shortly the John Lane Company will send out "The Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colors," as a special number of The International Studio. It will comprise forty colored plates and an account of the institute by A. Lys Baldry. There will be a limited edition of the volume, which will be a quarto in size.

The following figures regarding some of their recent publications are furnished by Doubleday, Page & Co.: The twenty-eighth edition of Thomas Dixon's "The Leopard's Spots" has been put to press. It has reached a sale of 130,000 copies. A second large edition of Julia E. Rogers's "Tree Book" is being printed; a new edition is already appearing of Upton Sinclair's story of the Chicago stockyards, "The Jungle." An edition of E. C. Hooper's "The Country House," it is added, will shortly make its appearance in England.

James Barnes, editor of Appleton's Booklovers' Magazine, who has been ill for some weeks, has returned to his office. As has already been stated in these columns Mr. Trumbull White, editor of The Red Book of Chicago, will succeed Mr. Barnes as editor of The Booklovers'. Mr. White will come to New York in May to take charge of the magazine, and Mr. Barnes will then return to his regular work in the editorial department of D. Appleton & Co.

PAGES IN WAITING.

A COUPLE of theological books are to be issued next week by G. P. Putnam's Sons. One, in the Crown Theological Library, is "Jesus," by Prof. W. Bousset of the University of Göttingen, translated by Janet P. Trevelyan, and the other, in the Theological Translation Library, is "St. Paul: The Man and His Work," by Prof. H. Weinel of the University of Jena, translated by the Rev. G. A. Bienemann. Both are edited by the Rev. Dr. W. D. Morrison.

Jesus and His Apostle Paul.

Prof. Bousset treats in the three parts of his small book of the "outward" course of the life of Jesus and the forms of His activity, His teaching, and "The Mystery of the Person." He writes of the character of Jesus and His relations with contemporary rabbinism and essenism, of Jesus as a preacher, His Disciples and opponents, His conception of God, His moral teaching, of Jesus and the Messiahship, and of Jesus as the "Son of Man." He sets forth his own conclusions in the final chapter of the book, in the course of which he writes:

> I believe that we shall be nearer the spirit of Jesus if we wholly abandon * * * specialized views of His death. For us His suffering, crucifixion, and death are the crown and consummation of His life. * * * The cross and the crown of thorns do but complete His figure and lift it far above those of the other founders of religions. * * * Leader of the ages and nations to God—for death and the grave could not hold His person and His spirit.

Prof. Weinel in his book attempts to show St. Paul not in his outward appearance, but as the "true" soldier of the Cross. He presents him as the Pharisee, the seeker after God, the prophet, the apostle of Christ, the rounder of the Church, the theologian, and the man. Speaking of Nietzsche's criticisms of Paul, Prof. Weinel shows how wrong are the theologian's conceptions of the Apostle.

C. S. Parnell in His Sister's Eyes.

"A Patriot's Mistake" is the title of the volume of reminiscences of the Parnell family prepared by Mrs. Emily Monroe Dickinson, "a daughter of the house." The volume traces "some of the principal events which would gratify the natural desire of the reading public to know something, from a personal source, of a family that had become so famous, some of whom were so tragically unfortunate in the issues of their lives." It has been Mrs. Dickinson's intention to "lift to some extent the veil of proud reserve that wrapt the spirit" of her brother, the celebrated "agitator," Charles Stewart Parnell.

Mrs. Dickinson shows Parnell's political views from his youngest days onward, especially as they were revealed in the naming of horses, &c. None but Nationalist titles would suit him, and, when his sister's horse, Royal, died suddenly, he declared that she had no luck with the horses named for the royal family, though, she says, the facts were just the opposite. Following Parnell's incarceration at Kilmainham as a "suspect," and his acquittal, in five months, he was "more idolized by the people," and £49,000 was subscribed by the "grateful nation" to carry on "the cause." It was about this time, it may be remembered, that Parnell figured as co-respondent in the O'Shea divorce case. Mrs. Dickinson writes that appearances were really against the "agitator," for he did nothing in word or act to bring about the events which resulted in his downfall, and, eventually, his death. And she tells the true story of the "affaire." The book is to be published by the John Lane Company.

In the Land of Blackmore.

Although many pictorial editions of R. D. Blackmore's novels have made us more or less familiar with the country of which he writes, admirers of the novelist will now enjoy these pictures with others added, and all interpreted by a writer intimately acquainted with them. The Macmillan Company is publishing "The Blackmore Country," by F. J. Snell, author of "A Book of Exmoor," &c., with half a hundred full-page half-tone illustrations from photographs taken by C. W. Barnes Ward. The "Land" described in the book, with which Blackmore was wholly identified, is that portion of Devonshire lying between Exmoor and Barnstaple and between Lynton and Tiverton. Here, Mr. Snell writes, Blackmore "reigns supreme—and naturally, for this was his homeland, which, through all its length and breadth, he knew with an intimacy, and loved with a devotion and portrayed with a skill, that will surely never again be the portion of any child of Devon."

The book has been divided according to Blackmore's novels, and descriptions are given in turn of the scenes of "Perlycross," "Lorna Doone," and "The Maid of Sker." There are pictures and accounts of Blackmore's village, his school, the place where Master Huckaback throve, the mouth of the Lyn, the forge of Faggus, and the curé of Chowne, the Shore of Death, &c. After going through all these places, Mr. Snell tells how the traveler may return to where he started, describing small, interesting sights by the way.

The introduction, or "Epilogue," as the author calls it, deals briefly with the family and early life of Blackmore, the relations of the novelist to his native land, and his accounts of himself and his novels.

The volume is in the Pilgrimage Series, which includes descriptions of the lands of Scott, Burns, Thackeray, Hardy, and others, by such writers as W. S. Crockett, Lewis Melville, Charles G. Harper, &c.

The Life of the Future.

The authorized English translation of M. Louis Elbé's "La Vie Future Devant la Sagesse Antique et la Science Moderne," is being issued here by A. C. McClurg & Co. of Chicago under the title, "The Future Life in the Light of Ancient Wisdom and Modern Science." The volume is believed to provide for the first time a complete authentic evidence concerning the survival of the soul. The author presents the discoveries, theories, and ideas of the greatest investigators as well as his own views and comments. In addition, the beliefs of the ancient races—Cannibals, Greenlanders, Siamese, American Indians, Chinese, Egyptians, Hindus, Chaldeans, Gauls, Jews, Greeks, Romans, early Christians, &c.—are set forth. The book is divided into two parts, the first dealing with the future life in the light of ancient wisdom and the second with modern science. In the course of his final chapter M. Elbé speaks of what science has done in bringing before the minds of the people the idea of the survival:

> All that it is permissible for us to conceive is that it [the soul] may preserve the moral progress which it has realized in the course of earthly existence. Probably it yet retains feelings of desire and suffering, since the astral element which it carried with it alone possesses sensitivity, which we erroneously attribute to the physical body; and thus, maybe, it reaps chastisement for its excessive love of the things of carnal life. For henceforth it is impotent to gratify the needs and longings which survive in it together with the astral body. Doubtless this punishment is destined to endure as long as this semi-material envelope. Crude and vague as this conception may appear, it is perhaps the only one which can afford us an approximate notion of what life may be in those places of correction which we call purgatory and hell.

Angling and Hunting in California.

Charles Frederick Holder, the well-known American sportsman, has been busy not only in his favorite pursuits—angling, hunting, and rambling—but also in his literary work. He has completed two books on sport, one of which, "The Log of a Sea Angler," is published this week by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., and presents stories of fishing during forty years. The other, "Life in the Open," is to come from the Putnams before the end of the month. In it the author describes life in Southern California, where Mr. Holder resides. His book chronicles the adventures of a naturalist and the experiences of a sportsman. Mr. Holder relates many exciting incidents, besides providing interesting bits of information concerning the social life in that part of the State and its flora and fauna.

The numerous chapters describe the exciting quests with horse and hound in search of lynx and jack rabbit; the hunting of deer among the rocky cañons; the haunts of the water fowl on the coast and of the quail in the hills, and, as in his "Log of a Sea Angler," Mr. Holder has a separate chapter on tuna fishing. He relates the story of how he caught a giant tuna with the usual rod and reel. This experience lasted for hours, in the course of which the big fish towed his little launch twelve miles.

While the volume on "Life in the Open" deals exclusively with Southern California, the "Log" contains descriptions of fishing experiences in different parts of the country. Mr. Holder spent nearly six years, Winter and Summer, on the Florida reefs, and made the most of his time.

Both books are profusely illustrated with pictures of game, sporting incidents, and natural scenery.

Ancient Sicilian Coins.

The "Coins of Ancient Sicily" are described in the volume on the subject, which the John Lane Company is about to bring out, by G. F. Hill of the Department of Coins, British Museum, and author of "A Handbook of Greek and Roman Coins," &c. The book is profusely illustrated, there being sixteen collotype plates and eighty pictures in the text. The long introduction gives a brief sketch of Sicilian history down to the beginning of the Imperial period, with special reference to coinage.

The book has been written to "whet the appetite" of those interested in coinage or purposing to visit Sicily. There are chapters on the earliest coinage, that of the period from Himera to the Assinarus, down through the decline and to Tiberius. In an appendix are some remarks on the coinage of the Maltese group of islands and Pantellaria. A bibliography has been inserted as well as an English index to subjects and a Greek index.

FOLLY

By EDITH RICKERT, Author of "THE REAPER" $1.50

A strong, thoroughly well written novel. The charm of the high-spirited "Folly," the surrender of her husband, and the suffering of the other man, furnish a problem which is provoking endless controversy.

The Mail and Times:—"It will be much discussed, for it is original in theme and treatment—more daring than any other recent novel of merit."

Baltimore News:—"A book that is vital, thrilling and human. The charm of this high-spirited, selfish, beautiful woman grips you."

N. Y. Globe:—"Edith Rickert scores again. Is this another 'Divine Fire?'"

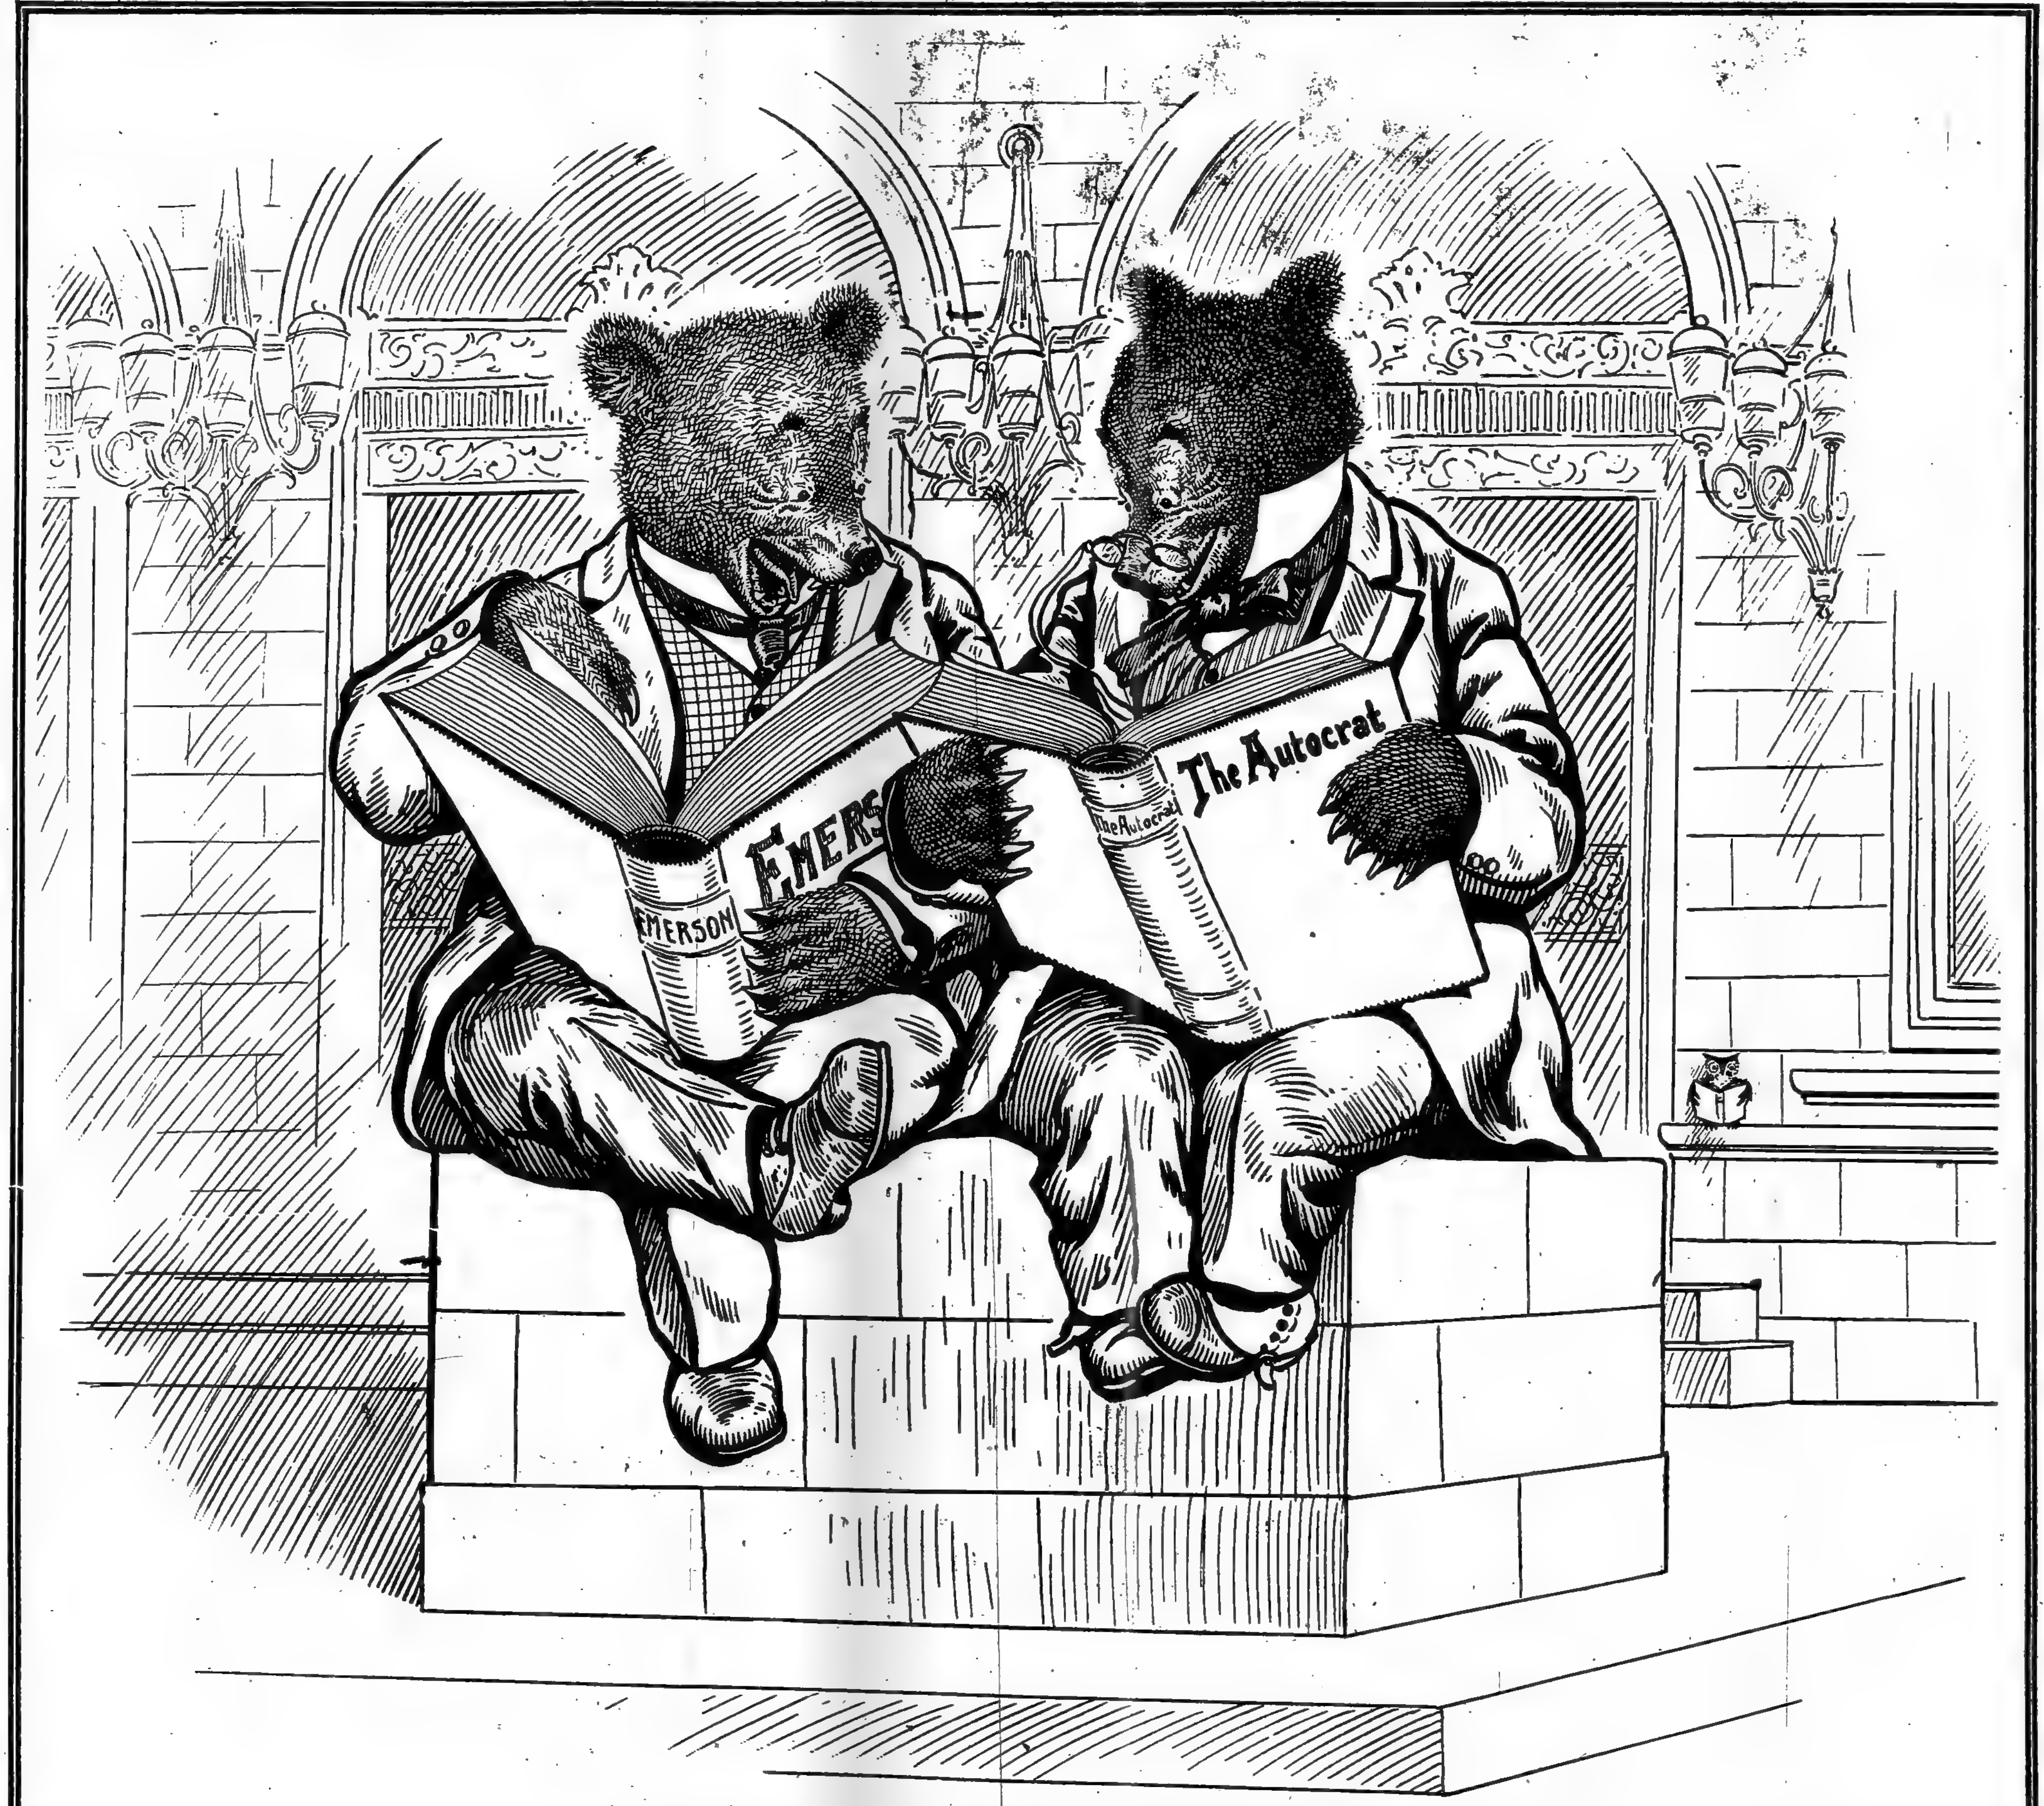
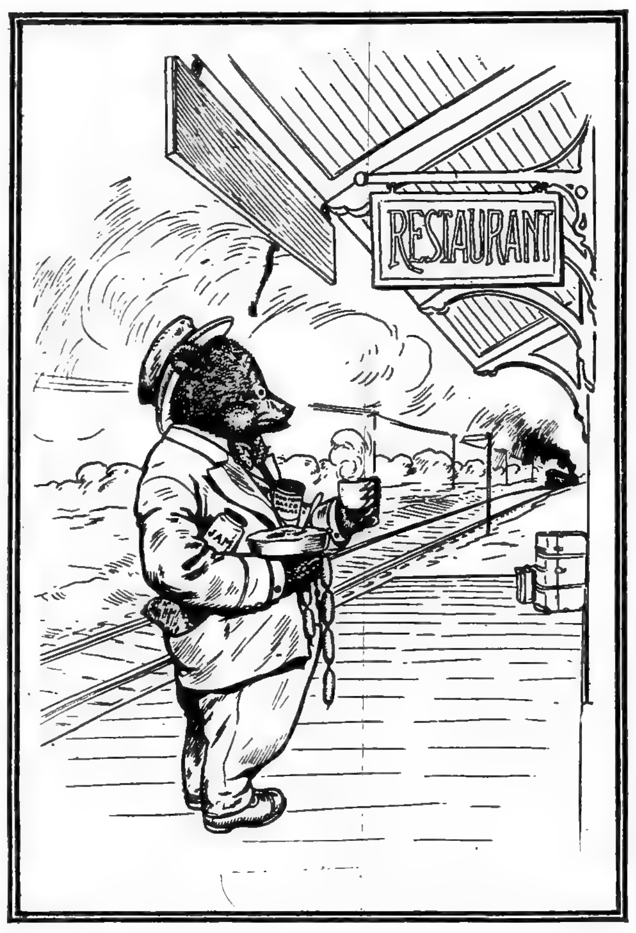
XI. THE BEARS ARRIVE IN BOSTON



"They took the books and down they sat to study Emerson and the Autocrat."

The news was telegraphed ahead
That the Bears were tired and had gone to bed.
The crowds at stations saw the two
At the sleeper windows peeking through,
Nodding at children left and right
Who traveled miles and stayed up all night
To see the car of the train at least
Which carried the Bears on their journey East.

Things went well till half-past six
When the Roosevelt Bears got in a mix.
The train had stopped at a little town
When TEDDY—G stepped out and down
And across the platform to a stand
Where folks eat breakfast from their hand.
He ordered steak, well-done, and ham,
And a chicken pie and toast with jam,
And fried potatoes and coffee hot,
And Boston baked beans in a pot.
The waiter nearly had a fit
But he placed the order bit by bit
While TEDDY—G stood by and read
The things the morning paper said.
Meanwhile the train had gone ahead
To another town at a lively rate
Where TEDDY—B who had risen late
Got a telegram from his traveling mate
Which read this way: "I'm off my trolley;
I'm left behind; my breakfast's jolly;
Get off yourself and wait for me;
Let the train go on," signed "TEDDY—G."
"He's off his trolley, sure enough,"
Said TEDDY—B, a little gruff.



The porter was asked by TEDDY—B,
As he tossed him over a good sized fee,
To get his baggage and fasten tags
On trunks and canes and traveling bags,
And to deliver all to an address he wrote
From directions given in a dainty note
Which reached him from a little Miss,
When in Chicago and which read like this:
"Dear Roosevelt Bears: Papa says I may
Invite you both to come and stay
With us at home three days and nights
When you come to Boston to see the sights."
Her address she gave on Beacon Hill,
And a postscript said her brother Will
Would meet the train if they'd let him know
The railroad line and the time to go.
The note was signed down at the end:
"Priscilla Alden; your little friend."
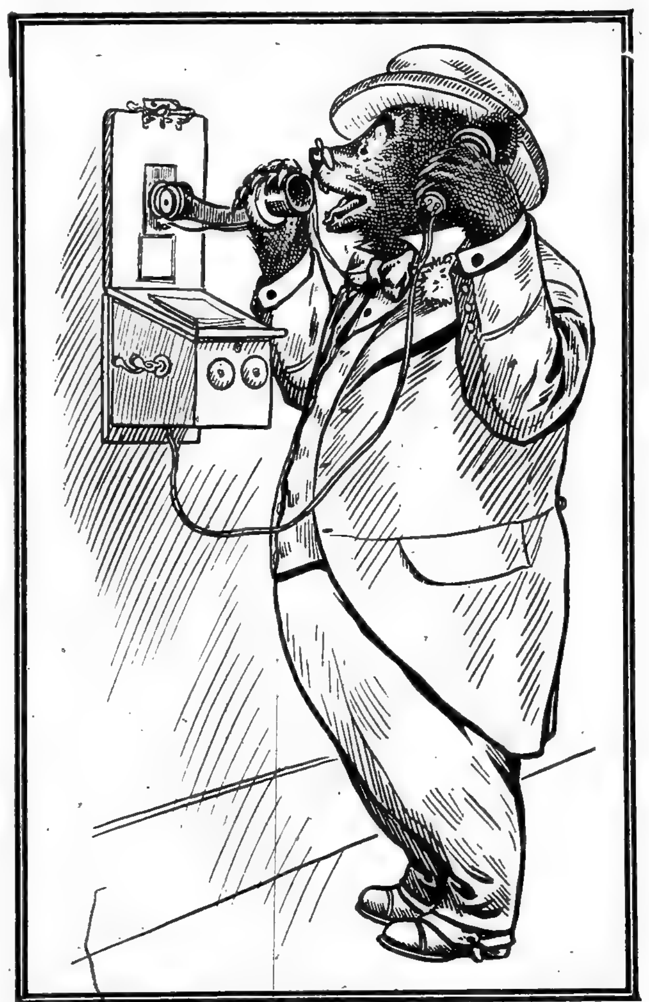
The porter thanked him for the fee:
"I'm sorry to leave you here," said he;
"I'll deliver the baggage as you say,
And tell Priscilla of the delay."
The train was off and TEDDY—B
Was left twelve miles from TEDDY—G.



TEDDY—G was called on a telephone
With a loud "Hello" in an angry tone,
And told to hire a wheel and see
If he could cover the distance to TEDDY—B
By nine o'clock; the road was fine;
A train would leave at half-past nine.
TEDDY—G came down the road that day
At such a speed, the farmers say,
That time was turned the other way.
TEDDY—B had scarcely left the phone
When TEDDY—G in a small cyclone
Of wheels and dust all whizzing round
Arrived at the station safe and sound.

The Bears will get to Boston soon,
Said papers which came out at noon.
They're on the way; they'll be here at two;
From South Union Depot they'll drive through
The city streets to Beacon Hill
Where Priscilla Alden and her brother Will
Will entertain them days and nights
While they are seeing the Boston sights.

Great crowds had gathered along the route:
There were girls in dresses gay and cute,
And boys with flags and their teachers, too,
For the schools were out and lessons through:
A jolly crowd the Bears to greet,
To cheer them all along the street.
The Bears arrived; the crowds hurrah'd;
The children laughed; the brass bands played.
The merchants closed their stores that day
And gave their clerks each double pay.
Flags were flying from poles and towers,
And factory whistles blew for hours.
Guns were fired and bells were rung;
A welcome sound from every tongue.
Flowers were strewn along the street
To be trampled under the horses' feet.

Priscilla's home was reached at three.
"I am glad to see you," said TEDDY—B,
To Priscilla Alden at the gate;
"I'm very sorry that we are late."
The Bears were taken to their room
And made to feel like folks at home.

At 4 o'clock they had cake and tea,
And then walked out the town to see.

They rambled over to Copley Square
To look at a library building there.
They asked a man in charge if he Would answer questions, two or three:
"Tell us, good sir, what all this means;
Is Boston culture made of beans?
And does it take but a single week
For Boston children to learn their Greek?
And what do all these marble halls
Have to do with making cod-fish balls?
And if born in Boston, is it true
That that is all folks have to do
To master life and conquer fate
And pass Saint Peter at the golden gate?

These questions are not answered yet
The man said he would volumes get
Which they could take away and read
And find out why Bostonians lead
In beans and culture and cod-fish cakes
And New England pie of various makes.
They took the books and down they sat
To study Emerson and the Autocrat.
Said TEDDY—B, "I'm sure it's true
These books were made for me and you,
But so was time and food and play;
I'll read them through some other day."
Said TEDDY—G, "My book's all right
But it doesn't help my appetite."
They closed the books and took them back
And placed them on a library stack,
And told the man they'd come again
And study Holmes and Emerson.
They turned their steps toward the golden dome,
And across the Common to Priscilla's home;
And as they walked along the way
They made some plans for the following day.
"Boston's big and there's much to see;
We must lose no time," said TEDDY—B.
"We'll go to-morrow to Bunker Hill
And take Priscilla and her brother Will.

KAISER SEEKING MORE TROUBLE WITH FRANCE

Conference to Discuss Abyssinia and Siam Proposed.

DANGER IN THE QUESTIONS

Germany Has No Special Interest in Either Country, While French Territory Adjoins Both.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

BERLIN, March 17.—Even if the Conference on Moroccan Reforms results in a complete agreement, the danger of a serious dispute between Germany and France will not be ended. Indeed, if an announcement made by the Neue Militaerische Correspondenz is correct—and the paper is a semi-official one—questions fraught with dangers at least as great as those connected with the Morocco question are about to be raised.

The Neue Militaerische Correspondenz asserts that another great international conference is to be held in the Autumn, in order to discuss the Abyssinian and Siamese questions.

Whatever comes of the Algeciras Conference, it is certain that it will leave ill-feeling behind it, and that this ill-feeling will color any future question between France and Germany for a considerable time to come. Under these circumstances, to attempt to dispute the position which France has gained for herself in Abyssinia and Siam by what have hitherto been regarded as perfectly legitimate means appears a highly provocative proceeding.

France's interests in Abyssinia are due altogether to her ownership of the railway from Jibuti, French Somaliland, to the Abyssinian frontier. The proposed continuation of the railway to Adis Abeba is not and cannot be altogether a French enterprise, for the Emperor Menelek declared last April that he would not permit the construction of a line by foreigners unless England, France, and Italy came to an agreement to internationalize it. If no such agreement is reached Abyssinia will build the road itself.

Moreover, Germany is already in an advantageous position in regard to Abyssinian trade on account of the commercial treaty which was concluded as a result of the special German Embassy to the Court of the Negus about a year ago. The proposed conference, it would appear, can have no other object than to secure for Germany participation in the building and control of the railway in Abyssinia.

As to the proposal to discuss Siam, there appears to be even less ground for German interference there than there is for interference in Abyssinia. The dispute between Siam and France in regard to the boundary between the former country and Cambodia was settled last year. France obtained a considerable slice of additional territory by the treaty, but it has never been hinted that Germany was even remotely interested. The nearest German territory is Kiao-Chow, which is about 1,700 miles from the Siamese frontier.

It is reported that Herr von Radowitz will represent Germany if the proposed conference on Abyssinia and Siam is held, but that after the Algeciras Conference is ended he will not return to Madrid as Ambassador, but will be replaced by Prince Hohenlohe, at present head of the Colonial Department. The Centrists are displeased with Prince Hohenlohe, and it is felt that what is regarded as the German fiasco at Algeciras renders it necessary to replace Herr von Radowitz at Madrid.

WANTS CENSOR FOR KAISER.

Paper Suggests a Minister Be Appointed to Give Out His Speeches.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, March 17.—The papers are again discussing one of Emperor William's speeches in a manner which is far from complimentary. The Emperor is reported to have told the recruits at Wilhelmshaven that the Germans lost the battle of Jena because they did not trust in God, adding: "Misfortune comes only when true religion and the fear of God are absent."

The Vossische Zeitung in a caustic article remarks that the defeat of the Prussians at Jena was due to entirely different causes, and that Napoleon was certainly a less faithful believer than the Prussian King. It adds:

"It is to be regretted that no official arrangement is made either to publish authentic versions of the Kaiser's utterances, or else to consider his speeches as confidential and to exclude reporters entirely."

The paper takes Prince Bülow severely to task for not preventing the publication of the Emperor's unedited speeches, and makes the surprising proposition that a Minister of the Emperor's Court be especially appointed to assume responsibility for the monarch's utterances.

MR. WHITE AGAINST GERMANY ?

Dispatches to the State Department Criticise Her Course.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Advices received at the State Department from Algeciras contain criticism of the German insistence on the adoption, practically without modification, of the Austrian proposal for the policing of Morocco.

Although its delegates will not vote at the conference, this Government is averse to the complicating of the system for the policing of Morocco, and, provided the international character of the scheme can be preserved, is well content to intrust the mission to French and Spanish officers who would be responsible to the Diplomatic Corps at Tangier for effective service in caring for the interests of all nations.

There is authoritative information that eventually Germany, having assured herself of the international character of the police system, will assent to modification of the Austrian proposal.

SAYS POLITICS RULES BENCH.

Judge Declares Elections Affect the Decisions on Labor Disputes.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 17.—Circuit Judge Taylor from the bench to-day declared his belief that most court decisions relative to combinations of labor and capital are colored by political considerations.

Judge Talty, representing members of the Steamfitters' Union, who are being sued by Frank Carter for $15,000 damages for causing him to lose positions, was arguing a case and had cited a decision.

"If you try to follow the tortuous decisions that have been rendered in cases of this kind," said Judge Taylor, "you will end in confusion. One who tries to reconcile them is in danger of spraining his mind.

"The decisions are so contradictory that you are driven to general principles. Most of them are political decisions. If you look at the decisions and recall campaigns, you will find that there is a relation both in date and substance.

"One court has decided that a combination of workingmen for the purpose of raising the market price of labor is lawful, and the same court has decided that a combination of makers of woven wire to raise the price of woven wire is unlawful, although labor is the chief cost of the production of woven wire. How one combination of men can be lawful and another can be unlawful has never been explained."

DANCED AS THEATRE BURNED.

Amateur Minstrels Averted Panic and Audience Escaped Safely.

WOBURN, Mass., March 17.—During a St. Patrick's night minstrel show in the Woburn Auditorium this evening, a fire started in the rear of the stage, but through the efforts of six young men, who were in the middle of an act, a panic was averted and the audience of nearly a thousand people reached the street in an orderly manner just in time, as a few minutes later the building was in flames.

The entire structure, which included the auditorium on the second floor and several small stores on the street floor, was destroyed. The loss is estimated at $30,000.

The entertainment was under the auspices of the Catholic Temperance Association, and had been in progress about two hours when one of the actors discovered flames issuing from a laundry in the rear of the building on the first floor. The entertainment was continued by six young men, who had sung and danced while the orchestra played. The concert was stopped, however, long enough for one of the men of the show to tell the spectators that there would be a slight fire back of the stage. The audience was requested to leave in an orderly manner.

Several timid persons shrieked, but the young men immediately resumed their singing and dancing while the audience filed down the stairs to the street. No one was injured.

FIRE IN DRY GOODS DISTRICT.

One hundred thousand dollars damage was done by fire which wrecked the five-story stone-front building at 58 Walker Street late last night. The flames gained such rapid headway that Chief Croker turned in a third alarm.

The fire started in the rear of the basement, shot up through an elevator shaft, and burst through the roof. It ate its way through the floors from the rear, bursting out the windows and driving back men who were dragging lines of hose to the roof. After an hour's battle the firemen got the flames under control.

Levy & Kadane, manufacturers of hosiery and underwear, occupied the ground floor; the Columbia Muslin Underwear Company had a factory on the second floor, the third floor was occupied by the Pioneer Shirt Company, the fourth by the Star Suspender and Neckwear Company, and the fifth by S. L. Rosenfield, manufacturer of underwear.

Chief Croker had a narrow escape from injury while mounting a ladder on the front of the building. He was about six feet above the sidewalk when the ladder slipped on the ice and fell, throwing Croker to the ground. He escaped unhurt.

The smoke was so dense that when the firemen were finally able to enter the building, they were compelled to get out within a few moments. One fireman of Engine Company No. 15 was slightly hurt by a comrade, who accidentally struck him on the foot with an axe.

TRIED TO SWIM THE HUDSON.

Ferryboat Too Slow for Mooney, So He Leaped Overboard.

Jeremiah Mooney of Passaic, N. J., came to New York yesterday to participate in the St. Patrick's Day festivities. He had a fine time, marched in the parade, and last night went to the annual ball of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Sulzer's Harlem River Park. About 10 o'clock he decided to go home, and took a crosstown car to the Fort Lee ferry at the foot of West 130th Street.

When the ferryboat swung out into the stream Jeremiah decided that it was not going fast enough and went up to the pilot house and ordered the Captain to ring for more steam. The Captain refused, whereupon Jeremiah said he would swim the rest of the way, and without further ado he jumped overboard and struck out for the Jersey shore.

A strong current was running and Jeremiah, instead of going across, was carried up stream. At 131st Street he was nearly fagged out, as well as mighty cold, and commenced to howl for help.

James Reilly, the watchman on the pier at 131st Street, heard his shouts for assistance and with several Italians launched a boat and went to the rescue. They pulled the Jerseyman out of the water just as he was going down the second time. Mooney is in the J. Hood Wright Hospital. He will be able to go home to-day.

BOX FULL OF JEWELS TAKEN FOR A BOMB

Such Care to Keep Those Diamonds from Exploding!

$7,000 WORTH, SAY POLICE

Hoboken Clerk Picked Them Up in a Brooklyn Street—Man Who Was Moving Say They're His.

Harry Svensen, a clerk in a Hoboken store, went to Brooklyn yesterday to visit his sister, Mrs. A. Norwood of 589 Fiftieth Street. He spent the afternoon with her, and soon after supper bade her good-bye, saying he intended to take a Hamilton Avenue car and go to see a brother who lived in another part of Brooklyn.

He walked from her hom to Third Avenue, and, no Hamilton Avenue car being in sight, strolled along until he reached the corner of Forty-eighth Street. There he saw, under the glare of a street lamp, a cigar box. He stooped to pick it up, when his attention was arrested by the fact that it had a sliding top, which had evidently been fitted to it after it had been rid of its original contents.

Visions of infernal machines floated before him, and he decided that it was no part of his duty to find out what was under the lid. He saw Policeman Edward J. Connolly of the Fourth Avenue Station half a block away, and called to him.

By the time the policeman reached him Svensen was ready to swear that the box was loaded, and he lost no time in communicating his fears to Connolly. Connolly, too, saw something sinister about the arrangement of the top, and hesitated to open it.

Some boys were coasting in Forty-eighth Street, and the policeman borrowed one of their sleds, upon which he placed the cigar box, lashing it so tightly that there was not the slightest chance of its slipping off. Accompanied by Svensen, Connolly pulled the box-laden sled to the police station, where he undid the lashings and carried the object of his suspicion to Sergt. Dealy, who was at the desk. Capt. Patrick Murphy, commanding the precinct, was in the station house at the time.

The Captain and the Sergeant agreed with Connolly and Svensen that the box probably contained a bomb. They took it to the backyard, where they measured it upon a piece of plank, and then drove in four nails, which held it securely, when it was placed between them. A tack was then softly driven into the end of the sliding cover and a string tied to the tack. The idea was to pull the cover off by the string when the policemen had withdrawn to a safe distance.

Everybody moved off to shelter. Connolly, hiding behind a tree, gently tugged at the string and the cover slid off. There was no explosion. The policemen waited a few minutes and then cautiously approached the box. The sight that met their eyes was so unexpected that they drew back in surprise.

From the box there came the shimmer of gold and the flash of diamonds. It was heaped full of all manner of precious stones, gold watches, and jewelry.

Capt. Murphy picked up the treasure and carried it back into the station house. There he inventoried the find and announced that it was worth between $6,000 and $7,000. There were half a dozen watches, several diamond bracelets, necklaces, and rings, pearls in profusion, and other kinds of stones too numerous to mention.

"You're an honest man," said the Captain to Svensen. "If nobody claims that bunch of jewelry inside of a year it belongs to you."

"Thank you," said Svensen.

On the theory that to give out a list of the contents of the box would be to invite all manner of fraudulent claims, Capt. Murphy declined to make public the result of his inventory.

"The stuff's worth every cent of $6,000 or $7,000, though," he declared. "There are some of the finest diamonds I ever saw."

Svensen walked out of the station house in a daze. The boy who had loaned his sled to Connolly said he was going to put in a claim for salvage.

Some of the jewelry and diamonds were in regulation jeweler's boxes, but there were no names on them and absolutely no clue to the owner of the property.

After the jewelry had been in the hands of the police for about an hour, Policeman Connolly, on whose beat it had been found, got a notion that it might belong to a family which had moved into 4,175 Third Avenue during the afternoon. He went to the house, and found Charles Hemmerman and his family in the midst of tangled housekeeping paraphernalia. They had come all the way from Manhattan and hadn't begun to get things straightened out.

Connolly asked if Hemmerman had lost any jewelry. The family was called in council, and remembered that the Hemmerman jewels had been packed up in a cigar box. The box hadn't been found, but Mr. Hemmerman was hopeful that it would be when they got their goods in order.

Then Connolly told about the find. Mr. Hemmerman said the jewelry was undoubtedly his, and that he would go to the property clerk on Monday morning and prove it.

SAMUEL O. HOWE FALLS DEAD.

Treasurer of Northwestern Road Stricken on the Elevated.

Samuel O. Howe, Treasurer of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway and of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha Railway, died suddenly of heart disease yesterday morning on the Ninth Avenue elevated station at Christopher Street. He was on his way from his home, 49 West 126th Street, to his office, 52 Wall Street. He had been in good health until two years ago, when he began to suffer with heart trouble. A son, Russell G., and four daughters survive him. He belonged to Lafayette Post, G. A. R., and the St. Nicholas Society.

Mr. Howe boarded the train at 125th Street about 9 o'clock. At Thirty-fourth Street he felt the coming of a stroke, and staggered to the rear platform of the car. The air seemed to revive him, but at Christopher Street he fell to the platform. He was taken to the station and died before an ambulance could arrive from St. Vincent's Hospital.

Mr. Howe was born in this city in 1842. Thirty-five years ago he entered the service of the Chicago & Northwestern in New York as a bookkeeper.

THE MAYOR STOPS SMOKING.

Swore Off Five Days Ago—Found 18 Cigars a Day Too Many.

Mayor McClellan has stopped smoking. He sat at the dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at Delmonico's enveloped in a choking cloud of tobacco smoke for five hours last night and told his friends about it.

"How many days of abstinence have you to your credit?" asked John D. Crimmins.

"Let's see," said the Mayor, figuring it out. "Monday, Tuesday, Wed-nes-day, T-h-u-r-s-d—a-y. Ye—s, it's five long days. It's a remarkably long time, isn't it?" he added, with a sad smile.

"How do you feel since you stopped?"

"Well, I figure it this way," replied the Mayor, with a laugh. "I'm forty years old, and if I had stopped long ago I'd probably be sixty now."

"Does that mean that you're going to begin again?"

"I don't know, but I hope so. I've been in the habit of smoking eighteen cigars a day for the past few years. It has begun to tell upon me, and I feel pretty good since I stopped, but, my! it's hard work. Ever try it?"

Then the Mayor held before his eyes a small glass of brandy. "The abstinence has affected my eyesight. That's brandy, and if I were smoking I should say so, but to-night it looks light in color, like sherry. Well," he added, looking longingly at smokers beside him, "what's the saying? 'Not yet, but soon.' That may fit the case."

SCHWAB WOULD BE SENATOR.

Said to Have Established Residence in Nevada for That Purpose.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., March 17.—The explanation of Charles M. Schwab's recent flying visit to Nevada is out—he is a candidate for the United States Senate from Nevada, and his trip was for the purpose of establishing a residence in that State.

Thomas Noonan, a prominent mine owner from Bull Frog, Nev., where Schwab owns a gold mine, was in Omaha to-day, and gave out the following interview:

"The next United States Senator from Nevada may be Charles M. Schwab. When Schwab was on his trip to Bull Frog a week ago he gave it out to friends in that town that he intended to be a candidate to succeed Senator Newlands.

"Has Schwab established a home in Nevada?" was asked.

"Yes, he gave $25,000 for a kind of a shack out there, and said he intended to build the finest house in the State on the property. Any kind of property in Bull Frog costs money, because of its mining value. But Schwab established a home in the State, and that was the true reason of his last trip out there."

MRS. WILLIAMS OWES MONEY.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 17.—John E. Semmes of counsel for the Trustees of Mrs. E. B. Williams, who recently made threats against J. P. Morgan and men associated with his firm at their New York office, said this evening that Mrs. Williams was a beneficiary under the will of De Witt Clinton Winans, receiving the income of an estate valued at $150,000.

This was not sufficient, however, for Mrs. Williams's expensive tastes, he said, and she got into the power of money lenders. There are more than twenty assignments to creditors on record here, and the court has declared them valid and ordered their payment. It may be eight or ten years before Mrs. Williams can get anything from her estate.

The Trustees have so far paid $40,000 to creditors to whom she made assignments, and there is about $40,000 more due them, not including interest. Despite her assignments, Mrs. Williams does not seem to understand why she cannot get her interest, and she has on several occasions made matters unpleasant for the lawyers concerned.

REJECTS RAILROAD'S OFFER.

Maryland Wants $500 a Share for Washington Branch Stock.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 17.—The State of Maryland, through the Board of Public Works, to-day rejected an offer from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for the 5,500 shares of Washington Branch stock. The sub-committee of the legislative committee which will submit a report to the Legislature that the company has violated its charter and that its tax exemption privilege should be repealed, indorses the action of the Board of Public Works.

Vice President Bond of the Baltimore and Ohio refused to say whether he had offered $300 a share to the State. The Board of Public Works will hold out for $2,500,000 for the State's holdings of Washington Branch stock. It is contended that the company's reports showed that the Washington Branch last year earned 27 per cent. and that the stock is worth at least $500 per share.

The opinion prevails in State official circles that the company will pay the State's price for the stock rather than incur costly litigation.

BIG COAL DEAL DENIED.

Pittsburg Believes, However, That Independents Will Be Absorbed.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 17.—Denial is made here to-day of the report that the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company, a subsidiary concern of the Pittsburg Coal Company, has purchased the interests of C. Jutte & Co. and the People's Coal Company, two of the largest independent river coal companies in this district. According to the report, the Consolidated paid $5,500,000 for the controlling interest in them.

Capt. C. W. Thomas, Superintendent of Transportation of the independent companies, said this afternoon:

"Similar rumors have been afloat many times before, and they always proved to be groundless. I know of no such deal, and I think I should know of it if it had been accomplished."

Officials of the Consolidated and the Pittsburg Coal Company declare that the rumor is groundless.

In spite of these denials it is well known that the Pittsburg Coal Company is anxious to take in several competitors, and it is believed in financial circles that negotiations for the purchase of the two independent companies are [illegible].

WOULD STOP $2,500,000 PAYMENT TO T. F. RYAN

Object of Merritt's Fight on an Armstrong Committee Bill.

HAS BACKING IN THE SENATE

Purposes to Mutualize the Society by Law and Not by Action of Directors.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 17.—The appearance of Assemblyman Merritt of St. Lawrence County at the hearing on the insurance bills yesterday and his expressed opposition to the plan of the Armstrong Committee for the mutualization of stock insurance companies is a continuing subject of interest here. It is understood to be but the preliminary move in a general attack upon that part of the Armstrong Committee's work which will culminate when the committee reports its bills to the Legislature, if it does not modify them in this particular matter before they are reported.

The attack has for its tangible object the situation in the Equitable Life Assurance Society, in which plans for the retirement of the stock have been avowedly under consideration ever since Thomas F. Ryan purchased the control from James H. Hyde last June. Mr. Ryan's name was frequently mentioned in the brief which Mr. Merritt addressed to the Armstrong Committee, and his announced purpose and the methods by which alone it can be carried out came in for equal consideration.

Before the Directors of the Equitable is now pending Mr. Ryan's offer to sell the society his stock for the price he paid for it, plus interest. Such a sale would mean that $2,500,000 of the society's surplus would be paid to Mr. Ryan, together with nine months' interest on that amount at 4 per cent.

Mr. Merritt, with backing in the Senate, is prepared to point out that the whole question of mutualization, involving the issue whether the actual surplus belongs to the stockholders or the policy holders, is now in an indeterminate state, and that until the respective rights of the policy holders and stockholders have been determined the Legislature should take no action.

He will contend that the legislation the Armstrong Committee has proposed would facilitate the plan to pay $2,500,000 of the surplus to Mr. Ryan, and that the simplest way to mutualize the company, if that be all that is desired, is to grant to the policy holders unrestricted rights to vote for Directors, without disfranchising the stock. In that event the policy holders would have some 450,000 votes and the stock 1,000, and this, according to his argument, would quite eliminate the dangers of stock domination.

When Mr. Ryan bought control of the Equitable Society last June he intended, he afterward declared, to sell it back to the society for the $2,500,000 he paid, plus 4 per cent. interest on his investment. At the time of the purchase the Directors had voted to amend the charter of the society so as to confer upon the policy holders the right to vote for twenty-eight out of the fifty-two Directors, but the matter was tied up by the Lord suit, on the ground, among others, that neither the Directors nor the Legislature had the power thus to amend the charter.

It was alleged that the right to vote the stock was a property right, and also that the actual or net surplus belonged to the stockholders. On the other hand, it was held that the stock should not participate in the earnings of the society to the extent of more than 7 per cent. a year on its par value and that accumulated earnings did not differ from annual earnings.

Justice Maddox of the Supreme Court restrained the mutualization plan that the board adopted prior to the sale to Mr. Ryan only on the ground that the Directors should not be allowed to amend the charter so as to deprive the stock of its rights, but held that the Legislature certainly had the power to amend the charter. The court did not decide the surplus issue, and it was followed by the Appellate Division.

As matters stand legally at present, with the Lord suit on its way to the Court of Appeals, and presumably to the United States Supreme Court, the power of the Legislature to amend the charter regardless of the views of the stock is in process of being upheld. The ownership of the surplus awaits the determination of the highest court, to which it has been referred by the lower courts.

The bills proposed by the Armstrong Committee provide first, that the Directors of a stock insurance corporation may with the consent of the stock confer the right to vote upon the policy holders, and second, that the Directors, with the consent of the stock and the policy holders, may, after a price has been agreed upon between everybody concerned, retire the stock by purchase, the funds of course coming from the company's treasury.

JANITOR WORRIED TO DEATH.

Investigation into the death of Henry Holland, the janitor of the apartment house at 203 West 108th Street, who was found asphyxiated in his room there on Friday, brought out the fact that his suicide was probably due to the worries of his multifarious duties.

His wife, Anna, said that he had been literally "pestered to death." He was constantly obliged to answer telephone calls, receive tradesmen, and attend to the thousand and one things that fall to the janitor's lot. He had a sensitive temperament, and his special aversion was the "guying" to which he was subjected by the tradesmen's boys. This was nothing short of torture to him, his wife said.

Holland had a razor in his right hand when his body was found, as if he had meant to cut his throat if the gas had not killed him.

CARNEGIE'S NIECE ROBBED.

Porter of Private Car Steals Jewels of Mrs. James C. Greenway.

Special to The New York Times.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 17.—Mrs. James C. Greenway, niece of Andrew Carnegie, was robbed of jewelry valued at several thousand dollars while traveling in a private car from New York to this city. She did not discover her loss until after she had arrived here. Detectives discovered that the negro porter of the train had been pawning gems. He was arrested, but refused to reveal the whereabouts of the jewels he has not pawned. He says he stole the gems while Mrs. Greenway was asleep.

SHEPARD ESCAPES JAIL.

Six Months' Delay Granted and Sentence is Likely to be Modified.

PARIS, March 17.—The authorities have granted six months' delay in the case of Elliott F. Shepard of New York, who was sentenced to pay a fine and an indemnity and to three months' imprisonment for running over and killing a girl while driving in his automobile in St. Ouen last April. This is considered to be a virtual abandonment of the imprisonment part of the sentence, which ultimately will be changed into an additional fine.

WOMAN 108 YEARS OLD.

UNIONTOWN, Penn., March 17.—Mrs. Mary McKittrick to-day celebrated her 108th birthday.

Many friends visited her at her home and made merry over the event. She hugely enjoyed their jokes and antics.

HUGE ICEBERG IN SEA PATH.

Sighted Off the Grand Banks, It Soon Will Menace Liners.

An iceberg which Capt. Trotter of the British steamship Indralema, in yesterday from Barry, declared was the biggest he had seen in more than twenty years, was sighted off the Grand Banks of Newfoundland last week. The berg, according to Capt. Trotter, was almost a quarter of a mile long, and towered more than 100 feet above the water.

"It was a magnificent sight," said Capt. Trotter yesterday. "It seemed solid blue ice, and had a square top with a peak at the eastern end. It will be in the track of transatlantic liners within one week's time, and is a menace to navigation."

MRS. BALLINGTON BOOTH ILL.

Suffers from Severe Headaches and Will Stop Lecturing.

Special to The New York Times.

BELOIT, Wis., March 17.—Mrs. Maud Ballington Booth will retire from the lecture platform indefinitely because of a threatened collapse. She made this statement to-day to a local committee of the Young Men's Christian Association. She delivered the final lecture in her course here last night.

For three or four weeks Mrs. Booth has been suffering from headaches, the pain being so severe at times as to drive her almost distracted. During her lecture she suffered one of her attacks, and it was with difficulty that she finished.

Her physicians have told her that she cannot go on with such strenuous work or she will suffer total collapse, and to-day she said she had decided to take their advice and to do no more lecturing until her health was completely restored. For the present she will take a complete rest.

TRAIN WRECKERS SUCCEED.

Engine and Cars Thrown from Track—Another Plot Foiled.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT JERVIS, N. Y., March 17.—Twelve-year-old Regina Tuscano, daughter of W. N. Tuscano, President of the Knickerbocker Silver Plating Company and a member of the local Board of Education, climbed into a wagon in charge of Harry Gelder, a neighbor's coachman, this afternoon, to enjoy a ride.

As the rig approached the Pike Street grade crossing of the Erie Railroad, the horse took fright, broke through the gates, and the wagon was struck by the Chicago-New York express, running ten minutes late at a high rate of speed. The wagon, with its occupants, was carried on the pilot of the locomotive for 600 feet before it fell off.

As the girl tumbled from the engine her clothing caught in a switch and she was dragged to death under the wheels. The coachman is in a serious condition at Port Jervis Hospital from broken ribs and internal injuries.

CASSIDY WILL PRESS ANTI-RACE TRACK BILL

No Poolroom Men Behind It, So Far as He Knows.

ALL BETTORS ALIKE, HE SAYS

Would Outlaw Them All, Whether on a Track or Off—Dr. Slicer Imposed On, Some Think.

Senator Owen Cassidy, who introduced the Cassidy-Lansing Anti-Racing bill in the upper house at Albany, came to town yesterday. To a TIMES reporter the Senator explained the purposes of his bill, which the State Conference of Religion, through the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, has agreed with The Jockey Club to oppose, on the promise of the latter to "sterilize" betting at the tracks.

The Senator, it seems, does not take the opposition of Dr. Slicer and his colleagues to the bill with very great seriousness. In fact, the impression was very generally expressed yesterday that Dr. Slicer, whose sincerity as a reformer nobody doubts, had been imposed upon by somebody interested in seeing his support diverted from the Cassidy-Lansing measure.

Dr. Slicer reiterated yesterday his assertion of the day before to the effect that he had an agreement with the Stewards of The Jockey Club that in exchange for his support they would make such further limitations upon race-track betting as would practically eliminate many of the evils by which it is attended at present.

That any such agreement existed was denied by some members of the Board of Stewards, who, however, declined to permit the use of their names with the denials. In the meantime Dr. Slicer, after a conference held yesterday with Joseph S. Auerbach, attorney for The Jockey Club, said they had agreed not to divulge the details of the agreement.

Cassidy Defends His Bill.

To a TIMES reporter who called upon him at his hotel Senator Cassidy spoke freely about the purposes of his bill and denied emphatically that it had been introduced for any ulterior motives or in the interests of the poolroom clique.

"I have not the pleasure of being acquainted with the Rev. Dr. Slicer," said Senator Cassidy. "Nor have I made any study of the theology of gambling or the homiletics of the race track. In introducing the bill I acted from a sense of common honesty and civic duty, feeling that as a citizen and as a representative in the Legislature nothing less could be expected of me than to stand for the enforcement of all provisions of the Constitution of this State.

"While Dr. Slicer may justify himself by defining the factional differences that may spring up between those who are trying to evade the Constitution, I, as a citizen and legislator, am unable to discriminate between them. I do not stand as the representative or champion of either faction. On the contrary, I am opposed to both.

"The Constitution does not leave to me the choice between race track gambling and poolroom gambling. It is quite explicit in its terms, and I do not feel at liberty to disobey it and at the same time enact laws based upon it to restrict vice and crime."

The Senator said he introduced his bill at the request of a majority of the churches in Albany. The ministers decided in favor of such a measure, he said, at a meeting at which the Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, head of the International Reform Bureau, was present. The Senator said Anthony Comstock also attended and he thought it quite likely that the bill in its original form had been drawn by him.

"What was the attitude of Bishop Doane of Albany on the measure?" the Senator was asked. He replied:

"I never heard of any opposition from him until after he had received a letter from Dr. Slicer. It was generally understood that this letter had been written at the request of Mr. Auerbach, counsel of The Jockey Club.

"The insinuation that the poolroom interests in this city, or any other city, are behind the measure is maliciously false. I have no knowledge of any dissension among the gambling fraternity, nor do I care to become the defender or champion of either faction."

Will Press the Bill.

"Do you believe your bill will pass?" the Senator was asked.

"Well, I know I shall fight for it and give it my personal support because I believe in it. But I am not a prophet," he replied.

"In case it does pass, do you believe it will tend to stop bookmaking at the race tracks?"

"I don't know that it will lessen gambling at the race track any more than the existing law, which makes bookmaking outside the race track a felony, has stopped the poolroom industry. What I am aiming at is to break up the partnership between the State and the violators of its Constitution. The Constitution makes gambling anywhere in this State a felony, and if my bill passes all the gamblers must gamble as outlaws, regardless of whether they gamble inside the fence of a race track or on the outside."

"My bill," Senator Cassidy said, in response to another question, "creates no new crime, nor does it add any new penalty, but simply repeals an exception in the existing law against gambling which makes all of its provisions a mere farce.

"The State declares poolselling, bookmaking, and gambling a felony, and when the criminal machinery of the State is invoked and the violator of the Constitution is pursued the criminal takes refuge under the petticoats of the State and asks the State to save him by its protecting arm from suffering the penalty prescribed by the law for his offense."

"But if you don't think that your bill will tend to check gambling at the race-track, and if the agreement entered into by Dr. Slicer with the Stewards of the Jockey Club will lead to wholesome reforms, wouldn't that in the end serve a better purpose?" was suggested.

"What about the Constitution?" said the Senator. "If Dr. Slicer or anybody else can make a pact with the violators of the Constitution that will better safeguard the interests of the people than the Constitution itself which was formulated for that purpose, then it would be better to abrogate the Constitution, at least during the lifetime of Dr. Slicer and the particular set of violators of the law with whom he seems to have such facility for making contracts.

"Those who seek to defend the constitutionality of the Percy-Gray law on the ground that the Legislature has the right to impose discriminating penalties upon crime seem to forget that the Constitution in express terms forbids poolselling and bookmaking everywhere within the borders of the State, while the question of regulating other vices is not specified in the Constitution, but left to the Legislature. That shows that the Constitutional Convention had a specific purpose in view, even if that purpose was circumvented by the putting in of the Percy-Gray exception.

Dubious About Agreement.

"It is no answer to say that the Legislature has penalized poolselling and bookmaking by providing that the loser may maintain a civil action against a stakeholder, for that form of action existed throughout the State before the Constitutional inhibition of gambling throughout the State, and those that framed the amendment of the Constitution must have known all about it."

It was declared in some quarters yesterday that while the emphatic assertion of Dr. Slicer left no doubt that an understanding with The Jockey Club bearing on vital reforms in the race track betting system existed, yet in view of the reluctance of the Stewards to place themselves on public record regarding those reforms and the pledge of secrecy as to what these reforms involved which had been imposed on the clergyman himself, there might be some question as to whether they would be carried out, once the Legislature adjourns without passing the Cassidy bill.

Several clergymen expressed their regret yesterday at Dr. Slicer's attitude and declared that he would find himself in an awkward position if the reforms contemplated should not take concrete shape in the absence of any public record of the assurances given him by the men behind the racing interests.

Dr. Slicer himself said he had no such misgivings. He had a conference yesterday with Mr. Auerbach, counsel for The Jockey Club, and it was understood that Mr. Auerbach was afterward to see Mr. Belmont. At the house of Mr. Auerbach, at 11 West Tenth Street, it was said that the lawyer was out of town. When Dr. Slicer was told of the denial of some of the Stewards of the existence of any agreement he said:

They've Agreed, Says Dr. Slicer.

"I nevertheless must insist that there is an understanding between the Stewards of The Jockey Club and myself. The reforms contemplated were passed upon by the Stewards at their meeting, and immediately afterward approved by Mr. Belmont, who called at my house, accompanied by his attorney, Mr. Auerbach. Mr. Auerbach was instructed then and there to so revise the rules and regulations of the race tracks as to cover the reforms suggested.

"The recommendations are very specific in their purpose, but very general in character. No, there is no written pact, in that sense of the word, but I am just as morally certain that the recommendations will be carried out as though such a document had been legally executed. The high character of the men with whom I have that understanding would alone preclude the possibility of any suspicion that they would back out. It is simply impossible for them to do so, taking all the circumstances into consideration."

When it was suggested that the race track could not possibly exist as a paying institution without the betting system being continued on its present basis, Dr. Slicer said he doubted if that was so.

"But that is their lookout," he said. "I cannot run their business for them. They must try to carry out these reforms so as not to injure their business. I can make them do at least what their consciences say they ought to do where that does not conflict with their practical business sense."

Disagrees with Cassidy.

Dr. Slicer, when his attention was called to the utterance of Senator Cassidy that he could see no difference between betting on the race track or on the outside, and that all classes of bookmakers should be compelled to do their betting as outlaws, said he thought their existed a material difference, inasmuch as the racing association operated under a charter from the Legislature.

August Belmont at his residence last night declined to talk about the controversy. It was learned, however, from a man close to the leading spirits in The Jockey Club that while the Stewards were averse to the passage of the Cassidy-Lansing bill, because it would kill racing in this State, they were heartily in favor of doing all in their power to check betting, to the extent of "protecting the immature and irresponsible from their own vices," as Dr. Slicer puts it.

But even the man who is authority for this statement denied the existence of any pact between the Board of Stewards and Dr. Slicer. He added that the most unfortunate feature of the situation was the newspaper publicity given the controversy.

The Rev. Dr. Robert S. MacArthur, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, was quoted yesterday as making the following comment on the attitude of Dr. Slicer:

"I have every confidence in Dr. Slicer's good intentions, but I cannot help feeling that some one has imposed upon him by giving him only one side of the case. Dr. Crafts is of high character, wide experience, and penetrating judgment in matters of this sort. It is not too much to say, both as to the meaning of the bill and the motive of its presentation, that Dr. Craft's judgment is more worthy of confidence than Dr. Slicer's."

The Rev. Dr. David J. Burrell of the Marble Collegiate Church had this to say:

"I have every confidence in the wisdom of those who had in charge the proposed legislation against gambling, and I am suspicious of any divisive proposition at this point. The true friends of reform will be slow to quarrel on their way to a better condition of things."

EX-PROFESSOR A COINER.

George H. Stephens Convicted—Has Served Term for Arson.

TAMPA, Fla., March 17.—The jury in the Federal Court to-night convicted George H. Stephens, a Princeton graduate and former professor in Lafayette College, Pennsylvania, on the charge of counterfeiting.

Stephens made an impassioned plea to the jury in his own behalf. Judge Boarman reserved sentence until Monday. Stephens admitted on the stand that he had served a term in a Pennsylvania penitentiary for arson.

EASTON, Penn., March 17.—Stephens was sent to the Eastern Penitentiary from Easton for setting fire to Pardee Hall and committing many depredations about the college after he had been dismissed from the Faculty because of a serious disagreement with President Warfield and other instructors.

He had an imaginative grievance against Dr. Warfield and a professor whose line of reasoning and teaching was not in accord with his own. He cut and destroyed rare and ancient vines that for a lifetime had entwined some of the older buildings on the campus, threw books into a well, smeared tar over the Bible, and finally set fire to Pardee Hall.

Hudson Steamboats Can't Sail.

The ice in the upper part of the Hudson River is so thick that the Troy Line has been forced to postpone indefinitely the resumption of its service between New York and Troy. No steamer will leave New York to-day. The sailing of the People's Line boats C. W. Morse and Adirondack has also been indefinitely postponed.

M'CALL'S LAST ACT WAS TO EXCULPATE HAMILTON

Wrote Trustees After Receiving Church's Last Rites.

MORE RESTITUTION COMING

Fifteen New York Life Trustees to Make Good $148,000 Used for Political Expenditures.

John A. McCall's last act was to dictate a letter to the Trustees of the New York Life Insurance Company reiterating his confidence in Andrew Hamilton and his assertion that the acceptance of Hamilton's personal vouchers for the money he spent in conducting the company's Legislative Bureau was proper and necessary to the service that Hamilton performed. The letter was spread upon the minutes of the board at a meeting held soon after Mr. McCall's death.

This became known last night in connection with the discussion of the plans in which Andrew Hamilton figures prominently for the clearing of John A. McCall's memory from the imputations put upon it by the report of the Fowler Investigating Committee of New York Life Trustees. The statement to his board was dictated even after Mr. McCall had received the last rites of the Church and was literally his last act in life.

As related last night by a man who is familiar with the contents of the letter, Mr. McCall said first that he knew that he was soon to die and that, as he knew that the Hamilton arrangements were to be an important factor in the readjustment of the New York Life's affairs, he wanted to insure a clear understanding of them.

Then followed a declaration that the services performed by Hamilton were of such a nature that a detailed accounting of the amounts he received could not be required of him, more than that given by the vouchers which Hamilton signed for all money he received. The statement was transmitted to the board just after Mr. McCall's death.

Mr. Hamilton, according to present plans, will come to New York early this week to keep important "business appointments." One of these is said to be an appearance before the Fowler investigating committee of New York Life Trustees for the purpose of answering any questions which that body may have to put to him. Hamilton will be ready to remind the committee, it is said, that he indicated in general the purpose for which he desired the different amounts of money he received, in advance of drawing it. Then when the money came, his voucher for it went into the daily expense account, upon which the Auditing Committee of the company had to pass regularly, thence into the weekly statement of expenses, and so on through the usual course of such things. All this was provided for by the by-laws, which say that it shall be the duty of the Auditing Committee:

(a) To examine all disbursements and pass upon all bills and accounts and the current expenses of the company.

Hamilton does not intend to be in the limelight any more than is necessary. His return here and present course have but one object, and that is to clear the reputation of John A. McCall by showing just who knew about the money that went for the purposes of the Legislative Bureau. Incidentally, this will involve public discussion of the acts of various Trustees, as it has already touched those of William B. Hornblower, and the policy pursued by some of the officers of the company will also come in for review.

Reports have been current that some criticism had been visited upon Darwin P. Kingsley, Second Vice President of the New York Life, who married John A. McCall's daughter, on account of his attitude toward Mr. McCall in his later days. Friends of Mr. Kingsley indignantly deny this, and declare as proof of his loyalty to his father-in-law that when Mr. McCall had to raise the $235,000 that he returned to the company, Mr. Kingsley of his own motion turned over $30,000, which constituted the greater part of his own savings, to help swell the fund.

There was a conference yesterday of some of the men who are concerned in the knowledge of political payments made by the New York Life, as the result of which it is practically certain that a group of about fifteen Trustees who have been members of the Finance Committee at times when the payments took place will make restitution of the $148,000 that made them up.

On the Finance Committee when the 1904 payment was made, besides Mr. McCall, were John Claflin, Alexander E. Orr, now President of the company; Woodbury Langdon, George W. Perkins, John S. Kennedy, and E. D. Randolph. It was the testimony of Mr. McCall at the Armstrong Committee's investigation that all the political payments were discussed with members of his Finance Committee, and it now appears that the practice was to consider such matters after the formal adjournment of the committee.

The report of the Fowler Committee on legislative payments, rendered Feb. 14, said this:

These contributions were made by direction of President McCall, and when he was on the witness stand he frankly stated that they were made on his sole order as President and without authorization of any committee or the Board of Trustees.

Despite the proposition of the Armstrong legislative committee to cancel all existing proxies and postpone elections until Nov. 15 next, the New York Life management is pushing its proxy campaign with all vigor. This telegram was sent recently to all agency managers and general agencies throughout this country and Europe:

Suggest you quietly ask agents to continue securing proxies during balance of month, not interfering, of course, with solicitation of business. You may have cashier furnish lists of policy holders, when you think it advisable, to agents for this purpose.
THOMAS A. BUCKNER, Third Vice President.

When Mr. Buckner was asked about this telegram he said he didn't see any reason why the company should cease collecting proxies in view of the Armstrong Committee's recommendations. Some 85,000 proxies have, it is understood, already been received, and if the special act proposed by the Armstrong Committee should not be passed by April 7, these proxies, unless revoked, will control the election and return to office William B. Hornblower, Alexander E. Orr, John Claflin, Darwin P. Kingsley, Woodbury Langdon, and G. A. Morrison. The Proxy Committee consists of Oscar Straus, John Claflin, who is a candidate to succeed himself in the board, and Clarence H. Mackay.

The request for proxies that is being mailed from the home office of the company contains biographies of all the Trustees in nomination and complimentary notices of the Proxy Committee. It is signed by Theodore A. Banta, cashier of the New York Life.

To Test Battleship's Machinery.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 17.—The new 15,000-ton battleship Rhode Island is to have an eight-hour machinery trial at the Navy Yard to-morrow. The object of this is to determine whether the vessel is in a sea service condition.

When the Rhode Island was sent to the Navy Yard by the contractors early last month the Navy Department accepted the vessel upon condition that if it should be found, after inspection and trial, that anything more was needed to complete the ship under the terms of the contract the builders should make good such deficiencies.

CONCILIATION BOARD WORK.

Mine Operators Satisfied and Want No Changes.

Whether President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers will succeed or not in the plan he is said to have in mind of trying to bring about a conference with the representatives of the anthracite coal carrying companies based on modified demands, the operators, in a statement issued on their behalf yesterday, made it plain that the methods of the Conciliation Board will continue unchanged. The statement deals only with the work of the board, the methods and constitution of which the miners wanted to have changed.

The Conciliation Board was formed under the award of the Anthracite Strike Commission as a sort of Court of Appeals, the statement says, covering the entire mining districts. It consists of three representatives of the anthracite mine workers and three representatives of the operators, an umpire being appointed, whose decisions are binding in case the board is unable to come to a decision. The board, it says, has been unusually successful and decided many cases which were of great human interest.

The case of Thomas F. Kennedy, engineer, of Carbondale, is instanced. Kennedy was one of the men who refused to quit in the strike of 1902. Besides being a mine worker, he was a member of the Mozart Band and Orchestra of Carbondale, and added $20 a month to his earnings by his musical ability. He was a member in good standing of the Musicians' Union, but was expelled and boycotted, and this source of revenue was taken from him at the instigation of the mine workers because he did not strike. Though the amount in dispute was small, the statement says, it received as much consideration as if many thousands of dollars had been involved, and Kennedy obtained justice.

In reference to the work of the board the statement says that since the first meeting of the Board of Conciliation at Pottsville, Penn., July 9, 1903, until Dec. 18 last, 140 cases had been under consideration. Of these nearly half, or 73 per cent., were either withdrawn or not sustained. The board disagreed and referred the disputes to an umpire in 24 cases.

Penn Mine Strike Endorsed.

PITTSBURG, Penn., March 17.—The strike at the Penn Coal Mine in the Irwin Field and the movement for demand for a general advance in wages throughout that district has been indorsed by the International Executive Board of the United Mine Workers. There are from 8,000 to 10,000 miners in the Irwin field.

MINE WORKERS CONCILIATORY

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 17.—It can be stated authoritatively that the officials of the United Mine Workers of America have decided to allow the Ryan resolution to be eliminated from consideration and will act upon the assumption that the adoption of the report of the scale committee has virtually repealed the resolution which prevented one district from signing an agreement with the operators until all districts had come to an agreement.

All resolutions offered to the miners convention to-day which endeavored to affect action upon the scale or the Ryan resolution were quietly sent to the resolutions committee without comment. This position of the miners' leaders will enable the operators and miners to deal by districts if there is a failure to make an agreement for the entire bituminous field. F. L. Robbins and other operators who favor signing by districts, even if an advance in wages, is given are greatly pleased.

UNION LEADER ARRESTED.

Another Defendant in Steunenberg Murder Plot in Idaho.

CALDWELL, Idaho, March 17.—A telegram received from Oakley, Idaho, states that J. L. Simpkins, a member of the Executive Committee of the Western Federation of Miners, has been arrested near there on charges of complicity in the assassination of ex-Gov. Frank Steunenberg.

The allegations made against A. B. Moss, foreman of the Grand Jury which indicted Charles H. Moyer, William D. Haywood, and George A. Pettibone, were not sustained when testimony in the matter was taken to-day before District Judge Frank Smith. Mr. Moss testified that he had talked with no one about the case outside of the juryroom, and that he had never expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the accused men.

Affidavits of Gov. Frank R. Gooding and Attorney James H. Hawley, denying that they had had any conversation with Foreman Moss in regard to the evidence in the Steunenberg case, as alleged by the defense, also were introduced.

The motion of the defense to quash the indictment was denied.

NAVY REPAIR WORK DELAYED.

Needed Vessels Are Held Up at the Charlestown Yard.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 17.—The repairs on the protected cruisers Cleveland and Des Moines are being hurried along at the Charlestown Navy Yard, so that they can be ready for service by the latter part of April.

Owing to the deficiency of the appropriation for ships only the absolutely necessary repairs for the time being are being done on these ships, and they will be used during the coming Summer for the practice cruise of the midshipmen of the Naval Academy.

Other vessels under repairs at the Navy Yard are delayed in the work by reason of the shortness of money, and three of them are small vessels needed for service at the training station, Newport. In addition to these are the gunboat Detroit and the new Naval Academy training ship Cumberland, upon which work has been suspended until Congress appropriates the money for them.

A HAT TRAGEDY.

Involving a Stout Man and Some Excellent Girlish Intentions.

Most of the passengers in the ferryboat from Jersey City noticed him as he came on board and paced up and down the cabin, glancing every other minute at his reflection in the windows and mirrors, and evidently admiring his appearance in his new silk hat. He may have had silk hats before, but if so his actions did not betray the fact.

He was among the first to leave the boat, and as he emerged from the ferry-house a gust of wind struck that tile and sent it whirling across the street. A pretty girl with a friend was just starting across West Street to the ferry. As the hat bore down upon her, the impulse to do a kind act became irresistible, and she attempted to stop it.

But, alas! for the plans of even a pretty girls, as she made a plunge for the hat her foot slipped and—plomp!—the Jerseyman's crowning glory was no more.

The hat's owner was stout, and when he beheld the ruin he seemed on the verge of an apoplectic seizure. He restrained himself in the immediate presence of his would-be helper, but the spectators said it was well that she went soon.

BANKER WALSH IGNORED CONTROLLER'S ORDERS

MEMORANDUM NOTE ASSETS

His Use of Them Said to Have Been Known to the National Bank Examiners.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Federal records are to form a part of the Government's evidence against John R. Walsh in the hearing of his case before Commissioner Mark A. Foote on Monday morning. Deputy Marshal Palber to-day served a subpoena on T. P. Kane, attached to the office of the Controller of the Currency at Washington, and directed him to bring to Chicago all reports of the Chicago National Bank, and all correspondence which passed between the Controller and Walsh or any of his associates during the last two years.

By these papers it will be shown that the banker was warned repeatedly to remove the excess of his own paper from his banks, and that he refused to do so. The papers also will include evidence that the presence of the "memorandum" notes among the bank's assets was known to the National Bank Examiners from the time they first were employed by Walsh.

The fact that Walsh's use of memorandum notes was known to the Federal banking officials led to an inquiry into the possible causes for his subterfuge. A banker explained that it was employed to deceive the Clearing House Committee rather than the National Bank Examiners.

A statement of all excessive loans—that is, loans of more than 10 per cent. of the bank's capital—must be made to the Clearing House five times a year. By the manipulation of the memorandum notes bearing the names of various employes Walsh evaded the necessity of including these loans, amounting to $2,668,000, in the classification of "loans upon which any officer or Director is responsible either as signer or indorser." The notes were without signature or indorsement, but the Government contends that Walsh is liable, because the proceeds were turned over directly to his account.

Had the Clearing House Committee learned of the nature of these loans, it is said, it would have cut off the banker's privileges, which would have resulted in the destruction of his bank.

TRAINS MEET ON HIGH BANK.

WEST WINDHAM, N. H., March 17.—Because a regular freight train was mistaken for an extra train, three lives were lost in a head-on collision on the Boston and Maine Railroad early to-day. Hugh E. Shaw, engineer, of Nashua; S. H. MacLean, fireman, of Nashua, and F. R. Tarbell, brakeman, of Concord, N. H., were killed.

The accident happened at a point about half way between West Windham and Hudson Centre. The trains were both extras. They came together at a spot where the tracks run on a thirty-foot embankment. Both engines were smashed, fifteen cars were derailed, and several of them rolled down the bank.

Investigations as to the cause of the collision showed that the trains had received orders to meet at West Windham. No. 341 arrived first at that station, and while it was standing on the siding a regular early morning freight from Nashua went by. Believing that this was the other extra, the men on No. 341 started ahead.

TRAIN WRECK DEAD, 22

Latest Estimate Also Gives Number of Injured as 22.

PUEBLO, Col., March 17.—Twenty-two dead and twenty-two injured to-night make up the latest estimate of the casualties in the wreck of the two Denver and Rio Grande passenger trains at Adobe, Col., Friday morning. Only seven of the bodies have been positively identified owing to the disfigurement of victims by fire.

It developed to-day that S. F. Lively, who was the regular day operator at Swallows, and whose negligence caused the wreck, had, besides performing his own duties, worked on Thursday night for William Van Deusen, the night operator. Van Deusen is said to have absented himself from the station on Thursday night without permission from his superiors. Both men have been discharged by the railway officials.

A Coroner on Monday will begin an investigation of the accident.

MORAN SHIP PLANT SOLD.

Eastern Capitalists Associated with the Griscoms Obtain Control.

SEATTLE, Washington, March 17.—Robert Moran, President of the Moran Brothers' Company, builders of the battleship Nebraska, announced to-day the sale of the control of their company to Eastern capitalists associated with the Griscoms of Philadelphia. The consideration, while not stated, is known to be between $2,500,000 and $3,500,000.

J. V. Patterson, who has been the naval architect for and has had complete charge of the construction and maintenance of the transatlantic fleet of the International Navigation Company for the past ten years, will be associated in the management with George H. Higbee, lately manager of the International Navigation Company and of the Empire Line. A new corporation will be organized bearing the title of the Moran Company.

The Moran Brothers' shipbuilding plant was established in Seattle in 1882.

Blackburn Opposes Appointment.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The nomination of Alfred E. Holton to be United States Attorney for the Western District of North Carolina was considered to-day by a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Judiciary. No decision was reached. Objection to the appointment was made by Representative Blackburn, on the ground that Holton had engineered a political persecution of him in relation to his recent indictments.

SUBWAY STATIONS STILL DIM.

Electricians Fail to Find the Cable That Supplies Lights.

Subway stations in the Bronx were still dimly lighted with lanterns and a few bulbs switched on from the third rail. All efforts to find Friday afternoon's break in the cable supplying the lights proved unsuccessful. Electricians who have worked constantly for thirty-six hours are beginning to wonder if they ever will find it.

The cable, known as the "No. 2 feeder," supplies the current for all the lights on the stations of the Broadway and Lenox branches north of Columbus Circle. Last Summer it took forty-eight hours to find a break in it.

Late yesterday afternoon the cable between Columbus Circle and the mouth of the tunnel under the Harlem River was cleared and switched in on another feeder, so the stations as far north as 135th Street were properly lighted. The trouble it is believed is in the Harlem River tunnel, where the dampness and moisture eats into the coverings on the cables.

KERBY NOW LIEUT. COLONEL.

After a hot campaign Major John Edward Kerby has been elected Lieutenant Colonel of the Eighth Regiment, over Col. Jarvis's candidate, Capt. John Jay Cowdry. Kerby received 16 votes and Cowdry 11.

Col. Jarvis openly favored the election of Capt. Cowdry, who was fifth senior Captain, over the heads of Major Kerby and Major Robert Edwards. The election was held late Friday night.

Col. Jarvis will have now, it is said, to face an opposition to his administration, unless the two factions come together in harmony, which is not thought to be likely at present.

Lieut. Col. Kerby first joined the National guard as a private in Company G, in 1882. Before being elected Major in 1898 he served in the grades of Corporal, First Lieutenant, and Captain. He served with the Eighth Regiment, New York Volunteers, during the war with Spain, holding the rank of Major.

WIRELESS BALKS STOWAWAY.

The Alliança Hails a Sister Ship and Tranships Him to Colon.

The Panama liner Alliança, from Colon for New York, picked up New York by wireless telegraphy yesterday, when 150 miles south of Sandy Hook, and notified her New York agents that she had saved Ellis Island the trouble of sending back to Colon a stowaway. The stowaway was transshipped to the Colon, of the same line, south bound. He was a Frenchman and was not discovered until the Alliança was midway between Fortune and Cattle Islands.

The Colon and Alliança were having a wireless conversation, and immediately wireless conversation, and immediately the Captain of the Alliança asked the commander of the Colon if he would meet him half way and take the stowaway back to Panama. Ten hours later the two ships met at a designated point, and the stowaway was sent in a rowboat to the Colon.

DRESS CAUGHT, WOMAN HURT.

An Elevated Train Dragged Her Along the Station Platform.

With her dress caught in the door of a north-bound Second Avenue elevated train, Mrs. Mary Hartlieb of 347 First Avenue was dragged the length of the station platform at Nineteenth Street early last night. She was taken to Bellevue Hospital suffering from concussion of the brain and internal injuries. Her three-year-old daughter, Nellie, whom she was holding by the hand, was also dragged for some distance and received bruises about the head.

John McCarty, the ticket chopper, saw that the woman's skirt was caught and shouted for the guard on the rear car to pull the emergency brake, which he did, bringing the train to a standstill just in time to save the woman from dropping on the track.

After the woman was released the train sped on uptown. No arrests were made.

NORMAL ALUMNAE TO MEET.

Want the Public to Know What Their Settlement Is Doing.

The Alumnae of the Normal College, most of whom are teachers in the public schools in this city, will hold a meeting in behalf of the Normal College Alumnae Settlement, 446 East Seventy-second Street, on Wednesday next, at 3:30 o'clock, in the college chapel, Park Avenue and Sixty-eighth Street. The object is to let the college graduates, the undergraduates, and the public know of the important work being done by the alumnae in one of the most congested districts in the city.

Miss Lillian Wald of the Nurses' Settlement will tell of her experiences in fifteen years of Settlement work. Dr. John Lovejoy Elliott of the Hudson Guild and the Society for Ethical Culture will speak on "Settlement Ideals." Miss Grace Elliston of the "Lion and the Mouse" Company, will read a paper.

BONNARD BRONZE WORKS FIRE

Two alarms were turned in for a fire which started last night on the second floor of the building, occupied by the Henry Bonnard Bronze Company, 430-444 West Sixteenth Street. The building adjoins the big factory of the National Biscuit Company, which fronts on Tenth Avenue. The second alarm was sent in as a precautionary measure.

The fire was discovered by Policeman Young of the West Twentieth Street Station soon after 6 o'clock. It started immediately over the boiler. The flames were extinguished with a loss of but $500.

The Henry Bonnard Bronze Company is the best-known concern in its line of business in the country. It was brought into prominence a few years ago, when it was furnishing the bronze work for the mansion of Senator William A. Clark of Montana. Senator Clark wanted his work done to the exclusion of everything else, and commenced negotiations for the purchase of the plant, which were finally successful.

Many celebrated pieces of bronze have been turned out by the Bonnard Company, which was the first to undertake the casting of statuary. It turned out the Farragut Statue, which stands in Madison Square; the statue of Gen. Sherman, in Central Park; the Nathan Hale Statue, and many others equally important.

CHOSE TO DIE WITH GIRL.

BRANTFORD, Ont., March 17.—Stephen Cox and Miss Ruth Hinchcliff, while walking across a 1,000-foot railway bridge near St. George yesterday, were struck by a train and hurled to the ground, 70 feet below. Both were killed.

Cox could have saved his own life, but he chose to remain with the girl. They were Salvation Army immigrants just arrived from London.

WHAT IT WOULD COST TO BUY OUR RAILWAYS

$12,500,000,000 If the Japanese Plan Were Followed.

SAYS PROBLEM MAY ARISE

Senator Declares If the Lines Are Not to Own the Government They May Have to be Nationalized.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Japanese plan for the nationalization of the railroads caused some comment here to-day, coming, as it does, at a time when the subject of railroad control is occupying so much attention. One Senator had this to say about it:

"Unless we can work out the problem of railroad control within the next few years we shall find that we have reached the situation where the Government will either have to own the railroads or the railroads will own the Government."

Some of the railroad experts in Washington were figuring up to-day what it would cost the United States to nationalize the railroad on the plan the Japanese have adopted, and produced a staggering set of figures. The gross earnings of the railroads in 1903 were a few millions under $2,000,000,000, and the next year approximately $2,000,000,000. Operating expenses and taxes were approximately $1,400,000,000 for each year, leaving net earnings of about $625,000,000.

The statistics of the Inter-State Commerce Commission show a capitalization of $13,200,000,000, but that includes about $2,500,000,000 which is duplicated through railroad holdings in allied or subsidiary companies, making the actual capitalization approximately $10,700,000,000. This accords practically with the figures of Prof. Henry C. Adams, the statistician of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, who has estimated the commercial value of the railroads of the United States at $11,244,000,000.

On the basis of the net earnings the cost to the United States of taking over the railroads on the Japanese plan would be something like $12,500,000,000.

Japan's project for nationalizing her railroads, which has been approved by the Japanese House of Representatives, will not be as far-reaching immediately, Consul General Uchida said yesterday, as the cable messages from Tokio would imply.

"At present," he declared, "six of the principal private railroads will be purchased. Eventually the Government will take over all the roads in the islands, but this will be done gradually. The nationalization of the railroads is only one part of the Government's plans for promotion of commerce and industry. Of course the possession of the roads is of strategic importance.

"Government ownership is not untried in Japan. The Government built the first roads and now operates more than one-third the total mileage of the country."

According to Mr. Uchida the stockholders will be paid in bonds, and no cash will change hands. The six roads which the Government intends to take over immediately operate about 2,500 out of the 5,000 miles which is the total of Japan's railroad systems. Of the remainder, 1,344 are owned and run by the State.

EXPELLED FROM ARCANUM.

F. Z. Wilcox Said to Have Defamed the Supreme Council.

ROME, N. Y., March 17.—Last November charges were preferred against Frank Z. Wilcox, a member of Central City Council, No. 383, Royal Arcanum, of Syracuse. Wilcox was the leader of the opposition to the increase of rates by the Supreme Council. The charges set forth that Wilcox had furnished to Syracuse newspapers articles defaming the members of the Supreme Council and containing charges of dishonesty.

Supreme Regent Wiggins, to whom the charges were submitted, appointed a trial committee, which found the accused guilty and recommended his expulsion from the Royal Arcanum.

The Supreme Regent to-day approved the findings of the committee and expelled Wilcox.

FLOATING THE CEARENSE.

Stranded Steamer Moved Yesterday—Her Cargo Being Lightered.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 17.—Wrecking crews were at work all the afternoon on the steamship Cearense, which grounded on the shoals off Island Beach yesterday, and it is believed to-night that the vessel will be floated. The ship has been already moved eighteen feet toward deep water.

The million-dollar cargo of rubber, sugar, coffee, and nuts is being taken out and placed in lighters alongside the stranded ship. Three big wrecking tugs are standing by, ready to make another effort to drag the steamship off the shoals as soon as it is believed she has been sufficiently lightened. Capt. Mason and his crew of forty men are aboard the vessel, and are hard at work getting out the cargo.

EXPENSIVE ROAD IN OHIO.

County Paid $2,000 a Mile for It—What Users Think.

CINCINNATI, March 17.—The Drake Committee to-day continued investigation of the county's purchase of various turnpikes.

C. P. Bennett, a resident on the line of the Ohio Turnpike, testified that the road was in very poor condition, and that he could do better with a wagon in the ditch than on the pike. This pike was bought by the county for $2,000 a mile from Judge Howard Ferris.

Charles P. Maddux, a Trustee of Anderson Township, said that he would not have taken the Ohio Turnpike as a gift; that during the past few years the traction companies had taken one-third of the roadway, and that the County Commissioners who bought the road could have learned of its poor condition simply by asking residents along its borders.

HURTS OUR TRADE IN ASIA.

Steamship Combination Discriminates Against This Country.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Steamship discrimination against American trade is reported from Singapore by Consul General Wilber, who says a combination has been effected between the Barber Line, the Fast Asiatic Line, and some of the Standard Oil steamers, all of which are under the English flag, and the Hamburg-American Line. The freight rates between South Asia and America have been greatly advanced.

This is a move on the part of the European shipping conference to aid English and German dealers in East Indian products to regain control of the business which they have been gradually losing.

The Consul General believes that what is needed throughout the Orient is an American line of steamers under the American flag running from New York through the Suez Canal entirely independent of any combination.

CANADA DOESN'T NEED US.

Minister Emmerson Tells Canadian Society Why Reciprocity Failed.

The Canadian Society of New York held its tenth annual dinner last night in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Astor. The President of the society, Wallace Downey, presided.

Sir Percy Sanderson, the British Consul General, spoke briefly on the equality of British laws, and Henry R. Emmerson, Minister of Railways of Canada, presented figures showing the great growth of the Dominion in the last ten years. He asserted that the leading men in the railway, banking, and other great businesses of the United States were largely native-born Canadians. He urged his fellow-countrymen to wave their flags here as proudly as the Irish, German, and the others do. Continuing he said:

"I always objected to the word American as descriptive of the United States. The Dominion of Canada should be known as British America and Canadians as British Americans. Our land is that of the new century, as the United States was of the past century. The trade per capita, comparing the two nations, is, British American, $90; United States, $30.

"We of the Dominion no longer look for Eastern trade, but look westward to the Orient, and we are in the position to command that trade.

"New England is filled with a desire for reciprocity. That there is not now reciprocity is not our fault. We wanted reciprocity, but you wouldn't have it, and without it we are doing very well, thank you. Our great West is filling up with immgrants, many from your States. That is only fair play when you consider the brains and brawn you had from us to build up your great country."

McCARTER COULDN'T ARGUE.

Jersey Attorney General Quits an Election Case After Objections.

Special to The New York Times.

FREEHOLD, N. J., March 17.—Attorney General Robert McCarter had a setback here to-day when he attempted to take a hand in the Close-Francis shrievalty contest. Justice Hendrickson was to decide whether C. Asa Francis, the present incumbent, should remain Sheriff, or Charles E. Close, his Democratic opponent, be seated.

Mr. McCarter began argument on a marked ballot when E. W. Arrowsmith, counsel for Mr. Close, arraigned the State officer for taking a partisan attitude, calling it an act of impropriety. The Attorney General said if his action could be thus misconstrued he would withdraw from the case. He did, and took the first train out of town.

Arguments were made then on two classes of reserved ballots, and Justice Hendrickson reserved decision until March 26, when the County Board of Elections will sit again. Francis had a majority on the face of the returns of 85. This has been reduced to 28 by a recount. The fifty ballots considered to-day, if thrown out, would turn the result in favor of Close.

MURDERED WIFE FOR GREED.

First Degree Verdict in the Case of John Schidlofski.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 17.—The jury in the case of John Schidlofski, charged with murdering his wife, brought in a verdict this afternoon of guilty in the first degree.

It was brought out in the trial that the crime was prompted by the fact that the woman had deceived him as to her age and did not possess as much money as he thought she did.

In his argument for the Commonwealth District Attorney George A. Sanderson said:

"This is not an ordinary case. Schidlofski took this woman to the altar and promised to protect her through life. She loved him; he never loved or cared for her. On that day, which should have been sacred to him, he inquired how much money his wife had, and clinching his hand declared: 'I'll soon see whether or not she has as much money as she said she had.' Money was his one thought from the day he married until the day he killed her."

To Take Preusser from Albany.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 17.—Justice Betts to-day ordered that Richard E. Preusser, slayer of Myles McDonnell, be turned over to the Sheriff of Oneida County, a change of venue for the trial having been taken to that county. He is now in prison in Albany County.

GOV. HIGGINS RESENTS PRESIDENT'S ATTITUDE

Does Not Relish Talk of Hughes as Gubernatorial Candidate.

"HANDS OFF," ALBANY'S CRY

Odell Denies That He or His Friends Have Been Thinking of Running Stuyvesant Fish.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, March 17.—The continued talk in Federal circles of Charles E. Hughes for Governor has further complicated matters in the State machine here, and while the President may have everything mapped out to his satisfaction, the fact is that Gov. Higgins is not with him and with the Federal slatemakers in their evident determination to turn him down for a renomination, or even, as it appears now, without offering him the small consolation of being a factor.

Events so far show that the Governor is beginning to resent the attitude of the Washington leaders in fixing up State politics, and one of the evidences of it is that for the last ten days there has not been a hint of any one to take ex-Gov. Odell's place as State Chairman. More and more the truth of Odell's epigram, delivered the night of the legislative correspondents' dinner, that the opposition lacked both courage and a candidate, is making itself manifest, and nothing could further clinch his position than the continued talk of Hughes for Governor.

When Congressman E. B. Vreeland was named for the State Chairmanship it was believed that the Governor would be brought into line, for the reason that Vreeland is his closest personal friend and the Congressman from his district. For a while it looked as if the reorganization of the State Committee would be allowed to go on in this way, when the whole matter went up in the air by the launching of the Hughes boom for Governor.

It was then that Gov. Higgins recognized, as he probably had not done before, that there was a plan on the part of Washington to have him pull the chestnuts out of the fire, and what more than anything else made the Governor dislike the rôle of cat's-paw was that his friends put the scheme up to him plainly and asked him what he was going to do about it.

When he represented to the emissaries of the President that to be used to further the Federal programme as regards ousting Odell and then being counted out of the running as regards the Governorship did not dovetail, he was told that he must take the mention of Hughes's name in a Pickwickian sense. That assurance was not enough to satisfy the Executive, and since Hughes loomed on the horizon the programme for the State Chairmanship has had a definite change.

What Gov. Higgins desires now more than anythig else is to make a record for constructive legislation and he sees his chance to make it this year with the insurance legislation, the many railroad bills, changes in the tax law and the other revolutionary measures now pending. To get these on the books as statute law there must be no interference, no party squabbles, and particularly no fight with the lively corpse of Benjamin B. Odell, which is beginning to show resurrectional tendencies that put even William M. Ivins in the shade.

Odell still has friends enough in both houses of the Legislature to make Gov. Higgins's road to a renomination a particularly rocky one, if, indeed, they have not the power to make ducks and drakes of all the Governor's plans.

The President will hardly feel that his programme is safe until State Chairman Odell is out of power. Mr. Roosevelt, it is pointed out here, either does not see or will not see that the attempt to make himself the political dictator of the State is making friends for Odell and putting Gov. Higgins in a defensive, if not an openly rebellious, attitude.

"Hands off!" as regards Washington, seems to be the cry of the hour with all the various factions of the State machine.

Chairman Odell of the Republican State Committee was at headquarters in the Fifth Avenue Hotel yesterday, and there he denied absolutely the report that he or any of his friends had been planning to take up Stuyvesant Fish as a Gubernatorial possibility.

"In the first place I do not know Mr. Fish," he said when he was questioned about the report from Washington. "I would not know Mr. Fish if I met him face to face in the street; and, in the second place, it is altogether too early to discusse candidates for the Governorship, even constructively. I have not been thinking of Mr. Fish in any way, and as far as I know I have not heard of any one else who has been thinking of making Mr. Fish the Republican candidate for the office."

"Has any one asked you to call a meeting of the Republican State Committee for the purpose of reorganization or otherwise?" was asked of the Chairman.

"No," replied the ex-Governor. Then with a smile he said: "Of course, I have seen a suggestion or so thrown out in the newspapers to that effect, but I have not had a request from any member of the committee."

"Therefore no meeting will be called in the near future?"

"Not that I know of at present," he replied.

During the day at State headquarters the Chairman met nearly a score of the Manhattan district leaders and went over various maters with them, being especially interested in the coming Senatorial and Assembly District apportionment, the first by the Legislature and the second by the Board of Aldermen. The Governor expects New York County to get one additional Senator and a couple more Assemblymen at least, and he is interested to know where they are to be placed.

President Parsons of the County Committee made known yesterday the personnel of the Committee of Seven which the Executive Committee authorized him to appoint to prepare a plan of apportionment, to be approved by the County Committee. William C. Wilson, is Chairman of the Apportionment Committee, and the other members include Senator A. R. Page, William H. Ten Eyck, Abraham Gruber, Charles S. Adler, John P. Windolph, and John Shea. They will work out their Senate apportionment on the basis of 149,000 citizen residents of each Senate district, as a result of the figures decided upon by the Secretary of State at Albany.

Practically the present Twenty-fifth, Twenty-seventh, and Twenty-ninth Districts will be kept for Senator Elsberg, and it is planned to carve out from the present Nineteenth and Twenty-first Assembly Districts enough Republican election districts to give Senator Saxe a good district. Practically all of the Twenty-third District and part of the Thirty-first will be utilized to give Senator Page a reasonably certain district.

Republican leaders believe that in the Assembly apportionment five of the districts below Fourteenth Street now will be wiped out by being joined with other districts, while the uptown districts will be cut in twos and threes in many instances, to make up for this and for the new members that may be allowed. This move will retire several well-known Tammany and Republican district leaders, but just who will go cannot be determined until the Senate apportionment is completed.

HUGHES FOR PRESIDENT.

"Busted Life Agent" with a Premature Boom Squelched on Insurance Train.

J. D. Atkisson, who described himself as "a busted life agent," boarded the special train which carried some of the insurance representatives to Albany for the Joint Insurance Committee hearing the other day. Atkisson had a satchel full of imitation silver fobs with leather bands, the metal bearing a prototype of Charles E. Hughes and the inscription:

HUGHES. 1908.

Atkisson got out his fobs and offered them for sale at 50 cents each. He announced that he was booming Mr. Hughes for the Presidential nomination in 1908.

"What's all this?" asked one of the insurance men, reaching out for a fob.

"Let every delegate secure one of the Hughes Presidential fobs," megaphoned Atkisson. "We'll show the Legislature that we want a 'square deal.' In buying one of these fobs you confer a favor upon a busted life agent, and most of you know what that is."

Some of the insurance men did not like Atkisson's scheme.

"Cut it out, or you'll have to get off the train," said one in a belligerent tone.

"Oh, very well," replied the canvasser, complacently. "Instead of making it 1908 I'll make it 1923."

He closed his satchel and he and the Hughes fobs disappeared.

MANY QUAIL MAY STARVE.

Snowfall Cuts Off Their Food Supply—Some Join Farmyard Fowl.

Special to The New York Times.

EASTPORT, L. I., March 17.—The heavy snowfall of Thursday and accompanying cold will, it is feared, destroy many quail which have survived the hitherto mild Winter. Much concern exists in the sportsmen's clubs in this district in consequence.

Since the fall of the snow many covies of quail, deprived of their usual source of food, and driven by hunger, have visited the farmyards and mingled with the domestic fowl to get the food thrown out by the farmers.

The Superintendents of the Country and Eastport Gun Clubs have also sent men with grain into the fields to distribute where the birds congregate.

ENGINEER RICE ATTACKS SUBWAY TRAIN SERVICE

Schedules Not Lived Up To—Public Partly to Blame.

NEED MORE EXPRESS TRAINS

Inspectors Counted 160 Passengers in Some Cars in the Rush Hours—That Condition Irremediable.

Chief Engineer George S. Rice of the Rapid Transit Commission has filed with the board a report which puts the blame partly on the public and partly on the company for the congestion in the Subway at certain times of the day. The report was prepared by the Chief Engineer under a resolution which Controller Metz got the board to adopt a few weeks ago, and which called for data to show whether or not the present train service in the Subway is adequate.

In his report Mr. Rice says that he employed forty men on March 4, 5, and 6 to look into the management of the Subway service. The Interborough officers furnished the official schedules. The Inspectors found that the schedules were not maintained and that to a great extent there was no evidence of any attempt to maintain them.

"It is clearly apparent," says Mr. Rice in the report, "that passengers do not properly distribute themselves through the trains at any hour of the day, the two end cars being less crowded than those in the centre. In many instances the central cars are crowded with standers while there are seats vacant in the end cars.

"In the Sunday train service it is shown that either north or south bound express trains during some portion of their run south of Ninety-sixth Street station carry passengers standing. On Sundays the express trains are five-car trains. In order to provide adequate service on Sundays it appears that seven or eight car express trains should be run during the whole Sunday schedule, and a close study of the observations which have been made, and which is not shown on the charts, also shows that in order to accommodate the churchgoers on Sunday morning, the express-train service should be begun at an earlier hour.

The local service on Sundays seems to be very nearly a proper service, particularly if the suggested changes in the express service, as stated above, should be carried out. We notice that the schedules and observed number of trains running during the afternoon hours corresponded closely until about after 7 P. M., when the Lenox Avenue trains are increased to five-car trains instead of three-car trains. From 2 o'clock in the afternoon until midnight on Sunday, the Lenox Avenue locals are generally in a crowded condition. The Broadway locals during the same hours carry fewer passengers, and consequently the average condition of the trains south of Ninety-sixth Street is not shown crowded during the afternoon on Sunday. The Lenox Avenue locals on Sunday afternoons run at about six-minute intervals; to therefore provide adequate service, it is obvious that the interval between these Lenox Avenue locals should be reduced during this time.

"Now, with respect to week-day service: As to the express service, it is noticeable that from the beginning of the service in the early morning until 9 o'clock at night, either north or south bound express trains, for some portion of their run below Ninety-sixth Street, carry standing passengers. Between the hours of 7 and 9 A. M. and 5 and 7 P. M., express trains are run approximately at the minimum intervals practicable, and are filled with passengers to their maximum carrying capacity.

"In one case as many as 80 passengers have been counted in a half car during such hours, or 160 passengers to a car. During these hours it seems almost impracticable to provide any better service. During the other hours of the day, both morning and afternoon, the express train interval south of Ninety-sixth Street is increased, ranging from six minutes' interval between 6 and 7 A. M. and 7 and 8 P. M., to a little less than a three-minute interval between 9 and 10 A. M. and 4 and 5 P. M., for eight-car trains. Between 7 and 8 P. M. some of the expresses are reduced to five cars, and after 8 P. M. approximately all express trains are reduced to five cars. To provide adequate service for express trains, therefore, eight-car trains should be maintained throughout the day from 6 in the morning until 9 o'clock at night, and more express trains should be run from 6 to 7 A. M. and from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M. and from 7 P. M. to 9 P M.

"As to the local trains week days, between 7 and 9 o'clock in the morning southbound Lenox Avenue cars, and all southbound locals below Grand Central Station, are crowded. Between 5 P. M. and 7 P. M. all locals north of Grand Central Station and all Lenox Avenue locals are crowded; these, of course, being in the rush hours, and the interval is a little over two minutes. It seems that the running interval of the local trains should be reduced during rush hours; at all other hours of the day the local service seems to be adequate."

Mr. Rice says his Inspectors made 8,000 pages of notes, and that his full report will cover all the matters shown by those notes. Controller Metz said that when the full report is in he and Commissioner Smith will draft some recommendations providing for better service. He will ask the Rapid Transit Commission to adopt these and send them to the Interborough management.

SAYS JONES WILL TESTIFY.

A Declaration from the Houston Attorney for Patrick.

Special to The New York Times.

HOUSTON, Texas, March 17.—"When the time comes, and if it proves necessary to save the life of Albert T. Patrick, I am informed that Valet Jones will himself go to New York and take the steps necessary to assist us in our case."

This statement was made by Judge A. R. Railey, the Houston attorney who procured the evidence presented in the recent attempt to obtain a new trial for the convicted murderer of William M. Rice.

"In New York they kept promising to produce Jones, and they never did it," continued Judge Railey. "I am reasonably sure that the District Attorney did not know where Jones was. Since my return I have been informed by Miss Gaillard and others who have been in communication with members of the Jones family that not only the ex-valet, but his mother, will go to New York to the rescue of Patrick."

LAWSON TO THE PRESIDENT.

Calls Attention to What He Calls Fraudulent Use of Banks.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, March 17.—Mr. Lawson has just sent this telegram:

"To Theodore Roosevelt, President of the United States:

"The fraudulent use of National banks has become so recklessly bold of late as to endanger the people's savings. The latest device—National banks guarantee brokerage houses against loss in big stock gambling deals and swindles. It is unnecessary for me to call your attention to the fact that such guarantee is the equivalent of loans which are prohibited by law.

"An illustration: The firm of ——, members of the New York Stock Exchange, has been guaranteed by certain banks in Butte, Mont., against loss arising from a stock-gambling swindle known as United Copper-Butte Coalition-North Butte. There is over $100,000,000 involved in this transaction. Because of this guarantee the said brokerage firm is issuing its guarantee to banks, trust companies, and brokers throughout the country against loss in the making of loans and purchases and sales of these stocks, and is making said guarantee responsible for stock privileges to an extent that may mean a loss to banks of much more than their entire deposits.

"THOMAS W. LAWSON.

"P. S.—March 17, 1906.

"I have and want no quarrel with the house involved, and therefore do not make its name public at this time, but as I intend to stop at no legitimate means of staying this gigantic swindle, I herewith notify them that I must do so if certain conditions come into force during the next few days. T. W. L."

STORY OF SHOOTING OF REFUGEES WAS TRUE

Confirmation of Mr. Rothschild's Charge Against Russia.

HAD NC PASSPORTS—SLAIN

Reactionaries Plot to Keep Count Witte in Ignorance of the Imminence of Massacres of Jews.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—In spite of the official denial of the shooting of undesirable refugees sent back to Russia from England private information has been obtained tending partially to support the charge.

Many of the refugees were sent to Baltic ports, where the authorities are showing no mercy to revolutionists in spite of the Emperor's instructions to display greater leniency.

When the refugees disembarked, having fled from Russia without viséd passports, they were regarded as suspects, and some of them received short shrift.

There is already evidence that only a check, and not a defeat, has been administered to the reactionaries who are conducting the anti-Semitic agitation. Premier Witte, after he had forced a decision of the Cabinet to suppress the agitation, knowing the audacity of his opponents, took the precaution privately to ask the Jewish leaders to notify him instantly whenever the Jewish inhabitants of any locality were threatened in order to place him in a position to insist that measures be taken to protect them.

The Jewish leaders, however, now allege that the reactionary clique, with the connivance of sympathetic local Governors General, is boldly arranging to block such warnings. The leaders say they have proof that orders have been given at several places, specifically citing Vitebsk, not to transmit messages to the Premier warning him of the imminence of trouble. It is further charged, but proof is lacking, that this was done with the knowledge of Interior Minister Durnovo.

It has been established that Count Podgorichanie, Chief of the Gendarmerie of Gomel, who armed a mob there, while ostentatiously dismissed by M. Durnovo, was in reality only transferred to a better post at Yalta, Crimea.

The members of the Council of the Empire who voted for the abolition of the death penalty have received threatening letters from the "Black Hundreds."

Formal regulations have been promulgated prohibiting the purchase or sale of explosives under the penalty of imprisonment at hard labor for from four to five years. If it is proved that the explosives were intended for revolutionary purposes the penalty is fifteen years at hard labor.

Capt. Shamansk, who refused to order his company to fire on the people at the time of the riots at Moscow last Autumn, has been sentenced by a court-martial to be dismussed from the service and to be confined for eighteen months in a fortress.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Adolf Kraus of this city, President of the Executive Committee of the Independent Order of B'Nai B'rith, has received a cablegram from Count Witte in reply to a letter from Mr. Kraus, who informed the Russian Premier of the reports that a great massacre of the Jews was to take place at Easter, and asked if the Government were in a position to protect the lives and property of Jews. The reply of Count Witte is as follows:

"Adolf Kraus, Chicago:

"I am sure you have no doubts that I cannot approve violence, no matter against whom it is directed. The deplorable events that have taken place were the result of riots. You may be persuaded the Government will use all possible measures to prevent violence against peaceable inhabitants without regard to nationality. "COUNT WITTE."

The British Aliens law went into effect last Jan. 1 and almost all the persons arriving at British ports and sent back under its provisions have been Russian Jews.

On Thursday night the Hon. Lionel Walter Rothschild, member of Parliament for the Aylesbury Division of Buckinghamshire and eldest son and heir of Lord Rothschild, in a speech at Chesham on the question of the exclusion of aliens declared that he possessed irrefutable evidence that every emigrant from Russia who had been sent back to that country from England had been shot at the Russian frontier without trial.

Mr. Rothschild is a Liberal Unionist and an opponetn of the Aliens law. He is not regared as the sort of man to make a grave accusation without cause. He is well known as a scientist, and such speeches as he has made in Parliament have shown careful inquiry into whatever subject he discussed. He is a Trustee of the British Museum and the author of numberous articles on zoology.

The story about the shooting of returned refugees was indignantly denied by the Russian Government.

RUSSIAN VOTERS SCARED.

Police Officials Accused of Intimidating the Peasantry.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—Charges of interference on the part of the local police officials to prevent free expression of will by the peasants in the preliminary elections to the County Conventions are increasing.

The Nasha Zhisn says it has investigated the rural elections in St. Petersburg Province, and alleges that the authorities everywhere forbade popular meetings called by Liberals, but did not interfere with meetings called by priests and other reactionaries. In many places the peasants were afraid to vote on account of the police at the polls.

Hundreds of representatives of the Liberal parties were arrested, and in some cases there were even military demonstrations. The Government agents openly threatened the peasants with repressions if certain persons were elected. The peasants from three districts have sent telegrams of protest to Emperor Nicholas. One of the peasant districts drew up instructions to its delegates to vote for the expropriation of Crown and State lands and a portion of the private lands.

While the returns generally show a large proportion of priests and village elders elected, in some provinces, especially in the west, the peasants displayed great independenec at their meetings and talked only of a division of lands. Their hostility toward the noblemen and big landlords was intense, and they defeated all the priests and village officials.

PAY DIRECTOR FOSTER WEDS.

Marries an English Schoolmistress Whom He Met Ten Years Ago.

LONDON, March 17.—Pay Director Joseph Foster, United States Army, retired, was married this afternoon at St. George's Church, Hanover Square, to Miss Josephine Hunt, a schoolmistress of Gravesend, Kent.

The marriage is a sequel to a romantic courtship. Pay Director Foster, while Paymaster of an American warship off Gravesend ten years ago, met Miss Hunt, and some years later the Paymaster, who was then a widower, came across Miss Hunt's card among his papers and started a correspondence with her which resulted in to-day's ceremony.

Pay Director Foster was born in Gloucester, Mass., in 1841. He served with the South Atlantic Blockading Squadron 1862-5, was Fleet Paymaster, North Atlantic Squadron, 1899-1901, and was attached to the armored cruiser New York in 1900, and to the battleship Kearsarge 1900-01. In 1901 he was commissioned as Pay Director and subsequently retired. His home is at Portsmouth, N. H.

CASTELLANE SAYS HE IS ILL.

Fails to Meet Countess in Court—She Refuses Reconciliation.

PARIS, March 17.—Judge Ditte, President of the First Tribunal of the Seine, summoned the Count and Countess Boni de Castellane this afternoon for the purpose of seeking to effect a reconciliation under the wife's last application for absolute divorce. The Countess (formerly Anna Gould) was present with Edmond Kelly, her lawyer. The Count's attorney presented a certificate from a doctor saying that the Count was ill and unable to be present in court.

During the examination the Countess said that it was her intention to persist in the application for divorce. The non-appearance of the defendant led the court to enter a temporary default against him, and the hearing was adjourned for a fortnight.

CABLE CHESS MATCH PLANS.

British University Team to Oppose Americans Selected.

LONDON, March 17.—The local arrangements have been completed for the intervarsity cable chess match March 24-31, between Oxford and Cambridge and Cornell, Brown, and the University of Pennsylvania for the Isaac L. Rice international chess trophy. The Oxford-Cambridge team has been selected. The play here will take place in the Inns-of-Court Hotel.

On the showing of the teams in the tournament held in New York during Christmas week, Pennsylvania will get three representatives on the American team, Brown two, and Cornell one. This end of the match will be contested from the Villa Julia, on Riverside Drive, New York.

A CUBAN TREASURER GONE.

Santiago Province Said to Have Been Robbed of $30,000.

SANTIAGO, Cuba, March 17.—Blas Molinet, the Provincial Treasurer, has been missing for four days and his whereabouts are unknown.

An investigation made to-day, it is alleged, revealed a shortage in the treasury that will approximate $30,000.

Molinet is bonded by the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Maryland in the sum of $10,000.

REBELS THREATENING FEZ.

Pretender Said to be Preparing to Attack the Moorish Capital.

ORAN, Algeria, March 17.—The forces of the Pretender to the throne of Morocco have had another skirmish with the Moroccan troops, the rebels losing two men killed and seven wounded.

It is reported that the Pretender is preparing to make an attack upon Fez, the capital.

Stoessel Wants Nogi to Testify.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—The evidence taken in the course of the investigation into the surrender of Port Arthur by Gen. Stoessel, which probably will drag on for six weeks longer, will, it is said, heavily damage the reputation of Stoessel. He is now demanding that Gen. Nogi and other Japanese commanders be summoned as witnesses to testify to the heroic character of the defense.

American Steamer Ashore.

PUNTA ARENAS, Straits of Magellan, Chile, March 17.—The news reached here to-day that the American steamer Olympian, Capt. Weise, from Portland, Ore., and San Francisco, for Boston, Mass., which puassed here March 10, carried away her anchor chains and went ashore in Possession Bay March 13, and is now imbedded three feet in the gravel beach.

Derelict Steamer in Liners' Path.

PLYMOUTH, Eng., March 17.—The American Line steamer St. Louis, from New York, March 10, which arrived here this morning, reports having passed March 13 close to an abandoned steamer, believed to be the Dunmore (British) from Cardiff for Newport News, before reported abandoned Jan. 19. The derelict was directly in the track of the St. Louis, but the clear weather enabled her to avoid a collision.

Dowie, Better, Starts for Mexico.

Roumanian King's Illness Denied.

BUCHAREST, March 17.—It is officially stated that there is no truth in the reports published in London newspapers this morning of the serious illness of King Charles of Roumania.

100-Mile-an-Hour Military Train.

KIEFF, March 17.—The trials here of a military train armed with machine-guns and quick-firers and intended for use in punitive expeditions are said to have developed a speed of a hundred miles an hour.

Reyes Not to Resign.

MADRID, March 17.—It is announced that Emperor William will visit Madrid in April, and elaborate fêtes are being planned, as evidence of the continued German-Spanish cordiality.

Girl Killed in a Runaway.

WESTERLY, R. I., March 17.—A horse which was pulling a carriage containing Orrin Stedman of North Stonington, Conn., and his two daughters ran away near this city to-day. Lena Stedman was instantly killed when the carriage was thrown against a telegraph pole. Caroline Stedman may die from her injuries. Mr. Stedman may live.

SAYS CONSOLIDATED GAS WANTED FIGURES RAISED

Expert Marks Asserts Its Inventory Was Unsatisfactory.

ANOTHER APPRAISER HIRED

As a Result, the Engineer Charges, Extravagant Values Were Placed on Plants Before Consolidation.

William D. Marks, a gas expert employed by the Corporation Counsel in the city's suits against the gas companies, makes the statement in The Progressive Age that the Consolidated Gas Company, when it was organized, discharged a man who was trying to make a fair inventory of the properties and employed another expert.

"From personal knowledge and information," says Engineer Marks, "the writer knows that he (William Farmer) was summarily ejected, and Thomas F. Rowland, a manufacturer of gas works, whose views were more liberal and in consonance with the views of the gentlemen consolidating these gas companies, was appointed to make an inventory. In this inventory he placed an extravagant valuation on the properties of the various companies, but even he could not reach the necessary $39,000,000 of share capital, and so $7,781,000 was added for the franchises of the New York companies.

"This is the first marked instance (in 1884) of promoters purchasing competing plants at exorbitant prices in order to create a practical monopoly and then adding to the values of this monopoly under the name of franchises; capitalizing it, and proceeding by extortion from the new company's patrons to obtain profits so much in excess of what might be called fair as to enable them to liberally recoup themselves for the extra outlay to which they had been subjected in previous purchases."

Mr. Marks's estimate of Thomas F. Rowland is interesting in the light of the eulogies of him by Charles F. Mathewson, the Consolidated attorney, before the State Gas Commission recently.

Mr. Mathewson, after some argument with Chairman Gunnison, succeeded in having inserted into the official record a witness's statement that as a maker of inventories Thomas F. Rowland was all he should be. In his article Mr. Marks speaks as follows of the capitalization of the Consolidated Gas Company.

"The various companies which did consolidate had an aggregate capital of $17,000,000, but the Consolidated Gas Company of New York City, which absorbed them, divided among them some $39,000,000 of securities and some $2,000,000 in cash, making a total increase of apparent investment of $24,000,000. In order to find a pretext for this increase of capitalization of exactly the same property, from $17,000,000 to $39,000,000 capital, William Farmer, an able engineer, standing at the head of his profession at that time, was engaged to make an inventory, but he had not proceeded far when it was discovered that he was giving such prices to the properties as would result from a fair and open competition in their construction."

Mr. Marks then tells of the employment of Mr. Rowland.

QUEENSLAND CROPS DAMAGED

Hurricane Wrecked Plantations—Steamer Said to Have Foundered.

VICTORIA, B. C., March 17.—The steamer Miowera arrived to-day from Australia and South Sea ports. She reports that the hurricane which devastated Tahiti was severely felt in Northern Queensland, 80 per cent. of the banana plantations being destroyed. Instead of the usual monthly shipment of 50,000 bunches, not more than 5,000 will be available for some months.

The steamer Scot is said to have foundered in the hurricane.

The volcanic eruption at Tofu, one of the outlying islands of the Friendly Group, is assuming greater proportions than that of Savaii in Samoa, but as it is in a basin 1,800 feet deep instead of on a mountain, as is Savaii, no damage has resulted.

An Auckland dispatch to Sydney newspapers brought by the Miowera says several native villages have been destroyed by the Savaii volcano, and there has been some loss of life.

ROW OVER WILD WEST SHOW.

Genoa Health and Municipal Authorities at Loggerheads.

GENOA, March 17.—A conflict between the Board of Health and the municipal authorities has arisen as the result of an order by the former prohibiting the encampment of Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show because of an alleged infectious disease among the horses. The municipal authorities, local associations, and tradesmen are opposed to this prohibition, saying that it is contrary to the interests of the city. The member of the Chamber of Deputies representing Genoa is being urged to have the Government interfere in the matter and to bring the question before Parliament if necessary.

NATIVE NEGRO'S VIRTUES.

Booker Washington Praises the Racial Qualities Found in Africa.

Booker T. Washington, President of Tuskegee Institute, before the League for Political Education yesterday said:

"Most people, in considering the American negro, overlook the fact that he had a civilization before being brought into America. Those who have touched the African most closely testify almost uniformly that before he is untouched or unspoiled by contact with the lower elements of Western civilization there is a certain rude honesty practiced which demands the respect of all who come in contact with him.

"It is very seldom, for example, that there is any stealing among these untouched and unspoiled aborigines. There is a strict form of government, which recognizes the authority of the King, or Chief, and of the head of the family. Their legal practices, as seen through the operations of their courts, would do credit to a much more highly civilized people. Crime is strictly, but legally, punished. While in most cases they are a polygamous people, at the same time polygamy is strictly regulated by law, and every one who violates the sanctity of family life is punished by death.

"It is difficult for the average American to appreciate this, because we who live in this country never feel quite sure that another individual is truly civilized unless he speaks the English language, eats American food, wears American clothing, and worships God in the same manner that we worship Him.

"For 200 years in slavery the negro was engaged in unlearning much that he had learned in his native country, and at the same time learning many things he was not taught in Africa. At the end of slavery, freedom found him not a full-fledged African nor a full-fledged American citizen. We are trying to use all that was best in his African life and all that was best in his life as a slave and all that is best in his surroundings as a free man.

"The masses of our people have made up their minds that they are going to live in the Southern States, and it is there that we are to work out our salvation. Since this is true, it becomes part of the duty, not only of the Southern white man, but Northern white man, to help the negro to make of himself the very highest and best type of citizen."

METZ RIDICULES COLER.

Essential Copy of the Ash Removal Contract Perfect, He Says.

Controller Metz made light yesterday of the efforts of Borough President Coler of Brooklyn to prove that there was something irregular about the contract under which the American Railway Traffic Association removes ashes in Brooklyn.

"Mr. Coler is kicking up a big fuss over nothing," said the Controller, "and he knows it. He is making a big mistake. Commissioner Woodbury in his letter to me replying to Mr. Coler's charges has shown that the company is living up to the specifications of its contract to the best of its ability under the circumstances. As long as the Commissioner certifies that they are living up to their specifications there is nothing for me to find fault with. It seems that Mr. Coler would like to insinuate that some of us have stolen some of the pages of that contract. That's nonsense. Nobody has mutilated the contract. Of course not.

"I haven't looked at the contract myself, but the engineer of the department has told me that our copy here does not tally with the minutes. Commissioner Woodbury's copy is complete, and he is supplying me with the missing sheets. Mr. Coler is making a big and needless mystery of this thing, and working himself up over it. He is trying to get an 'ad' out of it for himself, that's all I can see in it."

At Commissioner Woodbury's office it is said that in all probability the missing sheets had dropped out of the Controller's copy by accident. In the three and a half years that the contract had been in existence this was liable to happen, he said. The essential copy, it was pointed out, was that in the hands of the Commissioner of Street Cleaning, who had the supervision of its execution, and that was complete.

Says Italian Killed Bluejacket.

GENOA, March 17.—Enca Davas, a member of Buffalo Bill's Wild West company, who was arrested here Friday in connection with the death of a sailor belonging to the British battleship Bulwark, who was stabbed after a quarrel in a barroom, says that the crime was committed by an Italian.

MURPHY OPENS CAMPAIGN TO NAME STATE TICKET

To Build a Platform, with Cockran's Aid, To-morrow Night.

PLAN TO FORESTALL MAYOR

Significance of the Call for a General Committee Meeting—Prompted by Parker's Action.

Tammany will launch its State campaign to-morrow night. At a special meeting of the General Committee at Tammany Hall resolutions will be offered to form the basis of a platform on which the Tammany leaders want to make their preliminary campaign. To these resolutions Congressman W. Bourke Cockran will speak.

Notices were received yesterday by the 8,000 or more members of the committee that they were wanted at the Wigwam on Monday evening for an "important meeting." Nothing was said in the notices about the purport of the meeting. That was learned last night, when it was found that resolutions were being drafted covering the insurance scandals, the local gas situation, railroad rate legislation, the recent fighting in the Philippines, which the resolutions will call a "massacre," and other public questions.

Leader Murphy's purpose is to block, so far as possible, the plans of Mayor McClellan and his friends to dominate the State Convention. Murphy wants to play an important part in the convention, and he is in close alliance with Senator McCarren of Brooklyn, Joseph Cassidy of Queens, and a scattered few of the members of the State Committee who control up-State sections. Therefore, if Murphy can add to his strength in the State by taking a stand that will make his organization popular in rural counties he will add to his own chances of controlling the convention, and at the same time prevent McClellan and his advisers from making any alliances that would work to their benefit as against Tammany.

There was little attempt last night to conceal the fact that the activity on the part of the Tammany leaders was due, in large measure, to the interview given out in the South by ex-Judge Alton B. Parker, booming McClellan as a Presidential possibility in 1908.

As a further move to prevent McClellan from gaining any headway, it was learned, the Rules Committee has under consideration a plan to give a vote in the Executive Committee to the Chairmen of each standing committee of the organization and the officers of the Executive Committee. This would give to Murphy eight votes in the Executive Committee for use in the event of defections among district leaders. At present no one has a vote in the Executive Committee except the thirty-seven district leaders and the Chairman of the General Committee. It has not been decided whether the Rules Committee shall report favorably on this plan.

HEARING AFTER NINE YEARS.

Housekeeper Sues for Bonds She Says J. H. Drake Left Her.

Mary D. Gregan, after a delay of nine years, attributed in part to the death of Wheeler H. Peckham and substitution of counsel, has begun suit in the Supreme Court to recover from the estate of John H. Drake the value of eighteen bonds, of $1,000 each, of the Charleston, Clendenning & Sutton Railroad Company.

Drake was a member of the Drake & Stratton Company, Limited, bridge builders. The plaintiff was his housekeeper for ten years. She says in her complaint that Drake, who died in 1896, kept the bonds for her, but that she has been unable to get them.

CITY BREVITIES.

The Lotos Club's annual election, held last night, resulted in the re-election of all the old officers: President—Frank R. Lawrence; Vice President—Chester S. Lord; Secretary—George H. Daniels; Treasurer—Charles W. Price. Samuel Untermyer, Walter S. Logan, and William T. Evans were elected Directors for three years.

Fred Witte, a saloon keeper of 477 Amsterdam Avenue, was found dead at the foot of the airshaft of the Astoria Hotel, 1,525 Third Avenue, yesterday afternoon. The window of the four-floor room he had occupied on the previous night was open. The police say he committed suicide.

There will be an ordination service of the Helping Hand Association at the Young Men's Christian Association Hall, 142 Second Avenue, this evening for about half a dozen candidates. The presiding officer will be the Rev. W. Eugene Crosby.

MARCH 1906

ST. PATRICK'S PARADE THE LARGEST SINCE '52

Wearers of the Green Watch 20,000 Marchers Pass.

NOT A UNION BAND IN LINE

Fifth Avenue Thronged with a Merry Crowd Out for a Holiday—Dinners and Celebrations Elsewhere.

Irishmen in this city celebrated St. Patrick's Day yesterday with the largest parade seen here on a 17th of March since 1852. It was estimated by County President Major Edward T. McCrystal of the Hibernians that 20,000 men were in line. Although the men who composed this procession were the chief figures in the day's festivities, they were really only a small percentage of the men and women who were out in the bright but chill March air for the purpose of adding to the general enthusiasm.

From Forty-second to Fifty-ninth Street the sidewalks, and in some places even the roadway, in Fifth Avenue were densely packed with men, woman, and children from 1 o'clock on. The crowd grew denser as the two hours of waiting continued. The official programmes fixed the time when the start would be made at 1:30 in the afternoon, but nobody who knew anything about parades took this any too seriously.

At 2:50 there was a movement at Forty-second Street and Fifth Avenue, which seemed to indicate that the many organizations which were scheduled to start from there had all arrived, and the head of the procession made a little spurt, but halted again. It was 3 o'clock before it got fully under way.

Meanwhile Fifth Avenue was a lively sight. A man pretending to know a good deal about crowds estimated that the throng of spectators between Forty-second Street and Fifty-ninth Street numbered half a million persons; and as one looked over the spectators crowded into the street, with only a strip left vacant in the roadway, this estimate did not seem excessive. Very early those who were unable to see over the heads of others had crowded upon the steps leading to the Fifth Avenue residences, and the owners who came home early had a time of it getting into their homes. It was St. Patrick's Day, and no one was impatient.

Every One Wore the Green.

A bit of green worn by every man, woman, and child in the throng, either in the form of a sprig of shamrock or a green ribbon or rosette, plainly meant to say that the wearer was Irish, and was proud of it. The street fakirs were more numerous than ever before. Some one had told them that the parade of yesterday would break the records as to magnificence and numbers, and they were on hand to meet it. They were not all Irish. The crowd got a good deal of fun out of those who were not by yelling at them as they hawked green flags and rosettes such pert remarks as this:

"Say, friend, you'll do a better business if you change your face."

Groups of rosy-cheeked girls joined in the fun. Joining hands, they pushed their way through the waiting crowd and sometimes encircled and jostled the fakirs. So the waiting time was spent.

At 3 o'clock several bands struck up simultaneously, the rows of mounted traffic police ahead pushed on, and the parade had really started. The little spurt which had been made ten minutes earlier had put the head of the parade up to about Forty-fifth Street, and it really started from that point.

It was planned that Archbishop Farley should review the parade as he did last year. With the great crowd, however, and the heaps of snow still piled up in the side streets, the route which would have led into Madison Avenue through Fiftieth Street had to be abandoned, and the parade moved straight ahead all the way to 120th Street. The crisp air and enlivening music made parading pleasant enough, although the avenue was still moist and in some places slushy, in spite of the fact that Commissioner Woodbury had sent a large corp of men to clear the street early in the day.

All Harmonious This Year.

In some few respects the parade of yesterday differed from St. Patrick's Day parades which have gone before. The greater numbers that took part in the pageant as compared with other years was one of them. There has often been some little friction among Irish societies which this year was all cleared away, greatly through the efforts of Major McCrystal, and it was said that every Irish society in the city was represented. It was also somewhat unusual from the fact that there was not a union band in the parade—and there were fifty brass bands—owing to an edict sent out by the Musical Mutual Protective Union.

There were also some marked changes in the uniforms. Although green was still very much in evidence in the sashes and other regalia, it was not emphasized so much as in other years. Grand Marshal Martin J. Kane, for example, instead of the green sash which he wore on other years, wore a white one this year, with green selvage and an old gold rosette. Instead of caps some of the orders wore slouch hats.

The great crowd, though for the most part rather quiet, cheered lustily as the parade started. It was headed by the Catholic Protectory Band, behind the mounted policemen. Then came the carriage containing the guests of honor. In it were Charles F. Murphy, C. F. Whittle, representing Herbert Parsons, and Major McCrystal. The Mayor, who was to have occupied the other seat in this carriage, could not be present.

Then came the Sixty-ninth Regiment. This regiment took a prominent part in the day's festivities. It began by attending early mass at St. Patrick's Cathedral, at which Archbishop Farley officiated.

The order of the parade was as follows:

Those Who Were in Line.

Sixty-ninth Regiment, N. G., N. Y., Col. Edward Duffy commanding.
First Regiment, Irish Volunteers of Manhattan, Major Charles Crowley commanding.
Second Regiment Irish Volunteers of Brooklyn.

Grand Marshal Kane's chief aides were Patrick J. Gilroy and Peter J. Malloy.

Fifth Avenue was thickly lined with spectators all the way up to 120th Street. There the parade turned east to Madison Avenue and up to 126th Street, where it turned east again to Second Avenue, and thence to Sulzer's Harlem River Park, where the parade disbanded. The sunshine displayed the uniforms and the innumerable banners and flags to excellent advantage.

The weather was in most respects all that could be desired for the paraders. Standing still was very cold, however, and the fact that thousands of the sons and daughters of Erin endured the raw air for more than two hours was an evidence of the patriotism of Irishmen and Irishwomen.

The Friends of Erin of the Bronx held their second annual dinner last night at Huber's Casino, Jerome Avenue and 162d Street, 180 members of the organization and their guests being present. The toastmaster was Dr. Thomas E. Curtin, and among the speakers was Judge Thomas C. O'Sullivan.

The Emerald Association, and other Bronx organization of Irishmen, dined at the Harlem Casino, 124th Street and Seventh Avenue. The speakers were D. J. Spellissy, Joseph P. Hennessy, Father McMahon, and John M. Wall.

7,500 Paraded in Brooklyn.

Irishmen in Brooklyn celebrated St. Patrick's Day in many ways, the chief feature of the day's observance being the annual parade and festival of the Kings County Branch of the Ancient Order of Hibernians. In the evening there were banqueting and speechmaking and singing of Irish songs in all parts of the borough, and the green flag of Erin was in evidence everywhere.

About 7,500 men took part in the parade. Supt. Clarke of the Street Cleaning Department had rushed work on the streets on the line of march, and the footing was good for the marchers. The procession formed at Cumberland Street and Willoughby Avenue, and the route lay through Willoughby and Myrtle Avenues to Ridgewood Park. Borough President Coler, Deputy Police Commissioner O'Keefe, and other public officials viewed the parade from a stand at Willoughby and Kent Avenues. The procession disbanded at Ridgewood Park, where the remainder of the day was given over to a programme of athletic games and dancing. John C. Connelly was Grand Marshal of the parade, and his assistants were Charles Heflin, William L. Dalton, P. J. Loftus, and Jeremiah Regan.

Chief among the many banquets held by local Irish societies in the evening were those of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, at the Kings County Democratic Club, and the St. Patrick's Society, at the Pouch Mansion.

Again Reviews Jersey City Marchers.

About 2,000 men marched in the St. Patrick's Day parade in Jersey City yesterday, and were reviewed at the City Hall by Mayor Fagan and other city officials. Every parader carried an American or an Irish flag or both. Most of the marching was through slush, but the Irishmen tramped through it enthusiastically.

Twenty divisions of the Ancient Order of Hibernians were in line. The Friendly Sons of Ireland held their dinner in the evening at the Jersey City Club. They sent a cable dispatch to King Edward, thanking him for his expressions of good will to Ireland in his message to Parliament.

Fully 5,000 men took part in the parade of the Irish societies in Paterson. In Newark Bishop John J. O'Connor celebrated solemn pontifical mass in St. Patrick's Cathedral.

DINERS CHEERED JEROME.

But He Didn't Speak at Friends of Ireland Dinner.

To the fare of the St. Patrick's Day banquet at Shanley's Restaurant, in Times Square, last night, the guests of the Friends of Ireland found an unexpected addition. Brian G. Hughes presented each of them with a green box containing dulse, which he said came from Ireland. The skeptical declared it was plucked on this side the Atlantic and put up in New York. However, it reminded them of the land of their fathers and did just as well.

Green roses, green carnations, and genuine blackthorn canes to take home with them made it quite certain that none of the 300 guests would forget that they were feasting in celebration of Erin.

Corporation Counsel John J. Delany was the toastmaster.

"Any one who is a decent man and can celebrate St. Patrick's Day is welcome," said he. "The society was founded in the days of a fight for home rule and against the Irish famine, but it teaches a lesson of American citizenship. We bar American politics, but you may discuss everything else, especially Irish politics, with what heat you like. If any man here has an English chain hanging to his rags he may express his views freely, only he must be prepared to take the consequences.

"Come in the evening or come in the morning,
Come when you are looked for or come without warning.
A thousand warm welcomes you'll find here before you,
And the oftener we see you the more we adore you.

Surrogate Fitzgerald spoke of Ireland's great sons.

"Many signs portend early Irish autonomy," he said. "Her native spirit has been stimulated by the efforts of Douglas Hyde, whose scholarly instincts are instanced by the 1,600 schools where Gaelic now is taught."

Senator John M. Quinn said the Declaration of Independence was an expression of what Irishmen have been fighting for for 700 years. As soon as an Irishman landed on these shores he leaped in the air, he said, and asserted the right to become an American citizen, for in this country he found the ideal of his race, Liberty.

At this moment District Attorney Jerome entered, and was loudly cheered. He was called on for a speech, but the Chairman, rapping vigorously, declared:

"If this meeting gets away from me its the first that ever has. You don't know what I can do when I get roused. I intend to follow the regular programme."

Mr. Jerome was then allowed to take a seat and and left later without speaking.

Among the guests were M. B. Blumenthal, T. C. T. Crain; Recorder John W. Goff, Sheriff Nicholas T. Hayes, E. A. Kennedy, Abraham Levy, Edward Leach, John J. McInerney, ex-Deputy Police Commissioner James F. Mack, A. C. Moreland, Stephen O'Brien, ex-Commissioner John T. Oakley, Acting Police Inspector William H. Hodgins, Deputy Water Commissioner Frank J. Goodwin, Joseph Rowan, Joseph E. Gavin, ex-Controller of Buffalo; the Rev. Father John Talbot Smith, Judge McNulty of Pittsburg, and Michael W. Rayens.

Letters of regret were received from the Right Rev. Charles L. McCready, Gov. Higgins, Lieut. Gov. Bruce, Charles F. Murphy, D Cady Herrick, and Simeon Ford.

"Irish Characteristics" were described by Joseph Rowan. Hospitality and perseverance he declared to be the typical Irish virtue, and instanced the first by the Irishman who, as he fell back in his seat, could exclaim to his friends, "Drink hearty, boys, I'm poisoned."

John J. McInerney spoke for "Liberty." He asserted the descent of the Irish from the earliest times by declaring they got the harp from Tyre, and the Phoenicians got it from the Jews, and the Jews had it direct from Jubal, and so the connection of Ireland with the earliest members of the human race was clearly established.

CHILDREN HAD CELEBRATION.

Little Keoghs and Emmets Delighted New Rochelle.

A feature of St. Patrick's Day in New Rochelle was the parade given by the children of Supreme Court Justice Martin J. Keogh and the Emmet family. It has become an annual event in New Rochelle, but attracted more than usual attention yesterday because of its novel and amusing features.

The march was led by Justice Keogh's coachman, who wore bright-green regalia and announced his approach with the blare of a bugle. At each side of the coachman rode one of Justice Keogh's sons. The boys were decorated with shamrocks and carried green flags. Then came a drum corps from the United States garrison at Fort Slocum, each drummer wearing a large shamrock. Four pony carts containing the younger generation of the Emmet and Keogh families, in charge of their nurses and governesses, followed the band.

The children waved green flags as they rode through the streets. Last in line was an Irish jaunting car drawn by a donkey and containing a typical representative of the Ould Sod, with his pipe in his hatband.

The children distributed hundreds of shamrocks along the line of march.

IRISH NO SOCIALISTS, THE MAYOR TELLS THEM

He Declares They Lead Every Great Movement in This City.

800 FRIENDLY SONS DINE

Admiral Coghlan Says: "If War Is Hell, We Must Have Devils to Fight It With."

Checking his blackthorn and his brogue at the coat room as he went in, Shamus O'Brien had dinner at Delmonico's last night with his new colleen, "Mlle. Modiste." Shamus had a trifle of some 800 friends as his guests, but Mademoiselle squared things by ordering the dinner from a menu card printed in French.

At the one hundred and twenty-second anniversary dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick, at the close of their patron saint's day, the band played "Mlle. Modiste" and "The Wearing of the Green" as the guests ate a Frenchman's dishes and cheered St. Patrick.

It was one of the largest dinners ever held at Delmonico's and took every inch of the main dining room. Joseph I. C. Clarke presided. Over the main table was a huge oil painting of the saint, in ecclesiastical robes, armed with his snake exorcisor in one hand and shamrock in the other. Over the picture was emblazoned the Celtic words:

CEAD MILE FAILTE.

Interpreted, the inscription meant "one hundred thousand welcomes." Surrounding the portrait was a cluster of American and Irish flags, and scattered throughout the rooms were harps of green and miniature flags of Ireland and America. The souvenir of the evening was a vase of porcelain bearing an engraved portrait of Commodore John Barry of the American Revolutionary Navy.

The main speech of the evening was delivered by Mayor McClellan, who responded to the toast "The City of New York."

"In more than a hundred years," he declared, "there has never been any movement for the development of New York that members of this society have not been leaders in. There has never been any great political upheaval in which members of the Friendly Sons have not been found in the van.

"The principles and the spirit which called this society into being—the spirit of Christian charity, of mutual help and union, the spirit of love for the green and the gold has deepened the devotion of Irishmen to the Stars and Stripes.

"This spirit of love for the flag, which is nothing more than love and pride of race, has made the race what it is today. Anarchy and Socialism never have appealed to Irishmen, least of all to Irishmen in this country."

Thomas A. Daly in responding to the toast of "The Ladies," said:

"Here's what I think of the premeditated bachelor:

Here, fer yer pity or scorn, I'm presintin' ye
Jerry McGlone,
Trustin' the life of him will be previntin' ye sp'ilin' yer own.
Think of a face wid a permanent fixture of Looks that are always suggestin' a mixture of Limons an' vinegar. There! ye've a picture of Jerry McGlone.
Ah! but there's few o' the race but would scorn to be
Jerry McGlone.
Shure, we all know that a Celt is not born to be Livin' alone.
Oh! but we're grateful, (I spake for the laity,)
Grateful fur women the bountiful Deity
Dowers wid beauty an' virtue an' gayety,
All for our own!

Congressman W. Bourke Cockran, to the toast of "The Memory of Commodore John Barry," delivered an encomium of Barry's fighting in the Revolutionary Navy, and said:

"There is a task which Irishmen will expressly take upon themselves now, and that is the erection of a monument to this man who commanded the first American naval vessel. And when that monument is erected it shall bear the words he spoke to a Lieutenant who advised him while he lay wounded below to surrender his ship:

"'If you can't fight the ship I'll be carried on deck and fight her myself.'"

Admiral Charles B. Coghlan said he could not respond to the latter half of his toast, "The Army and the Navy," after Mr. Cockran had so vividly described Barry's battles.

"But I will say," he added, "that our army and navy are made up of angels and devils—angels in time of peace and devils in time of war. War being hell, we must have devils to deal with it. I can't prophesy much in specification for the navy; but I'll say this much: If war should come to you, and if our friends here in Congress will give us ships, you need never lie awake at night worrying how we're going to come out all right. Be assured we'll be there with both feet."

Representative Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts talked on "The United States," and Thomas C. O'Sullivan on "The Day We Celebrate." He quoted this verse, committing the Irish to the cause of home rule:

When comes the day all hearts to weigh,
If stanch they be, or vile,
Shall we forget the sacred debt
We owe our mother isle?

"St. Patrick drove the snakes out of Ireland," he said, "but that isn't all. It's a significant thing that every St. Patrick's day the ice breaks in the Hudson River, too."

The speaker said that a project was to be put on foot to erect a monument to Commodore Barry at the Capitol in Washington and that money was to be asked for it in New York. August St. Gaudens, he said, was to be the sculptor.

Among the guests at the dinner were Thomas F. Ryan, John D. Crimmins, District Attorney Jerome, Archbishop Farley, Charles F. Murphy, William F. Sheehan, Samuel Sloan, Herbert H. Vreeland, Mgr. Mooney, Justice Morgan J. O'Brien, Garret J. Garretson, Frederick de P. Foster, and Samuel V. Hoffman.

GREEN BEEFSTEAK DINNER.

Morgan Club Celebrates and Gets Souvenirs from the Saint.

With Attorney General Julius A. Mayer, Postmaster William H. Willcox, Assistant Postmaster Edward M. Morgan, Justice W. H. Olmsted of Special Sessions, and George F. Scannell, Superintendent of Highways, as guests, the Morgan Beefsteak Club last night celebrated its seventeenth annual dinner in Reisenweber's attic grillroom.

Mr. Morgan was toastmaster. The invitations, souvenirs, and decorations were all in green, in honor of St. Patrick. A uniformed letter carrier brought the greetings of St. Patrick direct, and distributed green postal cards, mailed from the General Post Office, bearing good wishes of the patron saint.

RESENTS SLUR ON REFORMERS

Mr. Davis Tells Friendly Sons Why They're Needed in Jersey.

In a speech at the annual banquet of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick at the Orange Club in East Orange last night Thomas A. Davis denounced lawyers and State officials who have been decrying the efforts of the reform party in New Jersey.

"The reform movement in New Jersey," said he, "gets least encouragement from some of the men who are presumed to know and who ought to know of the existence of the exact conditions in New Jersey which are trying to be reformed. They are by their positions necessarily the brainiest and best informed and most thoroughly educated men in the State. If they know of the existence of such conditions in this State, then what must we think of them when they publicly decry the reformers? If they do not know of their existence, then they should inform themselves upon them before giving public utterance to statements against the reform movement.

"Within the past few weeks I have listened to speeches by the Attorney General of the State of New Jersey and by Mr. Frank Bergen, attorney for the largest New Jersey corporation. Both went out of their way to give reform a black eye and to throw cold water on the motives and aims of the reformers. Both speakers warned their auditors that some of these reformers might be demagogues.

"Even a blind man could detect in the public life of our own State and its subdivisions demagogues of the most dangerous type combining politics with great businesses and using municipal, county, and State machinery to further the selfish interests of a select few to the detriment of the honesty and integrity of our municipalities, our counties, and our State. These are the demagogues to be turned out, and if a new set of demagogues gets in a new set of reformers will turn them out also."

BROKERS PARADED, TOO.

Jesse Wasserman Led St. Patrick's Devotees on Stock Exchange.

St. Patrick's Day was appropriately celebrated for a few moments on the floor of the Stock Exchange yesterday by a parade and a scrimmage. The session had been extremely dull, and toward noon there was a good-sized crowd with nothing to do.

The time was just about ripe for trouble when Jesse Wasserman marched on the floor wearing a green property-room derby and carrying a green flag. He was followed by W. P. Callaghan and W. B. Reilly, the specialists in Brooklyn Rapid Transit, decked out in green top hats and small green flags.

Pretty nearly every one on the floor fell in behind, and the paraders had almost made the round when a trader was discovered with a broad scarlet ribbon pinned to his coat. The marchers turned on him with yells, and in half a minute he looked like a survivor of a powder mill explosion.

He made such quick time to the dressing room that only those nearest him knew who he was.

PLEADS FOR BIG NAVY.

Bonaparte Appeals to Friendly Sons of St. Patrick.

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—Secretary of the Navy Bonaparte was the guest of honor and chief speaker to-night at the dinner of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. During the course of his remarks he spoke of the necessity of a greater navy.

"As we are situated," he said, "it can be only when the navy has failed that the other branch of our service, the army, could be called upon to protect the life of the Nation against serious peril. I ask to-night that the Sons of St. Patrick bring all their influence to bear on public opinion in order to render it imperative in demanding from Congress that under no circumstances shall parsimony or the pressure of minor interests or any consideration of faction or party interfere with the upbuilding of a great navy."

GREETINGS SENT FROM ROME.

ROME, March 17.—There were abundant shamrock decorations to-day in the three Irish Catholic churches here in honor of St. Patrick's Day. Cardinal Logue, Archbishop of Armagh and Primate of all Ireland, celebrated a Pontifical mass, delivered a short address, and sent his greetings, not only to the Irish in Ireland, but to those across the seas.

Mrs. Kelly, 109, Guest of Irish Club.

Mrs. Margaret Kelly of 964 Third Avenue, who is said to be 109 years old, was a guest of honor at the celebration of the Irish Club at its clubrooms, 146 East Fifty-eighth Street, last night. President John J. Donovan occupied the toastmaster's chair at the dinner, which preceded an entertainment and dance. Mrs. Kelly entered with zest into the proceedings in honor of Ireland's patron saint.

BUSINESS AMERICAN STYLE.

Experience of a Consul Who Tried to Aid American Trade.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Consul Ledoux of Prague writes of one discouraging experience in which he tried to aid American trade. He says:

"On March 17, 1905, a very high official in the kingdom of Bohemia honored the newly created commercial intelligence department of this Consulate with a visit. Favorably impressed by a certain system of filing commercial literature, he expressed the desire to secure a cabinet similar to one in the office. This was a small cabinet which had cost the writer $20 free on board Chicago. Through indifference or negligence the manufacturer had not taken advantage of the filing system which was at hand except the name plate of the firm, which we found later had disposed of its patent to others. [illegible] visitor, the writer addressed the firm, giving the full official standing of the buyer, besides the address of firms of high standing with whom close and profitable connections could be formed. This was on March 18, 1905. The trial order was indisputably a remarkable occasion to introduce an article unknown in this market, and for which a fair demand could be created under advantageous auspices. On April 17, 1905, the writer received a reply from the manufacturers, of which the following is an extract:

"'We should be pleased, indeed, to send one of our cabinets to his Excellency, [here follows the name and title of the official,] but the regular price on account is $30, and for cash with order $28. Should you decide to confirm the requisition on this basis, please address your communication to [name and address of export agent] of New York City, at which point all our export business is attended to.'

"On April 26, 1905, followed a letter from the export agent, from which the following extract is taken:

"'I am pleased to acknowledge your order for the No. — filing cabinet, the regular price of which is $30, or for cash with order $28.50, the cash discount being 5 per cent. I note that in your letter you stated that the price was $20. This must have been some mistake. Will you kindly advise me how payment for this order would be made? You are, without doubt, personally familiar with the inevitable demand that the American manufacturers make for cash with order in the case of business with foreigners who are unknown to them, and as we are not at all familiar with the terms upon which this gentleman wishes to pay for the order, we would be greatly obliged if you would tell us just what we might reasonably expect in this connection. Could you not persuade him to pay cash with order or to establish a documentary credit here, so that he could take advantage of the cash discount and we could make the collection on the usual terms?

"'The firm remained "awaiting your further favors.' Of course I did not ask nor try to persuade this high Government official to send his money in advance or 'establish a documentary credit' in America for the sum of $28.50. After consultation, (without showing this humiliating letter,) the writer addressed the following letter (May 11, 1905) to the export agent:

"'Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge your letter of the 13th ult. Should you desire to sell one of your No. — filing cabinets to his Excellency [name and title] for the price stated, $30, you would have to ship same immediately, payable on presentation of shipping documents.'

"And on June 15, 1905, the following was received from the export agent:

"'Dear Sir: Replying to yours of the 11th, the factory has decided to forward the No. — filing cabinet to the party referred to on the terms you mentioned, and the shipment will be made soon.'

"The cabinet was not shipped until July 24, arriving at destination Aug. 18—just five months after date of order—and trailing with it was a batch of papers telling the following financial tale:

New York freight contractor's invoice:
Amount taken forward by shipper	$30.00
Commission for collection	.60
Railway freight to New York	1.44
Transfer from depot to steamer	1.00
Forwarding commission	1.25
Freight from New York to Prague	6.50
Total	$40.79
Prague freight contractor's invoice:
Amount taken forward from Bremen	$42.71
Duty	3.99
Statistics fee	.19
Toll	.06
Coopgrage	.34
Assessment fee	.06
Custom House charges to broker	.69
Transport to domicile	.51
Postage	.06
Total	$48.62

"The case weighed 235 pounds, the transport was via Bremen, per steamship Bremen.

"So that this cabinet, which had cost the writer the catalogue price of $20 two years previously cost $48.62 to his Excellency, or about five times the cost of manufacturing a similar one in this country. And the cabinet is not protected by an Austrian patent!

"But the sad part of the whole affair is the following: Though the exorbitant cost was immediately paid (c. o. d.) to the export agent through his transport factors, the manufacturers dunned this high official with 'Please remit' statements for a No. — (same number) cabinet, costing $20."

Bank Wreckers Are Sentenced.

CLEVELAND, March 17.—Charles M. Traver, ex-President of the First National Bank of Conneaut, Ohio, and O. C. Lillie, cashier of the same institution, pleaded guilty before Judge Tayler of the United States Circuit Court here to-day to one of the indictments charging them with misapplying the funds of the bank. They were then sentenced to six years' imprisonment each.

ROCKED AND STAGGERED IN EARTHQUAKE'S GRIP

TIDAL WAVE AFTER SHOCKS

Mining Engineer Tells What He Saw When Colombian Earthquake Killed 300 Persons.

William E. Bruce, mining manager of the Certigue Mining and Dredging Company of 80 Wall Street, has returned to this city from Colombia, where he was during the series of earthquakes which in the ebginning of February killed about 300 persons in and near Tumaco and cut off all cable communication between Colombia and Ecuador and the rest of the world.

Mr. Bruce left this city for Colombia in December. At the time of the earthquakes he was at the town of Tumaco, which is on the small island of that name on the extreme south of the Colombian Pacific Coast. Here the centre of the disturbances seems to have been.

"The first shock," said Mr. Bruce, "was felt at 9:45 on the night of Jan. 31. It was rather severe, but little damage was done. The people, following their usual custom, ran out of the houses to the Plaza, crying out 'Tiemblo! Tiemblo!' It was not expected then that there would be such a severe shock as followed. The people, however, were on the Plaza and pretty well fixed for the big earthquake when it came twenty minutes later.

"The second shock lasted for ten minutes, and while the island was crashing, rocking, and groaning, it furnished one of the weirdest pictures I ever saw. Men running along the streets of the town would trip over their own legs; one felt as if intoxicated, and if one didn't know how that felt, certainly everybody else looked the part, staggering along, making high steps over ground that sank, or short steps upon earth that heaved up to meet the foot.

"The majority of the native Spaniards and half-breeds lay on the ground in the Plaza and prayed, while the priests passed among them assuring them that it would be over soon. Buildings in the meantime were falling on all sides, and of the only comparatively safe places it was difficult to choose between the sea and the Plaza.

"I went down to the shore and watched out for what was going to happen next. Other people also took advantage of the proximity of the sea. In this case the ocean was not so safe as it usually is in an earthquake. After the second shock, away out at sea there appeared a wave miles long. It was like a wall of water, and I understand it extended up the coast nearly to Buenaventura. This wave came right on for Tumaco, and the illusion was that the island was sinking, whereas it was only the sea bulging up.

"Tumaco is a very flat island. I do not think it rises more than fifteen feet above the sea at its highest point. When the wave struck the island it broke and washed through streets and houses and into the sea again, carrying with it débris from the houses, and numbers of persons were drowned. The casualties in the town were not so serious, however, as they were in the outlying parts of the island and on the coast. In all, fifty-two families were wiped out.

"For weeks after that awful night Tumaco was quaking every day. The people were terror stricken, not knowing what to expect next. They hardly ever went to bed with their clothes off, and many elected to sleep on the Plaza. There were hundreds there, with the priests among them. Prayer meetings were held, and processions with candles passed through the streets at all hours of the night.

"The rumor had spread along the coast that the Island of Tumaco and the town had been swallowed up by the sea. A steamer of the Pacific Navigation Company came into the Harbor of Tumaco without having heard these rumors. Capt. Rogers of the Manavi, as the steamer was named, came in slowly and suspiciously, for his soundings were all upside down and he knew that something had happened. Fortunately, the harbor bottom was deepened and the channel considerably widened by the earthquake.

"Later Capt. Holwright brought in the Quito, another steamer. He found the soundings still changing. When I left, Tumaco was not yet quite settled. I sailed in the Quito for Buenaventura and Panama."

At Buenaventura there were still disturbances. The cables were all out of business south of Buenaventura—broken in six places, it appeared—and the cable between Buenaventura and Panama was also broken. In the latter connection the operator said that when the big earthquakes began he was "talking" with Panama.

"Did you feel that one?" asked Buenaventura.

"No," replied Panama. "An earthquake?"

"Yes," said Beunaventura, "and your messages are getting muddy on the tape."

"Same here," said Panama. "Can you read what I'm—ing—you—earthq—"

Then the needle drew straight lines along the tape and continued to do so for days.

News from along the coast reported the same earthquakes and the big wave which at Esmeraldas, between Buenaventura and Tumaco, carried away a few houses and drowned some persons.

The number of casualties all over Colombia is said to have been about ten times as great as at Tumaco. Mr. Bruce said the disturbances had traveled as far north as Panama and as far south as Guayaquil.

At Tumaco the British Vice Consul had his ankle caught under a falling fence, from which he was released by a second shock. At the time he was carrying his wife, who had fainted, to safety.

TO WELCOME CHINESE YOUTH.

President Indorses Plan to Invite Them to Study in America.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—In accord with the suggestion of Dr. Edmund J. James, President of the University of Illinois, to the President and Secretary Root that an effort be made by the educational institutions of this country to induce Chinese students to come to America to study, a delegation of churchmen of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to-day discussed with the President the situation in the Chinese Empire.

In the delegation were Dr. Young J. Allen, fof forty-six years a missionary in China; Bishop Galloway of Mississippi, Dr. Walter R. Lambuth, Missionary Secretary, and Dr. James Atkins.

The members of the delegation talked to the President about the boycott of American products, and expressed a fear that, if the boycott continued, injury might be done to the work of the American churches. They said they believed the situation would be relieved by a general invitation from American educational institutions to Chinese youth to study in this country.

The suggestion met with hearty approval by the President, and he promised to do all in his power to promote the adoption of the ideas presented to him.

Successor to Ricketts Named.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—J. M. A. Spottswood, assistant foreman of printing, having declined the place of foreman of printing, to succeed Oscar J. Ricketts, Charles E. Young foreman of the night bill force, was appointed to that place in the Government printing office to-night.

MAY NOT SETTLE CANAL TYPE.

Lock System Will Be Constructed if Congress Fails to Decide.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The Senate Committee on Interoceanic Canals heard with many misgivings the reported statement by Representative Hepburn that the House committee would not be willing to accept the Senate hearings to determine the type of canal to be constructed across the Isthmus of Panama. This is taken as an indication that Congress will not be able to agree upon a bill deciding the type of the waterway unless the session of Congress is long continued.

In the event that no bill is passed the appropriation committees undoubtedly will report the amounts necessary to carry on the work until next session, and the Canal Commission will proceed with the construction of a lock canal, under the plans advocated by the minority of the Board of Consulting Engineers.

President Roosevelt in his message transmitting to Congress the reports of the majority and the minority of the board said that he favored the latter, which was for a lock canal, and that if the question were not determined by Congress that type would be constructed.

GRIDIRON CLUB AS GUESTS.

Speaker Cannon Turns About on the Washington Correspondents.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Speaker Cannon to-night gave a dinner to the Gridiron Club, the organization of Washington correspondents, whose guest he has been on many occasions during the last twenty-two years. More than 200 guests assembled in the beautifully decorated dining room of the New Willard Hotel at the invitation of the Speaker.

It was not a Gridiron dinner, although some Gridiron methods were introduced. The rules of the club as to short speeches which are never published were invoked, while skits and songs by the club entertained the Speaker's guests.

The club presented to Speaker Cannon a large decorated gridiron, and informed him that while no one could be made an honorary member of the club, the gridiron which he received meant that he was its best friend.

HOME-MADE CAKE IN DEMAND.

Woman's Exchange Sold $24,000 Worth Last Year—Annual Meeting.

The New York Exchange for Woman's Work held its annual meeting in the Exchange building, 334 Madison Avenue, yesterday, giving as a record of its work $1,308,378.18 paid out to its women workers in the twenty-eight years it has been in existence.

In the last year the Exchange has sold $101,853.28 worth of goods—useful, ornamental, and edible—made by these women. The home-made cake, for which the Exchange is noted, brings in large returns, and yesterday's reports showed that New Yorkers have eaten $24,475.86 worth of cake made by the women of this Exchange in the last year. The cake sales exceed those of the lunchroom, where home-made viands are served in a pretty Dutch kitchen, and where New York women, with a few men, by their purchases, brought the annual receipts last year up to $17,997.23.

Embroidery, hand sewing, and other fine work is another specialty of the Exchange, and in the general order department $12,171.47 worth of work was turned out last year, and in the children's order department $18,548.91 worth, not including the sales of infants' clothing, which amounted to over $1,500, all made by self-supporting women.

Robert C. Ogden was one of the speakers yesterday. He enlarged upon the educational value of the Exchange in teaching women what could be done with the home talents they possess, and showing them how to do the best work possible in their different specialties.

"I believe girls graduated from the public schools should have a sufficient knowledge of some line of work to enable them to become self-supporting," said Mr. Ogden, "but that not being the case, the Woman's Exchange has taken that educational work upon itself."

Miss Julia Piatt and Mrs. William G. Choate were other speakers. Mrs. Choate is the President and founder of the Exchange, which is the mother of all the Exchanges for women's work now to be found in practically every State in the Union and in foreign countries as well. The idea came to her at the close of the civil war, when many women were in need of employment and there were few ways of self-support open to them.

Among those present yesterday were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel H. Ordway, Mrs. Boudnot Keith, Mrs. T. M. Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Wait, and Richard Evart.

AGAINST "OPEN HEARINGS."

Importers Will Probably Repudiate Approval of the Olcott Bill.

Importers of New York and Chicago have issued a call for a public meeting to be held Wednesday afternoon at the Broadway Central Hotel to protest against the passage of the bill introduced into Congress by Representative J. Van Vechten Olcott to liberalize the provisions of the present Customs Administrative act.

A large meeting of importers was held on March 7 to indorse the provisions of the Olcott bill, which is in line with the recommendations of the Merchants' Association of New York. The promoters of the forthcoming conference intend it to be not only a protest against the Olcott measure, but a repudiation of the suggestion that the leading importers of the country favor modifications in customs procedure. It is expected that the meeting next week will place itself on record as being opposed to so-called "open hearings" before the Board of Appraisers.

Among the importers who have signed the call for the meeting are W. & J. Sloane, Marshall Field & Co., Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Mills & Gibb, Lord & Taylor, Arnold, Constable & Co., and many others.

PROTESTANT CHILDREN UNDER CATHOLIC CARE

The Children's Court Forced to Send Them There.

NO ROOM ANYWHERE ELSE

It Is a Situation Disgraceful to Protestantism, Deputy Clerk Coulter Declares.

Protestant children convicted of error or whose guardianship is improper are committed every day by the Children's Court of this city to Catholic institutions as a result of the inadequacy of Protestant juvenile institutions.

Deputy Clerk Ernest R. Coulter of the Children's Court, First Division, said yesterday that the court's embarrassment was great, owing to the lack of room in Protestant institutions.

"The law in such cases," said Mr. Coulter, "requires that whenever practicable a child must be sent to an institution where the religion taught is that of its parents. The Justices of the court find that law at present to be impracticable.

"The New York Juvenile Asylum has been our chief reliance in placing Protestant children. Its former capacity was 1,000 children, and it is the only one of the six Protestant homes that admits cases both of delinquency and improper guardianship. When it moved last Spring to Chauncey, N. Y., its capacity fell, through insufficient funds for extending the plant, to 300 boys and 12 girls.

"The House of Refuge, managed by the Society for the Reformation of Juvenile Delinquents in this city, has accommodations for 1,000 boys. The American Female Guardian Society and Home for the Friendless receives only cases of improper guardianship, and has a capacity of 207 boys and girls. It is full to overflowing. The Five Points House of Industry is used to the limit.

"The other two homes to which we may legally commit Protestant cases are both homes for girls who are morally depraved or in danger of becoming so. They are the New York State Training School for Girls and the Protestant Episcopal House of Mercy. The total capacity of the six Protestant juvenile institutions is 2,230 children.

"The Catholic juvenile institutions have a total harboring capacity of 10,641 children, and the capacity of the Catholic Protectory alone is 3,200, almost a thousand greater than the capacities of the six Protestant institutions put together.

"The building of the Hebrew Protectory at Pleasantville will be commenced in the early Fall. It will have a capacity of 200 children. Meanwhile a Jewish rabbi goes to the Catholic Protectory on Saturdays and supplies religious teaching and comfort to the 200 Hebrew children there.

"You cannot put me down as commending too strongly the attitude of the Catholic institutions in this matter. They do not care for the extra burden of these children; they do not want them; but they have helped us out considerably and have been most kind in their co-operation.

"If our people do not like the state of affairs they have only to supply the remedy. We have been agitating for some time the need of increased facilities in Protestant institutions.

"The situation is a disgrace to Protestant enterprise in this city. There is no more valuable or important charity than this of training these neglected children to a good citizenship."

E. Fellows Jenkins, Superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children and Chief Parole Officer of the court, was equally emphatic on the subject.

Mr. Jenkins said that he had written about it to every New York City mission whose existence he could ascertain by the directory or otherwise.

"I wrote to the Presbyterian City Mission," he said, "and received no answer. I wrote to the Protestant Episcopal City Mission, to the Methodist Mission, to the Baptist Mission, and received no answers. I wrote to Bishop Potter on the subject, and he replied that he would consider it."

SUES TO UPSET TRUST DEED.

Mrs. Falconer Made It to Keep Estate from Her Husband—He's Dead.

Mrs. Sarah Kate Falconer Smith, who lives with her thirteen-year-old daughter Dorothea at Belle Rive, Dinard, France, has begun an action in Supreme Court to have set aside a trust deed that she executed on Nov. 23, 1889. This instrument gives her a life interest in $70,000 of her own money. She says that when she signed the document, which appoints two trustees, she supposed it was revocable at will.

The plaintiff, whose maiden name was Butterfield, was about to be married when the deed was executed, and, according to the papers in the case, signed it at the instigation of her mother so that her husband would not have control of her property. Her husband died on July 31, 1900.

107 YEARS OLD, SHE THINKS.

But There Was No Party for Mrs. Gilligan—She Is Bedridden.

Folks on Union Avenue, the Bronx, were surprised to read in a Bronx newspaper a fortnight ago that Mrs. Catharine Gilligan, their neighbor, would be 107 years old on St. Patrick's Day, and would celebrate the event with a party, at which there would be 200 guests. Many curious persons called yesterday at 1,006 Union Avenue. They were told by the centenarian's great-granddaughter, Mrs. William Gilligan, that Mrs. Gilligan, Sr., was believed by the family to be 107 years old, but no one had any record of her birthday.

There wasn't a party because old Mrs. Gilligan has been bedridden for five years. She came to this country from County Sligo, Ireland, twenty years ago, and has twelve children and thirty grandchildren, twenty great-grandchildren, and twelve great-great-grandchildren.

CARTOONS AT THE CENTURY.

Exhibition of Caricatures by Fred Richardson of Chicago.

The gallery of the Century Association, 5 West Forty-third Street, is completely filled by a collection of the work of Mr. Frederick Richardson, a member of the club, for the Saturday illustrated supplement of The Chicago Daily News. They are on a large scale, executed with a good deal of brilliancy in the management of line and of mass. Most of them have been reproduced in a book which has superfine surfaces of calendered paper, and copies of the folio are in the gallery. One can see the original cartoon, the same reduced to the full-page size of The Chicago Journal, and again smaller, but to more brilliant effect, in the published volume.

Mr. Richardson has studied the effective work of Japanese caricaturists like Hokusai, and shares with certain French cartoonists the ability to make striking contrasts by the use of dark spots on ample white surfaces. His tendency is usually, however, to crowd the page with details, so that only now and then do we get a telling blow, a joke that is simple and single and explains itself at once. For the most part the eye wanders from group to group in the same cartoon without resting on any one part of the composition as a keynote of the whole.

Comparing him with one of our early cartoonists, like Thomas Nast, one is struck by the superior technical training of the Chicago jokesmith, but misses the native originality and power of the man who in Harper's Weekly used to offset the polished periods of George William Curtis or Carl Schurz in the editorial section with a rough and ready wit that delighted the town. Nast lacked training, but he hit powerful blows. Richardson is elaborate and clever in his exaggerations, which seem intended and make one feel that he is a capital draughtsman at will. Nast was rude on the artistic side, but his wit made one forgive the evident meagreness of his artistic baggage.

The scattering of the point in Richardson appears in such a cartoon as the joke on city folks hieing themselves to the bosom of nature, grotesquely alarmed by wasps and bees, caterpillars and spiders, flies, leeches, and mosquitos. The eye travels from group to group and finally one thinks with regret how simply the old Punch cartoonist handled the same subject under the caption: "Awful Appearance of a Wasp at a Picnic!" Very amusing, but lacking a central point of interest, is the scene of an overflow called "High Water on the Des Plaines." Perhaps one should not criticise so searchingly, however, compositions which were turned out for a series of years at regular weekly intervals, but content one's self with admiring the variety and ingenuity of these many cartoons. Certainly they show great fertility of resource and a very high level of attainment in a most difficult branch of art.

AMERICAN TEACHING PATTI.

East Orange Girl Writes of Her Experiences at Craig-y-Nos.

Miss Florence Stevens of East Orange, who for two months has been with Adelina Patti at Craig-y-Nos, instructing her in the De Reszke method, has written to her friends at home a letter telling how she came to get her engagement. Miss Stevens was the soprano in Trinity Episcopal Church choir, Newark, until she went abroad, three years ago, for vocal studies. She enrolled as a pupil of De Reszke in Paris, and soon attracted his attention by responsiveness to his training.

The charges eventually became too heavy a burden upon her resources, and she told the tenor that she feared she would have to stop. He continued her lessons, and made her an instructor in his preparatory department.

Mme. Patti called at the studio to seek instruction in the method that enabled De Reszke at fifty-five to sing with the charm of earlier days. He could not take from classes of students who had long been attending his studio the time that so distinguished a pupil would require, but he commended Miss Stevens as one who knew his method thoroughly, and Mme. Patti took Miss Stevens to her Welsh castle.

Miss Stevens writes that at Craig-y-Nos she is leading an ideal life. Mme. Patti has provided for her a maid, and in every way is making her stay enjoyable. When the Madame has learned as much of the De Reszke method as she wishes Miss Stevens will return to the studio in Paris and resume her work there.

TEWKESBURY BEGINS FIGHT.

Will Resist Extradition—Second Wife's Claim Caused Indictment.

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—Application was made to-day for the release on a writ of habeas corpus of Lewis G. Tewkesbury, the former New York broker, who was arrested here yesterday on a telegram sent by Inspector McLaughlin of the New York police, saying that he was under indictment in that city for grand larceny. John R. K. Scott, his lawyer, was called out of the city this morning, and argument was postponed until Monday.

Gov. Pennypacker has been notified that an application for extradition will be contested.

When Tewkesbury was arrested he declared that he was hounded by a woman. It came out to-day that the charge on which the indictment for grand larceny was found was preferred by his second wife, who was a Mrs. Greenhut, widow of a wealthy broker. She obtained a divorce from Tewkesbury in 1902, and then he remarried his first wife. After the divorce the divorced wife preferred a claim for $15,000. A compromise is said to have been offered him when he was in Mexico, but he declined it.

Afterward it was reported that he had paid the entire amount. The indictment, however, which grew out of the claim, was never withdrawn, and it was the instrument which caused his arrest here yesterday.

EAST SIDE VICTIMS OF ARCHITECT SWINDLERS

Alleging "Pull" at the Department, They Often Succeed.

KEEP MONEY PAID FOR BRIBE

Everybody knows the shyster lawyer, but the shyster architect is a development of rather recent date, and he is not so well known to the general public as his brother of the law. He is quite as pestiferous, however, and the client who falls into his hands is likely to suffer quite as much as if he had fallen into the clutches of one of the sharks of the minor courts. The shyster architect flourishes on the desire of all men to get something, if not for nothing, at least for less than the market price.

His peculiar stamping ground is the district known as the east side, and he is really a development of the great rebuilding boom which has been going on there for the last five or six years, and which is being financed by small investors and owners. His technical knowledge is small and is probably confined to an ability to talk architectural jargon and exhibit a stock set of plans. His strong point, though, is his alleged "pull" with the Building and Tenement Departments. The victim is always led to believe that if he engages the smooth-tongued shyster his plans will be accepted by the departments without question and that there will be no interruptions and troublesome and expensive delays because of the undue activity of the city Inspectors.

Much of the real estate development which has been going on on the east side recently has consisted of the alteration of old dwelling houses into flats and tenements. Under the new tenement law this work has been made much more difficult than formerly. Larger spaces must be allowed for light and air, the rooms must be larger than formerly, and the factor of safety in construction is much more closely watched. This state of things gives the shyster architect his opportunity. His runners, for he employs runners just like his brother of the law, inform him when a prosperous cloakmaker or tailor has invested his savings in one of the old dwellings with which the district abounds. He knows that the purchaser has no intention of living in the house as it is, or of renting it in that condition. His intention is to alter it into a tenement and to him comes the shyster architect.

"Employ me," he says, "and you will have no trouble. The Commissioner is my friend, and my plans always go through the Building Department. You remember So and So, what trouble he had when he was building. I could have kept him out of all that. If you employ me we can get along without fire escapes, maybe, and I can surely get a room more than the law allows into each apartment."

If the victim seems to doubt his representations, the "architect" will say:

"Oh, well, come along then to the department and see for yourself. I'm going up to see the Commissioner now."

Arrived at the department he hails the clerks as "Jimmy" and Johnnie," and perhaps greets one of the more imposing-looking of them as "Commissioner." By this time the victim is already hooked, and his troubles begin. These troubles can best be described by the experience of a man who fell into the clutches of one of them a short time ago.

He had bought an old dwelling intending to alter it, and the architect came around as usual and told of his "pull" with the department. The owner had not much money, and wanted to build as cheaply as possible, and cheap building is not consistent with a strict observance of the building code. He also wanted to build as quickly as possible, so that the rents would begin to come in before his capital was exhausted. He, therefore, accepted the architect's first suggestion that $25 properly placed would expedite the passage of his plans through the department. Being unfamiliar with building, the plans which the architect exhibited to him were no more intelligible to him than a map of the heavens would have been, so he accepted them on the architect's assurance that they were just what he wanted.

In the meantime he sent for contractors and made contracts for his bricklaying, plastering, carpenter work, &c., to begin as soon as the plans were passed. At the end of a week he called on the architect to find out why he had not received word to go ahead.

"The Commissioner just sent for me half an hour ago to talk about your plans," said the shyster. "I am going up there now to talk it over with him and will let you know the result in a day or two. Maybe a ten-dollar bill for his secretary might help things along a little more quickly."

A ten-dollar bill looked small compared with another week's delay, and it was readily paid. The next day the owner received a telephone message calling him to the architect's office.

"The Commissioner is kicking on the foundation," he said. "Thinks it isn't strong enough to carry two more stories. I am afraid we must tear down and build from the ground up."

This is equivalent to announcing to the owner that he must lose the savings of a lifetime, and the shyster knows it. He is only playing his fish. After he has listened to the lamentations of his client for a reasonably long time he said:

"Well, maybe we can fix it, but it will be expensive. Fifty dollars now for the Commissioner and a ten-dollar bill now and again for the Inspector to look the other way when he comes around. Maybe that will fix it, but it's only because the Commissioner is a friend of mine. He wouldn't do it for anybody else."

A week or so later the victim called on the architect again to find out why he had not been authorized to begin work. This time the Commissioner had found that the rooms are really too small.

"He says he can't stand for that even for me," says the shyster. "He says we must get along with a room less."

A room less in each apartment means less rent from the building and a consequent shrinkage in the investment. Again the shyster suggested $25, this time for the Commissioner's secretary.

"He will slip our papers in among a lot of others and the Commissioner will sign them all together," he said.

It is needless, however, to relate in detail all the excuses on which the victim was bled. At the end of three months he was no nearer starting work on his building than at the beginning, and he had paid several hundred dollars to the shyster to be used in bribing the officials of the Building and Tenement Departments, for when the Building Department had all been bought the shyster had to begin all over again with his friends in the Tenement Department. At the end of this time the owner was desperate. He saw his investment slipping away. He had lost three months' rent and had paid out a lot of money from which he was beginning to suspect he would receive no benefit. In his despair he went to a builder of his acquaintance and told him the whole story.

"Who did you say your architect was?" the builder asked. "Blank? I've heard of him before. I guess you have been bunkoed. Better come up with me to the department and we will find out."

At the Building Department they found that no plans for his building had ever been filed, and that there had been other similar complaints.

"The worst of it is," said an official of the Building Department, "that we can never get the victims to prosecute these swindlers, because they must admit to do so that they entered into a conspiracy to bribe public officials. Then if any move were made to prosecute, the architect undoubtedly has plans in his office for the building which he would file at once, and he would explain the delay by saying that he had found it very difficult to prepare the plans for the work desired in accordance with the law. The only redress for the victim is to take it out of the shyster's hide, and of course as a public officer I can't advise that. I understand, however, that some of the victims have done so after going away from here."

PRAISES FORCE OF LIFERS.

Dr. Hadley "Revolutionized" Medical Treatment, Says a Doctor.

Dr. George E. Contant, an employe of the Force of Life Chemical Company for two years, testified at the hearing yesterday for the accused officers of the concern, before United States Commissioner Ridgway. He was graduated from Bellevue in 1879. He said that from "symptom blanks" he diagnosed ailments and prescribed for from 80 to 200 patients a day. The cases were all chronic, and 70 per cent., he asserted, were either cured or benefited. His salary was $30 a week.

Dr. Wallace Hadley, one of the defendants, received $40 a week, the witness said. Dr. Contant said that he considered Dr. Hadley an eminent physician, and that "in a way" he had revolutionized the practice of medicine.

J. F. Thorne, the former advertising manager of the company, testified that the testimonials circulated by the company were all voluntary. His salary was $100 a week. The hearing was adjourned until next Friday.

DARED TO SHOOT, HE DID.

Stagehand Puts Bullet Into Another in Saloon—Shooting Kept Secret.

According to the story of the wounded man's wife, William Newell, a stage carpenter of 249 West Thirty-ninth Street, was flourishing a revolver in a Fortieth Street saloon last Wednesday night when Frank G. Edwards, another stage carpenter of 104 West Fortieth Street, walked up to Newell, saying:

"Put up that gun. You wouldn't shoot anybody."

By way of answer Newell, the story goes, shot Edwards in the groin and walked out. Edwards, though wounded, managed to get home. He wouldn't permit his wife to send for a doctor, nor would he go to a hospital until Thursday night. Last night Mrs. Edwards had Detectives Farley and McDonnell arrest Newell, whom she pointed out. He was locked up in the Tenderloin Station charged with felonious assault.

COUNTY FULL OF GRAFTERS.

Hudson County Grand Jury Thinks So—Indictments Expected.

When the Hudson County Grand Jury presents itself in the courthouse on Jersey City Heights next Friday it is expected to hand up a batch of indictments against local officials all over the county.

Ever since the Grand Jury was sworn in a month ago the officials of the cities and towns in the county have been stirred up to a pitch not equaled since the days of the Bumsted régime thirty years ago. The local officials have been keeping tally of the names of those summoned to testify before the Grand Jury, and there is scarcely a town or city in the county that has not been raked for witnesses.

The presence of a number of contractors from Bayonne has led to the belief that certain city coal contractors have been inquired into. The books of several of the North Hudson townships, Weehawken certain city coal contracts have been called for. A visit made to the Town Hall of Harrison by a special committee from the Grand Jury has given the officials of that town something to think about.

Some alleged irregularities in the Hoboken City Hall have also apparently been under scrutiny. In Jersey City the scandals in connection with the management of the present city hospital and the erection of the new one have been looked into. The methods of the County Boulevard Commission, which has charge of the county's $4,000,000 drive, are thought from the names of some of the witnesses to have been under scrutiny.

It is said not a community in the whole county will escape presentment in some form or other.

NORFOLK, Va., March 17.—The Bay Shore Railroad, which has been in a receiver's hands for two years, was to-day ordered sold at auction by United States Judge Waddill. The purchasers of the road are to pay down at the time of sale $50,000 in cash and the remainder within thirty days.

SOUTHERN MEN DIVIDED OVER SPEECH OF PARKER

Leaders in Washington Discuss Plea for Southern Candidate.

SHARP TALK BY A SENATOR

Calls Judge Parker the Poorest Candidate He Ever Knew—Representative Holds Other View.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The suggestion of Judge Alton B. Parker in his speech at Charlotte yesterday, that the next Democratic nominee for the Presidency should be a Southern man, attracted no little attention to-day among the Southern Democrats in Washington. In their discussion of it among themselves they showed a wide divergence of opinion.

In the office of one of the Southern Senators, in the Senate Annex, there was a long discussion of the subject this afternoon. The Senator is one of the men who would stand directly in the path of the lightning if the convention of 1908 should follow the advice of Judge Parker. He is one of the ablest members of his party in the Senate, and his political sapiency has long been recognized by Republicans as well as Democrats.

He helped to nominate Judge Parker for the Presidency at the St. Louis Convention two years ago, and had his share in delivering the Electoral vote of his State to the candidate. But that experience has made him distrustful of Parker's advice or tactics.

"I know what this means," he said to-day. "It is simply a scheme to beat Bryan. I don't mean by that to imply that Mr. Bryan should necessarily be the nominee again in 1908. I mean that it is an effort on Parker's part to defeat the choice of a candidate who will represent the ideas for which Bryan stands.

"I will go further and say this about Parker. He was the poorest candidate I have ever known. From the day of his nomination to the end of his campaign he never uttered a word or wrote a line or did a thing that helped his candidacy. He was a dead weight and a drag from start to finish. Now I can't see why his advice should have any weight in the next campaign. He has demonstrated completely that it is no good, and if there there were no other reason than he has given by his own conduct that alone should be sufficient warning to the Democrats to disregard him hereafter."

One of the Senator's auditors was a Representative from his own State, who disagreed with him emphatically.

"I think Parker has grown steadily since his defeat," he said, "and I believe that he is absolutely right now in the advisability of selecting the next candidate from the South.

"The West represents one set of ideas and the East represents another set. As long as the candidate is chosen from either section it will be impossible to harmonize the party thoroughly, and that is the first essential if we are to have a victorious campaign. The man to do that must come from the South. He is allied with neither of the two elements, but he is thoroughly in accord with the party platform and the party principles.

"Besides, as Judge Parker says, it is time the South had some recognition. We have always been perfectly willing to stand aside and let the nomination go to one of the Northern States; in fact, we have insisted on waiving our own claims to preference. But now the opportunity has come to us not only to take the place we ought to have, but to serve the party by doing so."

Justice Samuel Seabury of the City Court of New York, who is in Washington, had this to say to-day about the Charlotte speech:

"Judge Parker assumes that the reason the party suffered 'the worst defeat in our party history' in 1904 was because the candidate came from New York State. The true reason for that defeat was not the fact that the candidate came from New York, as Judge Parker modestly suggests, but the character—or, rather, lack of character—in the candidate that was nominated.

"Judge Parker was a wholly negative factor and stood for nothing but the office which certain corporate interests were anxious to have him hold. The Democratic Party never deserved defeat more than in 1904, when it repudiated principles and nominated a colorless candidate. When the Democratic Party shall stand for Democratic principles and has the courage to nominate a fearless exponent of these principles it will win, and not until then."

CAMDEN, S. C., March 17.—David B. Hill to-day declined to give his views on Judge Parker's Charlotte speech in which Southern leadership of the Democratic Party was urged.

"I have resolved not to say anything while in the South," said Mr. Hill.

Little Blaze on Theatre Stage.

At the performance of "The Prince of Pilsen" at the Newark Theatre last night, while Arthur Donaldson and Jess Dandy were on the stage, an artificial palm caught fire. Many of the spectators rose nervously from their seats, but none left the theatre. Donaldson quickly beat out the flames while Dandy joked with the audience. The play then went on.

SAYS SONS FORGET HIM.

Aged Minister's Plea Moves His Conference to Sympathy.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 17.—The Methodist Conference had no heart to punish the Rev. Lucius Manchester of Sharpstown, N. J., who was charged with failing to pay his debts, when he had finished his explanation about the old promissory notes before the trial committee to-day. The conference voted only a reprimand for "highly imprudent and unministerial conduct."

Mr. Manchester is 70 years old. Years ago he gave the notes to pay for the education of his two sons in college. One now is a professor in North Carolina and the other a physician in New York. His boys have forgotten him, he said, in their prosperity, and he has grown too old to earn more than his living.

The trial committee, while it found Mr. Manchester guilty of ministerial misconduct, said that all of the charges had not been sustained by the evidence. In executive session Bishop Goodsell reproved him as kindly as he could, the septuagenarian minister shaking as if with the palsy while the Bishop administered the reprimand.

The Rev. Mr. Manchester served the First Church at West Long Branch. When transferred to Sharptown he borrowed $800 from a parishioner. This is still unpaid. The conference passed his character, and he was continued in the conference.

The Conference passed a resolution calling Gov. Stokes, who is a member of the First Methodist Church of Millville, N. J., an "uncompromising enemy of official misconduct and dereliction."

CROWD IN A DIAMOND HUNT.

Goldstein Found His Stud and the Police Got Man He Accused.

Several hundred persons engaged in a diamond hunt on the downtown elevated Sixth Avenue station at Cortlandt Street yesterday afternoon, and for ten minutes it looked as if the reserves from the Church Street Station would have to be called out.

Simon Goldstein, a delicatessen dealer at 340 Canal Street, startled the crowd by shouting that some one had seized his $250 diamond stud and was twisting it out of his shirt bosom. The thief got the stud, but dropped it just as Goldstein grabbed him by the throat.

Detectives Cohen and McCutcheon heard the yells as they stood at the door of the Church Street Police Station and ran to the scene. They collared the man Goldstein held.

Then a search began for the missing diamond. Goldstein found it finally. The prisoner gave his name as Charles Morris, 26 years old, of 368 West Eighth Street. There is no such number as he gave.

AMERICANS TO GO TO GIRTON.

Scheme to Send Girls from This Country to English Universities.

Foreign Correspondence NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, March 6.—At the seventh anniversary luncheon of the Society of American Women in London, held yesterday at the Hotel Cecil, it was announced that plans were under way to send American girls to English universities.

Mrs. Webster Glynes, the President of the society, presided, and among those present were the Lady Mayoress, Lady Samuel, Mrs. Morgan Dockrell, Mrs. Ormiston Chant, Miss Constance Jones of Girton College, Miss d'Espaigne Chapman, Mrs. John Lane, Mrs. Weed Ward, Mrs. Neeson, Mme. Thayer, and Mrs. Roche.

Mrs. Glynes said that in 1900 the society became affiliated with the General Federation of Women's Clubs in America, which was working in a variety of ways for the betterment of women. About a year ago it was decided to support a scheme, initiated by the Committee on Education, to supplement the admirable work of the late Cecil Rhodes by founding scholarships for American women in English universities. The society sought the co-operation of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in that work, and it would have a place on the programme of the Federation at the triennial meeting next June, when the subject would be discussed.

The society, said Mrs. Glynes, was collecting funds for a scholar from the District of Columbia whom it was proposed to bring over "as an object lesson to all the States." They had also pledged themselves to further a reciprocity scheme of sending English women to American colleges, and they hoped to enlist the cooperation of English women in that enterprise.

Miss Constance Jones, in the course of an address on "Scholarships," expressed her interest in the society's scholarship scheme, and said that anything which, like that scheme, tended to draw England and America closer together must be of advantage. She had always felt sorry that the Rhodes scholarship scheme did not apply to women as well as men, but she felt that the society's scheme would redress the balance a little.

Mrs. Ormiston Chant spoke on "Reciprocity."

Small Fire but a Big Crowd.

The reserves had to be called from the Tenderloin Station last night to handle the crowd of open-mouthed people who gathered at Seventh Avenue and Twenty-sixth Street to watch a five-hundred-dollar fire in a hayloft at 158 West Twenty-sixth Street. This is a three-story building, in which John Devoley has a stable for his twenty-seven horses and a room or so for himself and family. Both the horses and the family got out without injury.

MARCH 1906

FINDS HOWELL DEBTOR TO POLICE FUND: $1,466

McAdoo's Secretary Charged with It Since 1904.

BINGHAM REPORTS A DEFICIT

A Shortage of $9,887 Due to Contingent Expenses of the Vice Squad for 1905.

Police Commissioner Bingham finds, according to a letter addressed to Mayor McClellan by him that William Howell, ex-Commissioner McAdoo's secretary in the Police Department, is a debtor to the department to the amount of $1,466.09. This is part of a deficit of $9,887.39 for 1905, according to Gen. Bingham's report. This deficit, according to the Commissioners of Accounts, who made the investigation, is due to the contingent expenses of the vice squad established by Mr. McAdoo.

Gen. Bingham's letter to the Mayor reads as follows:

His Honor the Mayor, City Hall, New York:

Sir: I have the honor to call your attention to the fact that there is a deficiency in funds for contingent expenses, Police Department, for 1905, amounting to $9,887.39.

When I took charge of this office I asked for an examination of the accounts and funds of the Police Department by the Commissioners of Accounts. They made a report, dated March 8, 1906, from which the following paragraph is taken:

"The unexpended balance of the 1905 contingent account on Jan. 1, 1906, was $1,629.41. Liabilities were contracted in 1905 amounting to $11,036.24 of such a nature that they could be charged only to the contingent fund account, which remain unpaid. To enable the Commissioner to discharge these liabilities will require an addition to the 1906 contingency appropriation of $9,406.83."

Since the foregoing report was written bills have been rendered chargeable against the contingent fund, Police Department, for the year 1905, bringing the amount of liabilities, as reported by the said Commissioners of Accounts, from $9,406.83 up to $10,071.95, to pay which there is a cash balance on hand of only $184.56, showing a deficit, as stated above, of $9,887.39. The appropriation for the year 1905 having been exhausted, there is no money to pay these bills.

The expenses of the Vice Squad for 1905 were $9,840.20. Meals were furnished to Secretaries and clerks amounting to $695. Both of these items, however, were paid before I took office.

I am also informed that there is still owing to the contingent fund, Police Department, for the year 1904 from William Howell the sum of $1,466.09.

Hereto are appended certain sections of the charter which bear on the above. Respectfully,

THEODORE A. BINGHAM,
Police Commissioner.

The Police Commissioner appended a copy of two sections of the city charter relating to extraordinary expenditures in the department. He declined yesterday to discuss possible action he might take concerning the matter.

It was said yesterday that no vouchers had been turned in by Howell relating to the expenditure of the amount charged against him.

BINGHAM AND BRYAN AT ODDS.

Latter Wants Police at Subway Stations—Bingham Says No.

Police Commissioner Bingham and Vice President Bryan of the Interborough Company have locked horns on the question of policing the Subway and elevated stations. Under Mr. McAdoo the Manhattan Elevated, the Interborough, and the Long Island Railroad Companies were given permission to clothe in blue uniforms the special policemen employed to keep the rush hour crowds in order and incidentally to perform the general duties of guards. The companies said that the gray coat of a special policeman did not inspire sufficient respect to be effective.

Commissioner Bingham has found, he says, that the regular force got a bad name because of the actions of some of the helmeted corporation employes, whose blue clothes are a counterpart of the regular police uniform except for the shape of the shield, and he accordingly issued an order that the special policemen must be back in gray uniforms by May 1.

The Long Island Railroad has promised to obey the order, but Vice President Bryan wrote to the Commissioner saying that "if the co-operation of the department is withdrawn and the authority of his special police is impaired by the deprivation of the uniform, he cannot undertake to continue relieving the department of its obligation to police the stations after May 1." Mr. Bryan closed with a request for details of regular patrolmen.

Commissioner Bingham gave out the correspondence yesterday. He was asked if he would grant Mr. Bryan's request.

"I think you know me well enough to guess," he replied. "What! detail city policemen to guard private property? I've nothing to say."

BINGHAM IS THINKING

That the Patrol Service Needs Improvement—No More "Shoo-Fly" Men.

When asked yesterday if he was any nearer a solution of the problem of securing a better patrol system in the department, Police Commissioner Bingham said:

"I am three months nearer."

As to whether he thought the patrol service under the present system had improved any since he became Commissioner, he would not comment, but stated he had never said that he would restore the old two-platoon system.

"It's a deep subject, and I shall think a lot about it before making any changes," he said.

"Is it true that you are thinking about restoring the 'shoo-fly' Roundsman system?"

"Not for a minute," he declared. "That is a bad principle, and I have not the least idea of restoring it."

The Commissioner said that if the patrol service under the existing system does not show signs of improvement he would be less likely to restore the two-platoon system.

HIS DENIAL COMPLETE.

Mr. Roach Sets at Rest a Story That Startled Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—A few days ago, a Washington newspaper had a startling story that a former private secretary of the late James G. Blaine, who was living a hermit's life in the West, was preparing an exposure of many scandals in Washington.

The story told how the private secretary, one Harry N. Roach, who was with Blaine for eight years, had been engaged for several years upon a manuscript that he wanted the world to have after he is dead. This manuscript had been placed in a cement box lined with zinc and buried under the floor of the cabin in which he lives.

The Washington Star to-night contains the following note from Mr. Roach:

"I never was interviewed, never gave out a statement, never was qualified for private or any old kind of secretary, never wrote a manuscript, never owned a zinc-lined cement box, have no exposures to make against Washington society, or the social customs of any other place. Near the Osler dope age and trying to live a quiet, simple life."

Mrs. Roosevelt Returning.

GROTON, Mass., March 17.—Mrs. Roosevelt, the President's wife, who came here yesterday to attend the confirmation exercises of the class at Groton Academy of which her son Kermit is a member, left here to-day for Washington by way of Boston. She is due at Washington to-morrow afternoon.

PICNIC FOR PICTURE SHARPS.

The Silo Galleries, Fifth Avenue, below Thirty-fifth Street, contain a big collection of paintings by old masters belonging to Mr. Louis R. Ehrich, which are shown preparatory to their sale at auction in the ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria on the evening of Wednesday, March 21. For people who care for old paintings on their own merits without regard to name of painter, pedigree, or price attained at some former sale, this exhibition is a picnic; there are so many canvases delightful through their beauty or interesting because of their historical associations. Picture sharps will not fail to enjoy it, since it carries the impression throughout of a collector who really loves, really studies ancient pictorial art, and furthermore includes pictures by artists of the past whose work rarely crosses the ocean.

Along with paintings by artists like Bronzino, Teniers, Wouwermans, Van Goyen, Nicolaas Maes, Mignard, Sir Godfrey Kneller, Lely, Chardin, Hoppner, Reynolds, and Sir Thomas Lawrence we find very striking portraits by Spaniards little known, such as J. B. del Maso, Cerezo, Bernardo de Llorente, C. de Miranda; by Netherlanders like Gonzales Coques, Bellevois, Antonio Moro, and Jan Wynants; by Frenchmen like Sebastien Leclerc, B. de Bar, J. B. J. Pater, P. Valentin, and Robert Tournières, and by Britons like Henry Stone, Willcock, John Riley, Thomas Hudson, Camillus Hone, William Dobson, and George Dawe. These minor lights of the seventeenth, eighteenth, and nineteenth centuries afford real collectors the keenest pleasure. The timid man who is conscious that he buys names, not pictures he loves, who will not venture where he has no guide, avoids these pictures when he sees them under their true names. If, however, conscienceless dealers cause the faces and hands of figures by these minor masters to be deftly repainted and attach to the frame the name of a contemporary whose work is known over here, then the poor collector, dazzled by the glitter of the title, pays a startling price for his gold brick.

It is pleasant to examine a collection where attributions are not forced, and where this petty humbug of repainting faces and hands is not found. The sterling portraits of a Dutch gentleman and his wife by Jan Victoors are not baptized Rembrandt or Hals, yet they exert their charm under the proper attribution. Victoors worked for Rembrandt for five years; no ordinary man, however, could have painted this simple yet noble old Hollander. The stout wife lacks the character shown by the old lady by Nicolaas Maes, just bought for the Metropolitan from the Ehrich galleries, which was reproduced in last Sunday's TIMES. But she is well painted and expresses her own commoner strain and individuality.

Sir Godfrey Kneller, a Netherlander always associated with England, appears in a superbly grave, psychological portrait of King William III., Prince of Orange-Nassau—if it be permitted, indeed, to mention that detested name on St. Patrick's Day in the Morning. Irishmen, however, will be the first to enjoy the cold, disdainful expression on the royal intruder's face, which may remind them of the quality in Charles Parnell that mastered Parliament. This half-length in long, curly wig and polished steel cuirass, so sad of look and disgusted in expression, ought to find a resting place in some historical museum, since it is a little chapter of British history for eyes that understand.

One of the finest portraits here is by John Constable, the Englishman who in France and America is hardly known except by landscapes. And the subject is a rare one—none other than Dan Mendoza, the pugilist, who at one time patronized noblemen crazy about the prize ring and had his biography printed like a conqueror. A disagreeable face is his whom we see portrayed in the correct attire of a gentleman of the period, not exactly the face of a bruiser, either. But how firmly and splendidly painted! From such an example one argues that Constable, had he wished, might have become one of the great portraitists of his time.

Sir Thomas Lawrence without his frills and patent Cupid's-bow mouth is seen in a portrait of an unknown lady, whose expression has something fateful in it—a picture extremely attractive on its own intrinsic merits, requiring no "shadow of a great name." Then take the portrait of François Mouchard by Tournières and observe how this capital but somewhat hard-painting painter has expressed kindliness and wit in the old, urbane face with its double chin. "The Prodigal Son," by Teniers, combines a Biblical figure in the foreground with a racy group of Dutch country folk before a tavern in the background. Pater's "Glutton" is riskier than the risky Dutch pictures, and has the color scheme of the school to which he belonged. Very lovely is the portrait of Violante Palma removing her necklace in a fit of pious renunciation, a work by some one of the Palma family. And what a fine personality looks from the clear eyes of the young lady assigned to Bronzino, from Prince Sciarra's collection! Beautiful is the "Twilight on a Dutch River" by Jan van Goyen, and spaciously poetic the "Old Broken Bridge," by Adriaan van de Velde. Such landscapes reduce to nothing the claims one sometimes sees in print that landscape began with Claude and hardly existed before Constable and Corot.

The double portrait of the Duchesse de Châteauroux and the Comtesse de Flavacourt, by Nattier, was reproduced and noticed in the Sunday Supplement several weeks ago. It is likely to provoke keen competition owing to the lively interest taken nowadays in the beauties of the Court of Louis XV. and the finer work of the Court painters of France. More than fifty artists are represented in this sale, and seventy-four is the number of canvases coming to the hammer.

We have not had so interesting a collection for a long time. It is a lesson for art collectors and artists. The Ehrich Galleries sell with a guarantee to return the purchase money for any picture which is "disputed by competent expert authority" if the buyer demands it within one year from the date of sale.

Ittel Gets Rifle Shooting Trophy.

The tournament shoot of the Zettler Rifle Club, which continued for seven days on the range of the club, at 157 West Twenty-third Street, was brought to a close last night. The Zimmerman trophy, which was esteemed to require the highest grade shooting, was won by L. Ittel, with five 38 scores, and R. Gute second, with 4. No one succeeded in making a perfect 39. The leaders in each contest were:

100-Shot Match.—A. Hubalek, 2,468; R. Gute, 2,464; W. A. Tewes, 2,461; L. Ittel, 2,459; W. A. Hudson, 2,459; F. C. Ross, 2,453; Owen Smith, 2,451; M. Baal, 2,448; H. M. Thomas, 2,448; John Kaufman, 2,441; A. F. Laudensack, 2,435; W. J. Carr, 2,435; L. Buss, 2,434; M. Dorrler, 2,433; W. H. French, 2,433; T. R. Geisel, 2,429; Dr. Stillman, 2,426; G. Schlicht, 2,421; W. Rosenbaum, 2,419; F. L. Smith, 2,418.

Ring Target, Possible 75.—Dr. Hudson, 75, 75, 75, 75, 75; R. Gute, 75, 75, 75, 75; L. Ittel, 75, 75, 75; L. Buss, 75, 75, 75; W. J. Carr, 75, 75, 75; A. F. Laudensack, 75, 75, 75; M. Dorrler, 74, 74, 74; A. Hubalek, 74, 74, 74, 74; T. R. Geisel, 75, 75; H. M. Thomas, 74, 74, 74; W. E. Glenn, 74, 74; W. A. Tewes, 74, 74.

YACHT RACING DATES TENTATIVELY ARRANGED

Meetings Next Week Will Fix Remaining Features.

OVER SIXTY REGATTAS LISTED

Season to Open on May 26 and Continue Well Into October—Cruises of Interest.

The schedule meeting of the Long Island Yacht Racing Association will be held on either March 29 or 30 at the Hotel Astor to arrange for the racing events on the Sound for the season. On the former date the Gravesend Bay Yacht Racing Association will meet for the same purpose at the Crescent Athletic Club house. The adjustment of the fixtures of these two parent associations will permit the various individual clubs proceeding with the arrangement of their special features, and within a week following the announcement of their dates the whole schedule will be practically fixed. The New York Yacht Club cruise and the joint cruise of the Atlantic, Seawanhaka-Corinthian, and Philadelphia Corinthian Clubs have not yet been settled for any particular date. Both are of unusual importance this year, as each anticipates special races of considerable moment.

The main features of the Sound racing schedule are tentatively settled on. Unless present plans are upset, New Rochelle will open May 26, with the Harlem Yacht Club following on May 30. Manhasset Bay Yacht Club will probably hold power boat races on that day as well. On June 2 the Knickerbocker Yacht Club's annual regatta will follow, and June 9 Manhasset's. The New York Yacht Club's annual regatta is arranged for June 14 at Glen Cove, and June 16 is fixed for the annual regatta of the Larchmont Yacht Club. On June 23 will be the annual Seawanhaka-Corinthian regatta, concluding a race week series at Oyster Bay. The following Saturday will be allotted to the New Rochelle Yacht Club.

The American Yacht Club opens with its annual regatta on July 2, and Larchmont's annual follows on July 4. Riverside Yacht Club's annual regatta and the New York Yacht Club's races for the Spring cups will be held on July 7, followed by Larchmont race week from July 14 to July 21 inclusive. The Glen Cove Cups offered by New York will be contested July 19, and Indian Harbor closes the month on July 28.

August is undetermined. It is given over to the smaller clubs with the exception of one Saturday, probably the last, given over to the American Yacht Club. There will probably be arranged two regattas every Saturday at points widely separated, to avoid conflict. In these, Stamford, Horseshoe Harbor, Bridgeport, Huguenot, Northport, Hartford, Hempstead Harbor, and Huntington will be provided for.

The Indian Harbor Fall regatta is slated for Sept. 1, with the Larchmont special races on the same day. The Fall regatta at Larchmont will occupy Sept. 3, while Sachem's Head and Norwalk have the same day. The New York Fall regatta follows on Sept. 8, and on the same day Manhasset Bay, with the Larchmont schooner races as well. Seawanhaka-Corinthians and the American follow on the next two Saturdays, and probably special races follow these.

On the lower bay, open regattas are offered for every Saturday from May 26 to Sept. 29, and on every holiday as well. The Atlantic Yacht Club has eleven of these race days, twenty-two all told. Bensonhurst and Brooklyn each have four, and the Marine and Field Club and New York Canoe Club and the Crescent Athletic Club one each. Besides these, both the Crescent Athletic Club and the Marine and Field Club have special dory races. Bensonhurst has another small boat series and the Childs and Bellowes Trophies, and the Atlantic the Havens Cup races, all of which will be held on intermediate week days.

There are already four cruising races slated, with several more to follow. These are fixed: The Brooklyn Yacht Club Lipton Cup race to Bermuda, on May 26 and following days; the New York Athletic Club race to Block Island, on June 30; the New Rochelle race for the Brooklyn Cup, on July 7, and the Knickerbocker Yacht Club race from Marblehead, on June 27.

RACING YACHTS LISTED.

Amorita, Senta, and a Number of Old Champions for Sale.

The promise of a singularly active racing season in yachting, with the extensive building that has been going on and the transfer of a number of prominent racing boats to new owners, who will commission and race them, has led to the placing on the market of more first-class racing boats than probably have been offered in any other year in yachting annals. Many of these boats, when their availability becomes known, will probably be snapped up in a jiffy, insuring the commissioning of many more for active campaigning.

Perhaps the most interesting offered from many standpoints is Richard Mansfield's Amorita, the crack Cary Smith schooner built ten years ago, that made quite a name for herself as a racer when in the hands of W. Gould Brokaw.

Two other prominent schooners are offered. One is C. Howard Clark's Savarona, the Binney-designed boat built by Lawley in 1904, which is to be abandoned by her owner for another schooner built on the same plan but of larger dimensions, on which work is now progressing at Lawley's yard. The other is the seventy-footer Osprey.

Of the sloops offered the most prominent is F. Lothrop Ames's Shark, the crack fifty-footer which with Humma divided honors in the old class of racers, and which to-day is only outclassed for speed by the new Doris by reason of her heavy penalty exacted by the new measurement rule.

Next to Shark in interest is the Fife cutter Senta, owned by T. M. McKee, only less well known because she has raced less on this side of the water.

There are two Herreshoff 40-footers offered, both ex-champions, and one 43-footer. The latter, the Aspirant, won the Astor Cup for the Hanck boys in 1904. The others, the Leda, owned by S. H. Mason, won the Long Island Sound championship for two years, and the Jack Rabbit II., owned by C. D. Percival, won similar honors on Massachusetts Bay. Two other Herreshoff champions are offered in the 30-foot class, James W. Alker's Alert, winner for three years on Long Island Sound, and E. F. Luckenbach's Bobtail, similar title holder for two years on Gravesend Bay.

Two other notable boats in Alert's class on the Sound will change hands. Colgate S. Hoyt's Tito has already been sold, Arthur Fowler, son of the late Anderson Fowler, buying her. The other fast Seawanhaka 30-footer is Victor I. Cumnock's Nike. These boats, like Alert, have been driven out by the continuous successes of Trenor L. Park's Mimosa III., but are expected to figure prominently in the handicap class.

Of similar size the champion 33-foot yawl Memory is offered by H. Mason Raborg. He has purchased the Irondequoit and will race her in the larger class. Memory won the championship for four of the last five years on Long Island Sound, not being commissioned in 1904. Henry A. Morss's 35-footer Cossack is another able boat offered.

Of the smaller boats there is a host. Of greatest interest in New York waters is the sale of Harry L. Maxwell's, New York, 30-footer Phryne, which led the new one-design Herreshoff class, until her owner ceased to race her and devoted all his attention to his father's Yankee, which he now owns.

Equally interesting in another sense is the offer of the Sally VII., the six-year champion of Massachusetts Bay in the 25-foot class, the boat which has the greatest racing record of any yacht of her inches afloat, which last year started 29 times, won 23 races, and finished second on time allowance 6 times.

Then there are C. F. Tillinghast's Little Rhody, the winner of the Lipton Cup in the race from New York to Marblehead in 1904, and again the winner of the Bristol Yacht Club's ocean race last year, and with her the boat that finished second in the Lipton Cup race, H. A. Hawes's Ray II. There are the 1903 champion raceabout, T. B. Bleeker's Jolly Roger, and her competitor, John Le Boutillier's Heron. There is the Class Q 1905 champion, F. P. Currier's Paumonak, and the Rochester Yacht Club's 20-foot champion Petrel. There are Gordon L. Pirie's 21-foot raceabout Mavis, R. F. Clarke's 30-footer Argonaut, the Ferris keel cutter Corona, a 21-footer; the Burgess 30-footer Sanquoit, and E. A. Stevens, Jr.'s, 22-footer Chingachgook, all of them with good records.

With these boats likely to be sold any day in the next month and ready for early commissioning, the fleet of 1906 ought to be the largest and the most notable seen in the vicinity of New York in yachting history.

POGGENBURG IN POOR FORM.

New York Amateur Lost to Demarest in National Billiard Tourney.

CHICAGO, March 17.—With only two regularly scheduled games yet to be played in the National amateur billiard championship tournament to-night, it was assured that the title of champion, which has been held for a year by Charles F. Conklin of Chicago, will go to an Easterner.

Edward W. Gardner of Passaic, N. J., is the only one of the six contestants who has not lost a game, but he has J. Ferdinand Poggenburg of New York as an opponent for the final game, and should the latter win this match he and Gardner will be tied for first place.

Playing in the poorest form he has shown in the championship Poggenburg met defeat to-night at the hands of Calvin Demarest of Chicago. The young Westerner outplayed the ex-champion easily, and won by 300 points to 151. At the start the match promised to be one of the most exciting of the fourteen-inch balk-line competitions, two counts allowed in balk, in the series at the Chicago Athletic Association. But Poggenburg lost his stroke and control of the ivory balls so completely that he made an unexpectedly poor finish.

After starting out with a zero, Demarest in the second inning counted 34. He came back in the next period with 46 and in the sixth he manipulated the balls for a run of 78. By the time the ninth inning had been reached his total was 212, while Poggenburg had counted only 82.

It looked at this point as if Demarest would certainly succeed in breaking the single average for this class of billiards, but during the next seven innings he fell down woefully, and at the commencement of the eighteenth inning his total count had been increased only 13 points. After this, however, he steadied in his work and ran the game out in the twenty-first inning with a run of 42. Summary:

Demarest—Total, 300; high run, 78; average, 14 6-21. Poggenburg—Total, 151; high run, 29; average, 7 4-21.

The afternoon game between H. A. Wright of San Francisco and C. F. Conklin of Chicago was won by Wright by a score of 300 to 244. It took Wright 29 innings to make the required number of points. Both men were badly out of stroke for the first ten innings, but in the twelfth Wright got the ivories rolling, and with runs of 43, 37, and 22 in the twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth innings took an apparently commanding lead.

In the seventeenth inning Conklin, who had run double figures only three times up to then, made a beautiful run of 90, and, following with 17, took the lead for the first time. Wright made 56 in the twenty-first inning, and from that time on held the game safely. Summary:

Wright, 300; high run, 56; average, 10 10-29. Conklin, 244; high run, 90; average, 8 12-29.

The standing of the players and grand averages up to the end of to-night's play follow:

Player.	Won.	Lost.	Grand Average.
Gardner	4	0	8 104-139
Poggenburg	3	1	9 88-107
Demarest	3	2	12 8-116
Wright	3	2	9 87-131
Conklin	0	4	8 98-111
Norris	0	4	6 75-121

Gallagher's Good Billiard Average.

The five-day match which "Willie" Hoppe and Tom Gallagher have been playing during the past week came to a conclusion last evening, Hoppe winning by a score of 2,000 to 1,640. Gallagher added 508 points to his string last evening while Hoppe was amassing his last 400, and averaged 21 20-23, showing the best form he has displayed in the match. Hoppe averaged 15 2-3, and also had good command of the balls, but they appeared to break somewhat harder for him. Gallagher's high run was 75 and Hoppe's 74. Gallagher played two shots in eighteen-inch balk to Hoppe's one.

In the afternoon Hoppe defeated Ed. McLaughlin on the same conditions by a score of 300 points to 240. McLaughlin made one very notable run of 96, but he was erratic and could not hold the balls together as a rule. Hoppe did not appear to exert himself especially, but totalled one run of 68. He averaged 15 to McLaughlin's 12.

GYMNASIUM FOR MIDDIES.

Plan to Put One in the Seamanship Building Is Approved.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 17.—The Navy Department has notified the authorities of the Naval Academy that plans have been approved for the arrangement of a gymnasium for the Midshipmen in the Seamanship Building at the cost of $170,000.

A separate gymnasium building had been contemplated, but the new plan is to construct a second floor over most of the space occupied by the Seamanship Building and construct the gymnasium and running track there. The floor space will be about 400 by 100 feet.

AERO CLUB HONORS THE WRIGHT BROTHERS

Practical Invention in Flying Machine Commended.

SIX LONG-DISTANCE FLIGHTS

First Official Statement of Their Success Sent to Club Directors—More Tests Coming.

In recognition of the success of the Wright brothers toward solving the problem of aerial navigation, the Aero Club of America adopted congratulatory resolutions last week and sent a copy of them to the American aeronauts at Dayton, Ohio. Unusual attention has recently been directed to these aeroplane inventions from the fact that after careful investigation by French scientists the French Government has purchased the rights to the exclusive use of the principles employed by the Wright brothers in their latest and most successful flying machine.

The resolutions as adopted by the Aero Club are:

Whereas, The Messrs. Wright brothers, Wilbur and Orville of Dayton, Ohio, have developed an aeroplane type of flying machine that many times has carried a man safely through the air at high speed and continuously over long distances, and therefore is of practical value to mankind; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Aero Club of America hereby expresses to them its hearty felicitations on their great achievement in devising, constructing, and operating a successful man-carrying dynamic flying machine.

In their investigations and flights the Wright brothers have given no public exhibitions, so that very little accurate information has become generally known concerning the number, length, and success of their flights in motor-propelled airships. At the request of the Directors of the Aero Club an interesting statement has been sent by Orville and Wilbur Wright, and this has been prepared in the form of a circular letter of information for all the members of the club. It presents the most concise and authoritative account that has yet been given of the experiments up to the present time.

Their latest machine, that of 1905, and whose possibilities as a practical flying machine attracted the attention of the French Government, weighed, with the operator, 925 pounds. It was so strongly built that it was possible to make landings at high speed without straining or breaking the machine.

"The prime object," say the inventors, "was to devise a machine of practical utility rather than a useless and extravagant toy. For this reason extreme lightness of construction has always been rejected. Every effort has been made to increase the scientific efficiency of the wings and screws in order that heavily built machines may be carried with a moderate expenditure of power. The favorable results which have been obtained have been due to improvements in flying quality resulting from more scientific design and to improved methods of balancing and steering."

With this improved machine six notable flights were made between Sept. 26 and Oct. 5 last year. That of Oct. 5 was the most successful, for the machine remained in the air 38 minutes and 3 seconds and traveled a distance of 24 1-5 miles. Exhaustion of fuel was the cause of stopping. Another remarkable fact is that all of these flights were made over a circular course of about three-quarters of a mile. In straight flight the Wright brothers believe that forty miles an hour could be made.

TUXEDO SOCIAL ACTIVITIES.

Special to The New York Times.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., March 17.—To-day was ideal for the week-end festivities. Many parties were out all day sleigh riding and coasting on the drives throughout the Park.

Mrs. Charles H. Coster opened her villa and entertained at dinner to-night. Others who opened their villas were Mrs. P. C. Hewitt, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Mortimer, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lanfear Norrie, Mr. and Mrs. George Coffing Warner, Mr. and Mrs. F. Cutting, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Laing, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. George Cammann.

Dinners to-night were given at nearly every cottage. James Henry Smith entertained at Kincraig T. Suffern Tailer, Mr. and Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Nicoll, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney J. Smith, and others.

Mr. and Mrs. Grenville Kane, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen H. P. Pell, Mr. and Mrs. William Kent, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Robbins, Mrs. Charles J. Coulter, and Mrs. Dominick gave dinners at their cottages.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hoppin have arrived at the Gallatin cottage, on Tower Hill, and Mrs. James Lawrence is in the Adee villa for the Spring season.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Frelinghuysen arrived to-day for over Sunday. They will occupy their Tuxedo residence early next month.

Among others who are getting their residences in readiness for early Spring occupation are Mr. and Mrs. Richard Delafield, Mr. and Mrs. James Brown Potter, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Rogers, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tuckerman.

Miss Pauline French, who went abroad in January, will return to Tuxedo about the 1st of April, and Mr. and Mrs. Amory S. Carhart, who were also abroad, will return early in May.

T. Suffern Tailer arrived at the Tennis Club to-day for a few days. Other arrivals include C. H. Wombwell, Miss Tilford, P. Lorillard, Mr. and Mrs. J. Edward Davis, Miss Delafield, Miss Tuckerman, H. S. Hooker, Miss Coster, George F. Baker, Jr., J. G. Douglas, J. F. Talmage, and Mr. and Mrs. F. Abbott Ingalls.

CASTLE WILLIAMS HOLDS HUNDREDS OF PRISONERS

GUARDED BY ONLY 26 MEN

Because of Their Strict Watch Few of the Prisoners Have Escaped from the Island.

Three hundred and forty military prisoners, many of them desperate men from Western military posts, men who would think nothing of murder if that crime would assist them in escaping, is a considerable number to hold safe within walls so rickety, so ageworn, as those of Castle Williams, the army jail for the Department of the East. As a matter of fact, the number of prisoners about numbers the strength of the soldiers stationed on Governors Island—one battalion of the Eighth Infantry—from which battalion, day and night, is selected a guard of twenty-six men, whose duty it is to see that not an escape is perpetrated while they are on duty.

To assist them Capt. Perkins and Sergt. Way, the prison officers, have a small detail of men serving as prison guards, who patrol the various tiers, and frustrate by eternal vigilance the hundred and one schemes which regulars fallen in evil ways devise to break from their durance vile. These inside guards, of course, are loaded with deep responsibility, but it is on the twenty-six outside sentries, no matter how remote from the prison walls they may be stationed, that the chief responsibility falls. For while it is recognized that it not so difficult to break out of the old castle, the post authorities fail to see any reason why the prison breakers should not be prevented from escaping from the island itself if the sentries do their duty.

The fact that only two prisoners have escaped in the past two months shows that these sentries can be depended upon to do everything required of them. Last Summer a round half dozen succeeded in getting out of the castle, but they were all rounded up on the island before they had a chance to complete their escape. There is a deal of grumbling among the men, for they consider the number of prisoners which they are called upon to guard is out of all proportion to the strength of the garrison, which is true enough.

And yet these soldiers have a stern incentive to do their duty; for if they let a prisoner escape the chances are that they themselves will be called upon to finish out the unexpired term of that prisoner. Of course this does not follow inevitably. If they have done all they could to prevent the escape and have failed, it is not likely to follow; no one can censure a sentry if he loses consciousness from a blow on the head struck from behind by a desperate fugitive, as has happened to many a good soldier. But no matter what has happened, the unfortunate sentry must stand court-martial, and if Col. Smith and his trial board can detect the least iota of carelessness on the part of the man, into the cell of the escaped prisoner he goes, and there he stays until that prisoner is recaptured.

Any soldier has a natural sympathy for his bunkie fallen in evil ways, but under such conditions he can by no means afford to indulge that sympathy. And so when the crisis comes there is no mercy in the heart of the lonely sentry. His quick cry, "Halt!" rings with deadly earnestness, and if shoot he must, he shoots to kill, and very often, as the army records show, he does kill.

A few months ago a cavalryman from the plains, under a twenty-year sentence for stabbing a fellow-soldier, got possession of a file somehow, and one night he sawed his way to liberty through the bars of his cell on the third tier. There were three other prisoners in the same cell, and they all got to the ground and hid in a pile of stones used in the construction of the additions to the island.

Through friends arrangements had been made with a Battery boatman to leave his rowboat tied up near this stone pile. Private Webb, the sentry, had noticed it, but thought it belonged to the workmen. At 1 o'clock in the morning he saw it moving toward the Battery and at once became suspicious. He hailed the boat, and the only reply was a more energetic splash of the oars. Kneeling on the breakwater, he leveled his Krag at the oarsman and sent a bullet clean through his head. He was preparing for another shot, when the fugitives, fearing such deadly marksmanship, turned the boat in shore and were marched to the prison.

This, be it said, was one of the few occasions that escapes in which Battery boatmen have connived was unsuccessful. Battery boatmen are a versatile class, and with notable exceptions they are as ready to listen to a proposition tending toward the release of a poor doughboy from durance vile as they are to give attention to any other sort of a venture. Or, to be more exact, let it be said that this was their inclination before Private Webb's exhibition of marksmanship. This has rather discouraged them in the line of furthering the ends of escaping soldiers.

With twenty-six sharp-shooting sentries in the mood described it is considered a much easier matter for prisoners to break out of Castle Williams than it is for them to get off the island. In fact, there is hardly a month when a group of prisoners does not manage to make a "getaway" from their cells. To pass the sentries and leave the island is another matter. One of them did it by holding up a workman at the point of a revolver and confiscating his overhauls. He then walked down past the post headquarters to the island boat, the General Hancock, without so much as a question being asked. But this was an unusual occurrence.

For the most part such is the vigilance of the sentries that soldiers escaping from Castle Williams are forced to hide about the island, in garbage heaps, under floors, anywhere, until the searching guard routes them out and marches them back whence they came. A desperate private named Turner, under heavy sentence for striking an officer out West, was transferred from Fort Leavenworth to Castle Williams and made his escape. He stole into the house of one of the officers, ingratiated himself into the favor of a domestic, and for a week lay hidden under that officer's dining room table. One day this domestic, who supplied him with food, found him smiling at an under maid with whom Turner had also ingratiated himself. She became jealous and this jealously led her to betray him. He was taken back to his cell, where he still is.

A month or so ago Private Shepard, doing his lonely patrol around the seaward side of Castle Williams, heard a faint rasping on one of the bars of the second casement tier. He ran into the fort and informed the Officer of the Guard, who making a tour of all the cells, found three men filing out the bars. Two bars had been cut in two and a third was half demolished. On the floor lay blankets which had been cut into strips and knotted into a stout rope. The men were overpowered and placed in another cell.

The files were brought to these men by visitors—friends of the soldiers. As vigilant as the guards are a number of these useful tools find their way into the possession of the prisoners from time to time. A dozen files in the hands of prisoners at the present time would result, say the soldiers, in the escape of sufficient men to overpower the guards. But there are other methods of escape apart from that supplied by a file, and Capt. Perkins, the prison officer, has redoubled ordinary precautions.

As a matter of fact, though, there is no great danger of a general jail delivery—Capt. Perkins and his men are too sharp to allow the prisoners half a chance, and soldiers who talk of such things may be set down, say the officers, as chronic grumblers who have seized upon the overcrowded condition of the jail as better cause for complaining than they have had in some time.

It would strike the civilian that the dangers of escape from the island were greater in the day time than at night. For it is then that most of them are turned out of the prison and set to work about the island, cutting grass, raking leaves, trimming sidewalks, and what not? They work in groups of from six to ten and one sentry stands a few paces behind each group, his rifle ever ready.

The prisoners are divided into three classes—the yellow letter class, (desperate men who are never allowed out of their cells, night or day,) the red letter men, (not quite so desperate,) and the white letter men, who are virtually trusties, many of them at least. The letter P, yellow, red, or white as the case may be, is stamped on the jackets and trousers of all prisoners. The red letter men work outdoors in small groups, while one sometimes sees the white letter men at work with no guard at all. But naturally such a sight is rare. And some times these trusties have made the most desperate breaks for liberty recorded in the history of the Governors Island prison.

Once last Spring two trusties took French leave, and were not heard of for a long time. Sergt. Burns was over in Manhattan one day looking for a deserter when he came right upon the escaped trusties. He did not recognize them; he was not looking for them. But they thought he was, and promptly took to their heels. Burns becoming suspicious started in pursuit, and captured them. They are now wearing yellow letters in Castle Williams.

What the future will record concerning the number of desperate prisoners who have overflowed here from Western prisons is a question; but the battalion of the Eighth Infantry wears a serious face nowadays, and its members are men of mettle. Twenty-six armed men of mettle on guard o' nights, however, are not such bad protection after all.

LENTEN DAYS AT LAKEWOOD.

Many Charitable Entertainments—Mrs. Kingdon's Concert—New York Guests.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEWOOD, N. J., March 17.—Charitable affairs are occupying the interest of cottagers and visitors alike these Lenten days. Musicales, lectures, euchre parties, and other entertainments—all for charity—take up all the spare hours not devoted to golf or tennis.

There was a large outpouring of well-known people at Mrs. Kingdon's concert at Georgian Court on Thursday afternoon. The concert was given in the Casino. Mrs. Kingdon is President of the Women's Auxiliary of All Saints' Memorial Church, and the entertainment was for the benefit of the society. The musical programme consisted of solos by Mrs. Viola Waterhous, soprano; Myron W. Whitney, basso, and Paul Refer, 'cellist. C. E. Mark was the accompanist. After the concert, tea was served in the billiard room. Mrs. Kingdon was assisted by Mrs. Edward Ernest Matthews, Mrs. Henry Lloyd Herbert, Mrs. Walter R. Bynner, and Mrs. William A. Hamilton.

Another affair for charity is the bazaar and entertainment on March 28 and 29, in aid of the new hospital established by the Sisters of St. Joseph. The Lakewood Hotel management has granted the use of the hotel theatre and ballroom for the bazaar. Many of the well-known women of the villa colony will preside at the booths, where fancy articles, Easter novelties, and souvenirs will be displayed.

The younger boys of the village are busy rehearsing for an entertainment they are to give at the Lakewood Hotel Monday evening for the benefit of the hospital.

Bridge whist parties, indoor tennis, and squash tournaments, dinners, and musicales have helped to pass the time pleasantly for the host of Lenten visitors at the Lakewood Hotel and Laurel House.

A notable group of men prominent in the financial world was gathered at dinner in the palm room of the Lakewood Hotel one evening this week. At one table sat Edward H. Harriman, J. Borden Harriman, and J. W. Harriman. Near by was Banker George Blumenthal of New York, with a small company of friends. Other New Yorkers among the diners were Max Nathan and John S. Huyler, who have been at the Lakewood Hotel for some time. Mr. Harriman came to Lakewood to take the hydrotherapy baths at the Lakewood Hotel. He has been suffering from nervousness, and his physician recommended this treatment. John D. Rockefeller took this treatment last Fall.

Negro glee singers from Livingston College, at Livingston, N. C., gave an entertainment at the Lakewood Hotel one evening this week for the benefit of the college. The President of the college, the Rev. Dr. Alfred Mason, made an appeal for funds to carry on the industrial work among the negroes. He received nearly $300. Max Nathan subscribed $50 for two scholarships, and George Blumenthal gave a scholarship.

Mrs. S. De Lancey Townsend and Miss Townsend of New York are at the Laurel House for their usual Lenten sojourn. The Rev. Dr. Townsend will join them next week. Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Rae Peabody of Riverside Drive are at the Laurel House. Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Harper of New York, who were at the Laurel House earlier in the season, have returned for a more extended visit. Mr. and Mrs. Stuart G. Nelson and Mr. and Mrs. George P. Hilton of New York have taken apartments at the Laurel House for a stay of several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Willock, who are occupying the Morey cottage, in Seventh Street, entertained a large company at a bridge party on Monday evening. Mr. and Mrs. William H. Coombs of New York are at the Lakewood Hotel for a few days before going to their country place at Wakefield, R. I. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey L. Martin and Miss Louise Martin of New York and Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Bristed of Brooklyn are registered at the Palmer House for a fortnight's stay.

Hamilton Wright Mabie will lecture upon "Literature as a Personal Resource," at the Laurel-in-the-Pines Tuesday evening. Among the New Yorkers staying at this hotel are H. D. Kountze, Mrs. Newbold Morris and her mother, Mrs. Kingsland, and Dr. George G. Ward, Jr.

WAGES ONE CENT AN HOUR FOR ADULTS IN GERMANY

Family of Man, Wife, and 5 Children May Earn 80 Cents a Day.

SMALL PAY FOR TOYMAKERS

350,000 Children, Some Only Three Years Old, at Work in Germany.

BERLIN, March 8.—"Have you visited the Heimarbeitausstellung (homeworkers') exposition?" This is the question which one hears daily in Berlin. Throughout Germany this exposition, recently opened in Unter den Linden, in a building formerly occupied by the Prussian Academy of Science, has aroused the greatest attention.

The American manufacturer and the social economist of the United States has undoubtedly often asked himself the question: How is it possible that Germany can sell goods at such cheap prices? The Heimarbeitausstellung tells the story. American parents buying those wonderful German toys at Christmas time will be shocked to hear that for this work wages ranging from one-half to one cent an hour are paid. These figures include only the work done by adults, and not that of the smallest children, who labor only a part of the time. A family consisting of man, wife, three large and two small children, in sixteen hours earn from 40 to 80 cents. Rarely do they receive higher wages.

In Thuringia the workmen making toy animals for 92 pieces receive 1 mark, or about 4 pfennigs an hour. For 60 wooden soldiers, on which an adult and three children work 30 hours, 1 mark 20 pfennigs is paid, or 1⅓ pfennig an hour; colored masks bring 2 pfennigs an hour, and 8½ pfennigs an hour is the wage for the whole family. The makers of doll parts are not better off.

No better wages are paid for musical instruments. At Klingenthal, in the Saxon Vogtland, harmonicas are made. Only a small part of this work is done in the factories, and most of it is made by the Heimarbeiter. The different parts of the harmonicas are put together in the homes. The material which the harmonica maker needs he must furnish himself, and often it happens that he barely earns the cost of the same. The highest wages among the harmonica makers are received by the tuners. They earn from 14 to 18 marks for 18 to 19 hours' work. In other branches of the harmonica industry male workers receive only 8 pfennigs to 10 pfennigs an hour and children only 4 pfennigs an hour. Two men and one woman earn 19 marks together for 192 hours' work. A child working 42 hours earns from 2 marks to 2½ marks, (from 50 to 62 cents.) The maker of the handles, working with his wife, earns 15 marks ($3.75) for 32 hours' work.

Equally sad is the condition of the makers of other musical instruments. The centre of the production is Markneukirchen in Saxony. The different parts of the violins are made in Bohemia and sent across the border to be put together by Heimarbeiter. They earn from 15 to 18 marks for 70 to 80 hours' work. Mittelwald in Bavaria is also a well-known centre for the production of violins, guitars, and mandolins. Home workers begin work at 5 or 6 o'clock in the morning, and never finish before 8, and often not before 10 or 11 at night. For these inhuman hours the workman receives from 1 to 1½ marks (25 to 30 cents) a day; many receiving only 70 pfennigs (17 cents) a day.

Basket making is one of the most unprofitable of German industries, but yet a large number of families are employed in it. In Berlin willowmakers receive 30 pfennigs an hour, while in Thuringia wages are even worse, being only 8 to 9 pfennigs for men, and 3 and 4 pfennigs for women. It is, therefore, not to be wondered that these workmen are engeged from 90 to 100 hours a week.

Nürnberg is famous for its pencils. Women who do the polishing receive from 5 to 6 marks for 75 hours' work.

As in America, the lowest wages are paid for clothes made in sweatshops. The average wage which the home workers of Silesia receive for men's clothing is from 9 to 11 pfennigs apiece; in Schwiebus Mark Brandenburg 90 pfennigs is paid for the making of a coat requiring seven hours' work, which, after deducting the sewing materials, makes 11½ pfennigs an hour. For producing an underskirt with embroidery 50 pfennigs is paid; a fine underskirt 27 pfennigs, a lady's simple undergown 16 pfennigs, (4 cents.) For a nightshirt, with embroidery and insertion, 39½ pfennigs is paid; for a dozen aprons, with embroidery and insertion, 1.25 marks, (31 cents.) Corsets are produced in Saxony with the aid of child labor. They bring per piece 26 pfennigs for two hours' work.

The number of children employed in Germany is estimated at 350,000. They are found in all industries. Even children only three years old are employed in home work. The reasons for the employment of children are twofold. In the first place, the children furnish cheap labor, and, secondly, the parents are dependent on their assistance. Of course, much of their work is purely mechanical. In the toy industy they paste together the parts for the small churches, for which they receive 3 to 4½ pfennigs an hour. In the Erzgebirge they make the animals of the Noah's Ark for 1½ pfennigs an hour, working sixty hours a week. For artificial flowers a mother and three children receive 4½ pfennigs an hour. Children are also employed to paint tin soldiers. Children pull the seams and threads for making clothes. In fancy goods children draw the beads on threads.

The thousands of Americans who have visited Oberammergau and have taken away with them artistically carved images and crosses will be interested to learn that these are produced at low wages. For 92 hours' work 8 marks is paid. The average wages of the carvers in Oberammergau range from 1.50 to 3 marks a day. The work begins at 6 o'clock and continues until 8 to 10 in the evening.

The Heimarbeitausstellung has been visited by the Imperial Secretary of the Interior, and as a result a bill will soon be presented to the Reichstag to improve the condition of the homeworkers. In conclusion it should be said that this exposition tells its own story why the German Government does not desire a tariff war with the United States, for the home workers deprived of the American market would be even worse off than they are at present.

AT OLD POINT COMFORT.

Virginia Resort Crowded Over Sundays with City Visitors.

Special to The New York Times.

OLD POINT COMFORT, Va., March 17.—What with its convenience as an over-Sunday place for Washington, Baltimore, Richmond, and Philadelphia people, and the ease and comfort with which the short sea trip from New York may be made, Old Point Comfort has unusual advantages as an early, mid, and late Winter resort. Over Sunday last the Chamberlin was packed to the roof with guests.

Major and Mrs. Charles J. Bailey gave a dinner at the hotel at which the guests included Mrs. R. W. Downing of Philadelphia, Capt. and Mrs. Carter of Fortress Monroe, Capt. and Mrs. Hamilton, and Capt. R. H. C. Kelton.

A merry birthday company gathered at dinner in the dining room of the Chamberlain on Wednesday last, with C. H. Dickerman and Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Chamberlin of Milton, Penn.; Mr. and Mrs. William Ray Baldwin of New York City, Mrs. H. H. Williams of Netherwood, Miss Grace Dickerman and Miss Grace Reid of Milton, Penn., and Capt. Malcomb Young and Lieuts. Harry C. Williams and Clarence G. Bunker as the guests.

Mrs. John A. Hamlin and Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Clark of Chicago are stopping at the Chamberlin for the month of March. Mrs. Clark is the daughter of Mrs. Hamlin. On Wednesday last they were joined by George H. Daniels and his daughter, Miss Daniels.

Guests from New York include Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Hoithan, Louis L. Stanton, E. C. C. Cash, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Ball, Mrs. A. P. Havens, Miss Havens, Miss Randolph Gobblink, Mark Lawson, Frank H. Clark, Mrs. H. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. George I. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas A. Barrett, Mrs. J. S. Carradine, John Hutchinson, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Theakton, Mr. and Mrs. George Fay, Miss E. T. BERKSHIRE SUMMER PLANS.

Subscription for New Roads in Lenox and Stockbridge.

Special to The New York Times.

LENOX, Mass., March 17.—Lenox Summer residents have offered $20,500 in subscriptions toward building new roads in Lenox and Stockbridge. Negotiations have been entered into with the State Highway Commission and the towns of Lenox, Stockbridge, and Lee, with the result that the towns will raise $12,500, and the State Highway Commission has given its assurance that it will assist in the construction of a boulevard between Lenox and Stockbridge, the total cost of which will be $51,387. When completed, the road will be the finest thoroughfare in the Berkshire hills.

Prospects of the Summer season in the Berkshires are very bright. Sir Henry M. Durand, the British Ambassador, has renewed his lease of Deepdene cottage. The Ambassador and his family will arrive in June. Forsythe Wickes, who married Miss Marion Haven last Fall, will occupy the Osceola house, the former country residence of M. Dwight Collier, late of New York.

Edward Burnett of New York has leased the Judge Bishop cottage on Court House Hill in Lenox.

Miss Kate Cary, who has become an all-the-year-around resident, has occupied her old Colonial cottage, which she bought last Fall from Mrs. Hartman Kuhn.

Newbold Morris of New York has leased Wynstay cottage for the Summer and Autumn.

Grenville L. Winthrop of New York, who has been building a beautiful villa on West Street, has completed it and will open it early in the Summer.

Mrs. Adela B. Sloane, widow of John Sloane, will open Wyndhurst in June.

In Stockbridge, Richard W. Bowker of New York is to build a new residence on Field Hill, where he has bought a part of the estate of Mrs. H. D. Cone.

The residence and a large block of the estate of Mrs. Cone, known as "Council Hill" from Indian traditions, has been purchased by Charles R. Mellen, President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford system.

Ex-Ambassador Joseph H. Choate will go to Stockbridge in May for the entire Summer and Autumn.

Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Woodworth of Washington, who were abroad last year, are to spend the Summer at Eden Hill.

Dr. E. R. Culver of New York is completing a new residence in New Marlborough, replacing his country house which was burned in 1904.

TILLINGHAST'S CHARGES BRING TULLY'S DENIAL

Assistant Court Clerk Declares He Never Fixed a Jury List.

CHIEF WITNESS TANGLED

Confessed City Railway Jury Fixer, However, Says ex-Justice Fursman's Attendant Paid Him.

William H. Tillinghast, who is in the penitentiary for three months for serving on juries when he was not a member of the panel, according to his confession, testified yesterday in the case of Edward S. Tully, Assistant Clerk of the City Court, before Chief Clerk Thomas F. Smith, on charges growing out of alleged "jury fixing."

The New York City Railway Company was the defendant in six cases that are cited in which Tillinghast was a juror. In four cases the company got a verdict, in the fifth there was a disagreement, and in the last the plaintiff's verdict was trifling.

The sensational developments predicted as a result of the writ to produce Tillinghast as a witness did not materialize. Discrepancies in his testimony were found. Tillinghast said he remembered serving as a juror in the City Court in the Spring of 1900. He could not remember who the Court Clerk was, but declared that Alexander Smith, the personal attendant of ex-Justice Fursman, asked him what he was in court for, and if it was for his benefit.

"Smith told me to stick to the company," said Tillinghast, meaning the railway company, "and said that I would be taken care of. It was either to be a mistrial or a verdict for the company. Smith gave me some money then, and later, in the hall of the railway company's office, at 621 Broadway, he gave me more."

A wrangle between Assistant Corporation Counsel Crowell and Max D. Steuer, Tully's counsel, followed, after which Tillinghast said that Stanley Bagg, a representative of the railway company, had told him to ask Tully to put him on the jury list in the cases against the railway company. He declared that he had asked Tully as instructed, but that Tully had refused. Later, Tillinghast declared, Tully had told him to tell Bagg that Tully had not been treated well enough by the railway people to entitle them to any favors from him.

Tillinghast denied that he had ever had reason to seek favors from Tully or had any confidential relations with the Court Clerk. Questioned by Mr. Smith, Tillinghast denied that he had ever implicated Tully in any confession.

Mr. Smith said that all he wanted to find out was how Tillinghast served as a juror when Tully was Clerk without Tillinghast's name appearing on the panel. Tillinghast declared that he always had received jury notice and that he never had personated any one. He said it was a common practice, however, to carry jurors over from one term to another for a week or so, as well as to send them from the panel in one part to that drawn for another part.

Mr. Tully was put on the stand at the conclusion of Tillinghast's testimony. He denied that he ever had put a man on a jury by request; that he ever had attempted to influence a jury, or that he was acquainted with Tillinghast. He said he had no explanation to offer for the presence of Tillinghast's name on the court records for May, 1900, in his own handwriting, other than that Tillinghast was transferred as a juror from some other part, or that he had been substituted surreptitiously by some other person than himself. Clerk Tully is a veteran of the civil war. The case will be continued to-morrow.

AT ST. AUGUSTINE.

Many Visitors Still Enjoying the Warm and Sunny Weather.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., March 17.—Visitors to St. Augustine are enjoying warm and sunny weather. Flowers are blooming everywhere. Although many have departed the streets and hotels are still filled with guests.

The delightful outdoor life leaves little time or inclination for social functions, and entertaining consists chiefly of picnics, launch parties, and driving parties. Bridge is still popular, although the beautiful moonlight nights have tempted many to forego the game for Spanish courts and palm gardens.

Miss Dewhurst gave a bridge party on Tuesday evening in the cardroom of the Yacht Club.

The last of the races for the Warden Cup were sailed on Tuesday and Wednesday, five of the racing yachts sailing. The Wehatka, owned by Dr. Seagears, won each race and gained the cup.

A series of five races will be sailed next week for the Commodore's Cup, presented by Commodore Edward S. Renwick.

Miss Wherry gave a tea on Wednesday for the Misses Bond and Miss Ennis. Among the guests were J. H. Hewson, Mr. and Mrs. Bond, and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lyman.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman gave a dinner in the Alcazar on Wednesday evening to Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Anderson, Mrs. Ray, and H. R. Stuart.

Mr. and Mrs. George F. Miles gave a tea on Sunday for Mr. and Mrs. George L. Bradley of Washington. Among the other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Washburn, Mr. Maddox, Mrs. James Hackett, and Commander and Mrs. Benson.

Among the New Yorkers at the Ponce de Leon are Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Chisholm, Mrs. T. G. Cauldwell, John B. Cauldwell, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Hayden, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Randell, E. M. Holland, Mrs. C. G. Holland, Mr. and Mrs. Casimir De R. Moore, and Mrs. G. H. Taylor.

At the Alcazar are Mrs. John O. Sherwood, Miss A. M. Sherwood, Charles E. Perkins, Mrs. David Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. B. Drake-Smith, Mrs. S. D. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Emerson, Mrs. Frederic L. Potter, W. F. Clary, and Mr. and Mrs. George W. Riggs.

FOOD.

TOOTHSOME SALADS

Promote Health and Please Palate.

A lover of good living writes from Chicago:

"The favorite salads in my family," he says, "are prepared with Grape-Nuts, according to your recipes. We regard them as unapproachable. We are also fond of Grape-Nuts with cream as a breakfast food, and use it daily.

"I was a great sufferer for years," he continues, "from stomach trouble, which gave rise to painful headaches, and I was at last completely prostrated and bed-ridden with ulceration of the stomach and bowels. I suffered untold agonies while the doctors were trying to cure my ailment with medicines.

"I could retain nothing on my stomach but an occasional sip of cold water, or a teaspoonful of olive oil, and at last even these could not be kept down. The doctors then gave me up—said there was no hope for me.

"In this strait my good angel induced me to try Grape-Nuts food, and it may sound ludicrous to say of the initial experiment that the sensation was simply 'heavenly,' but nothing milder than that will express it.

"My recovery was rapid and in a very few days I was up and about, and in a few weeks was a perfectly well man again. And it was all the work of the Grape-Nuts food, for, as I have said, the doctors had ceased to give me medicine, considering my case hopeless.

"Since then Grape-Nuts has been, and always shall be a staple article of diet with us." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

ATLANTIC CITY RACE PLANS.

Auto Meet Arranged for April 25-27—The Spring Tours Begin.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, March 17.—The automobile races on the beach will be held on April 25, 26, and 27. There will be eighteen races, with record trials for cars of all weights. Besides the speed events, there will be a quarter-mile race on reverse gear, a tug-of-war, and match races between the fastest cars in the country.

The Racing Committee follows: H. B. Cook, Albert T. Bell, L. H. Hoopes, Isaac Pacharach, Jr., A. Manz, W. H. Hintchman, and Albert Darnell.

The Hotel Majestic will be reopened next Saturday. The Hotel Berkeley, at the ocean end of Kentucky Avenue, opened this week. The Brevoort, in South Carolina Avenue, was opened to-day. The Hotel New England was reopened yesterday. The Belleclair, in Virginia Avenue, has been opened by Mrs. M. S. Taylor of New York.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is conducting Spring tours to Atlantic City from New York, Brooklyn, and Jersey City. Tours will be run on March 24, and 31 and on April 7.

It is reported that a Newark capitalist is negotiating for a site on which to erect a store, office, and apartment building on Atlantic Avenue near the Reading station. The structure is to be fireproof and twelve stories high, containing one hundred apartment suites. The ground floor will be devoted to stores, while the second story will be fitted up for offices.

A fireproof garage is being erected for the Royal Palace Hotel costing $1,500.

The Hotel Frontenac, on Kentucky Avenue, has been bought by William F. Watts, for $50,000.

For her stay in Atlantic City Miss Clara Clemens, daughter of Mark Twain, was a guest at the Brighton. John Wanamaker, has been invited with other prominent men to address the Atlantic Avenue Business Men's League, on March 23.

GREEN'S—E. C. Balbridge, Mrs. Balbridge, Mrs. J. Shannon, and Mrs. G. A. Shannon.

PIERREPONT—W. S. Baumann, Mrs. J. H. Ferguson, and L. J. Ferguson.

Bank Cashier in Jail Still.

HAZLETON, Penn., March 17.—F. M. Everett, cashier of the First National Bank of Freeland, who was arrested last night, charged with embezzling $56,900, and William Beckley of Bloomsburg, charged with conspiring with Everett, had a hearing to-day before United States Commissioner Hill. They were held in $5,000 bail each for a further hearing. Neither could furnish the bail, and both were recommitted to jail.

SPORT AT PINEHURST.

Paper Chase, Basketball, and Golf Among the Week's Amusements.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 17.—Delightful weather and diversions out of doors have provided a busy week for the big company of visitors which is filling every nook and corner of the village. One of the most entertaining events was the paper chase on Tuesday, when several hundred people witnessed the start and finish from the verandas of the Carolina.

The hares—Horatio L. Whitridge, Baltimore, and Mrs. Leonard Tufts, Boston—had a start of ten minutes. Thus, instead of a race after the quarry, the chase became a question for the fleet hounds to decide among themselves, and it was gallop hard from first to last. The hares were figuratively, if not literally, "torn to pieces," the hounds winning by nine and a half minutes.

The weekly Tin Whistle golf tournament was a match-play handicap against bogey for the Herbert L. Jillson Cup and Ball sweepstakes. J. D. Foot of Rye, scratch, and R. R. Perkins of New York (10) tied for first, each 2 up, Mr. Foot winning the play-off. H. C. Fownes, Pittsburg, (2;) M. H. Wilson, Cleveland, (10,) and L. E. Wardwell, Camden, Me., (8,) were bunched at second place with 1 up each.

The fifth of the baseball games between the Carolina and Village nines was a rattler, the Carolina team cracking out four runs in the last inning and winning, 10 to 4.

Basket ball is also coming into prominence, two teams captained by Clarence Smith of Bethlehem and F. T. Blake of Worcester having been organized and a series of games arranged for March and April.

L. E. Wardwell of Camden, Me., was the winner of the weekly trap-shooting tournament, fifty single targets, scratch, leading Cyrus A. Taft of Whitinsville, Mass., by a single target, with forty-one.

The progress of the Spring golf tournament has been followed with interest by a very large crowd, afternoon tea with music by the combined Carolina and Holly Inn Orchestras being a pleasant feature of the week at the Country Clubhouse.

Among the week's arrivals New Yorkers have been numerous. They include Mrs. Katherine Tobey, Miss E. W. Tobey, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Church, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Carpenter, Mrs. Howard M. Fanning, Miss Fanning, Mrs. H. H. Porter, Quincey E. Porter, Miss L. A. Lambert, J. Mahler, Charles F. Terhune, Mr. and Mrs. John M. Ward, Mr. and Mrs. Guy E. Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Shoaff, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. May, W. W. May, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Leo, Miss Beatrice Leo, Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Peck, Mrs. F. A. Horn, Miss Horn, Mr. and Mrs. Max A. Mosle, George O. Leavitt, F. B. Bowen, Mrs. Gambrill, William Robert Bassett, Mrs. R. F. Little, Jr., Mrs. Leo S. Herzig, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Batzer.

Late New Jersey arrivals are Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Wilsey, Mr. and Mrs. William Freeman, Miss Ethel Freeman, Montclair; Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Payson, Paterson; James F. Bliss, Mrs. L. K. Murdock, Mrs. George E. Duren, Newark; Mrs. F. M. Sammes, Mrs. G. B. D. Reve, Newark; Mr. and Mrs. D. P. Oliver and son, Mrs. J. L. Rogers, Burlington; Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Runkle, Miss Mary G. Runkle, Miss Belle Carroll, Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Merrill and Miss Merrill, Plainfield; E. B. Humphreys and David Boyd, Jr., Camden; Mrs. S. M. Schatzkin and son, J. S. HOW TO GET CONSULAR REFORM.

The best thing about the meeting of the National Committee on Consular Reform, which took place in Washington last week, is the organization of a permanent body to continue the movement as long as any need for it shall remain. Judging by experience, it will have to continue a long while. It is now nearly a quarter of a century since the first energetic efforts were set on foot for the introduction of sound business methods into the processes of selection of Consuls and the administration of the service, and very little has been accomplished. That little is due almost wholly to the exercise of the limited discretion lodged in the Secretary of State and in the President. Congress has been indifferent or hostile as a rule.

It is so still, but not so obstinately as in the past. Good provisions in the Lodge bill have been stricken out, but not by so large a vote either in the House or in the Senate. The bill, after its ruthless surgical treatment at the hands of the committees, still retains some good features. The reclassification of the Consulates, the changes from fees to salaries, the restrictions put upon private gains, and, especially, the provision for inspection are all advances over the present arrangement. Possibly they may make further advantages easier, though that is not always the way such things work, Congress as a rule assuming that when something has been done it is a good reason for not taking up the matter again. Much will depend on the energy and intelligence with which the business men's movement for improvement is pushed. It can be made formidable to members of the House and to Senators. Unless it be made thoroughly formidable not much will be accomplished.

How much there is still to do can be seen by comparing the statement of President ROOSEVELT with the actual condition of the Lodge bill as it comes from the House committee after having been cut by the Senate. The President said:

> I feel most strongly that in the Consular Service, which stands entirely apart from the Diplomatic Service proper, entrance should be made by law into the lower grades, and that the higher grades should be filled by a gradual process of weeding out and promotion, remembering, gentlemen, that the weeding-out process must not be interfered with. It is not any too easy to get rid of a kindly natured elderly incompetent at best, and if you add to the difficulty by law, he then stays permanently. Make the entrance to the service as far as possible non-partisan and make it at the lower grades, so that desirable positions shall come to those who have rendered good and faithful service in the lower grades, and so that those entering the lower grades shall feel that if they do well they have a long and worthy career ahead of them.

If to the provisions here outlined we add the power in the President to make transfers within the service, or within the classes into which the service was divided in the original bill, we have substantially the system worked out in the State Department, approved by the President, and submitted to Congress. It is the system which the business organizations throughout the country and the Civil Service Reform League have been urging for a long time. Appointment for merit, promotion for merit and actual good work, and a sufficiently flexible organization of the service to secure the best men for different places—this has been what the most intelligent and practical men of the country interested in the matter have definitely advocated and earnestly striven to obtain. They have had the unqualified support of the State Department and of the President. The bill now pending in Congress embodied these provisions when it was introduced. It does not now contain a single one of them.

That is the legislative situation. That is what the National Committee on Consular Reform has to deal with. It is of no use in mincing matters. The influence of Mr. ROOSEVELT and Mr. ROOT, the picturesque indorsement of Speaker CANNON, the desires of the business community, as represented by their authorized organizations, count for little or nothing against the greed for patronage of the Senators and members of the House. Nor will any amount of persuasion or argument affect these gentlemen. They will yield to pressure and to nothing less or else. If they are made to see that it will cost them more to stick to the old forms of patronage-huckstering than it will to concede reasonable reform, they will yield. Until and unless they are made to see that fact, they will not yield. It is not pleasant or easy for business men to go into politics, even for such an end as is here presented. But they will not attain their end without bringing effective pressure on men who put their selfish interests above the interests of the community.

JAPAN'S RAILWAYS, AND OURS.

If indeed Messrs. SCHIFF and HARRIMAN have associated themselves with Japan's purchase of the country's railways, the task falls well within their capacity either of administration or of financing. Japan had under 100 miles of railway in 1880, and has only 4,406 miles now. There are 5,588 miles in the Union Pacific system, and its gross earnings in 1905 were $38,958,994, against gross earnings of all Japanese railways of about $26,000,000. It is evident that the gentlemen turned to by Japan have already done greater things than the one proposed, without considering the fact that the State-owned railways in Japan already earn more than half of the total given above. The capital invested was estimated without reference to this development at $188,102,000, and it is now thought that a quarter billion dollars will cover the amount necessary upon the proposed basis of twenty times the average profits of the three years preceding the war.

Since it is threatened—or promised—that our own railways are to be taken over by the Government as an alternative to fixing rates to suit shippers it might be interesting to surmise upon the Japanese basis what the bill would come to. A quibble might be raised over what "profits" are. Are they the "income from operation," according to the phrase of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, or are they the earnings plus the investment yield—a trifle of $114,636,642 last year—and should the fixed charges be deducted before making the calculation? Japanese finance is so much less advanced than our own that the problem will be simpler there. Including the investment profit, last year's total income for all American roads was $804,229,563. As the amount is constantly growing, it is not exaggeration to take that as an average, which gives something over $16,000,000,000 as the amount necessary to Governmentalize our railways. This is some three billions in excess of the thirteen billions usually mentioned as the rough capitalization of our railways. And the Government would have to hurry to get them at that figure. January's net earnings, for instance, increased 44 per cent., which would be quite an addition to the goodly sum mentioned above. For purposes of comparison it may be mentioned that our maximum National debt was in 1865 $2,674,815,000.

This is a new era, and old statistics do not count. Mere magnitude does not frighten Americans, although some might hesitate about assuming six or seven times the cost of the civil war in a mere financial proposition. No such problem as this was presented to any country which took over its railways, and cautionary signals are flown in countries which thus far have hesitated to assume such ownership. For example, Thursday's telegrams brought word of the organization in England of the Citizens' National League, to combat all forms of extravagance, especially that known as "municipal trading." If already sober Englishmen are drawing the line against city ownership of public utilities, it may be anticipated that before the time comes to take over our railways we shall have reconsidered, or be thinking about something else.

RUSSIA'S AND JAPAN'S RELIEF FUNDS.

We printed with pleasure the announcement that Americans have already contributed $100,000 to the relief of distress in Japan, including $80,000 from the readers of The Christian Herald alone. We are sure the amount thus contributed will give relief altogether disproportionate to the self-denial of the givers, even though there is a basis of inference that the givers are not from the wealthy class. They are, however characteristically Americans, and for that reason we would wish the comparisons which will be made to be as favorable as possible.

The world was amazed when the United States contributed about half of the $3,000,000 contributed for the relief of the Russian Jews. But that money did not come from Americans characteristically. A disproportionate share came from the Russians and the Hebrews domiciled in the United States who had an especial call to help those of their religion and race. For that reason it can hardly be anticipated that the $100,000 shall grow into $1,000,000, for the Japanese in the United States who might contribute are but a handful, compared to the Russians among us. Still, 80,000,000 of us ought to do better by Japan than half as many Englishmen, even though they are Japan's allies. In proportion to population we are doing no better, man for man, than they. The claim upon us is an especial one, for Japan's victory over Russia is a benefit to our commerce in the Orient. It was an enormous burden which Japan assumed in the interest of the world's trade, but not for that cause is help asked. The burdens of the war are being dealt with in a manner which shames our clumsy finance and waste of natural wealth. Relief is asked against an act of GOD, a famine through failure of the rice crop due to the weather. Thousands of families of the very poorest classes in Japan, where poverty has a meaning unknown to us, are dying of starvation amid intense cold and without any resources except the failed crops. Relief works have been started, and are being administered as efficiently as war was waged, which means that every dollar so little missed here is made to do the work of two. The case is pitiful, the claim exceptional, and the response should exceed even present liberality.

THE AERIAL GERMAN NAVY.

It was a German writer, JEAN PAUL FRIEDRICH RICHTER, no less, who laid it down that "Providence had given to the French the empire of the land, to the English that of the sea, but to the Germans that of the air." That seems to be the conclusion of the German Kaiser upon being informed at dinner that France had apparently got the better of Germany in the matter of dirigible war balloons. It seems to be quite true that France has got the start in that matter. Though the inventor happens to be an American, yet the French Government, through the tentacles of its sensitive General Staff, has detected that the inventor had arrived at a practicable thing in the way of fighting balloons, and had given him good money for the exclusive European use of his invention, one trusts not to the detriment or exclusion of his own country.

One can readily understand the indignation of the Kaiser at learning that "the Germans" were in danger of being deprived of their ancient monopoly of the one element that was left to them for exploitation. The Kaiser's ambition is to reign supreme in all elements. He has already by the consent of all, at least until the next war, the most efficient army on the planet. He has molested the ancient solitary reign of Great Britain with what he fondly imagines to be the best navy, even though we ourselves, humble practitioners as we may be of the arts of peace, think that we may, on occasion, have something to say to that pretension, even though King EDWARD is plausibly reported to have alienated his centrifugal nephew by casually remarking that the German Navy was a negligible quantity. But the monopoly of the air arrogated to Germany in her old and dreamy days the Kaiser cannot brook to have challenged in these present and forth-putting days of the "expansion of Germany."

The Kaiser flatters himself that he dips into the future, far as human eye can see, and discerns therein every promise and potency that may exist for his empire to make itself offensive and effective. He has proclaimed to his countrymen that their future "lies upon the water," but of course without prejudice to their future swimming in the air, if they should be relegated to their traditional element. He, too, doubtless, with the British poet—

> Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies of magic sails,
> Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales—

Much more, together with the poet, he—

> Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rained a ghastly dew
> From the nation's airy navies grappling in the central blue.

No wonder that he was horrified when his convives, his expert convives, advised him that there was probably something in the invention for which the French Republic had paid its good money. All the same, no humane person can possibly fail to sympathize with the long-suffering Count VON BUELOW the day that it devolves upon him to introduce into and defend before the Reichstag the first appropriation for the Royal Imperial Air Fleet of the German Empire.

DOGS FOREIGN AND DOMESTIC.

The American dog is in many cases pampered beyond reason, and public opinion does not sanction the fuss which is made over him. Particularly the post-mortuary arrangements which too frequently follow his exequy excite repulsion, and the sentimental persons who make them, mostly women, have no idea of the figure they cut as mourners until the mirror of their conduct is held up before them. It has frequently of late been necessary to guard the sanctity of human burial places against having dead dogs "rung in" on them duly coffined and prepared for funeral rites. In general local public opinion has been prompt enough in its expression to prevent any such sacrilege, but it excites considerable disgust that any such thing should anywhere have been meditated. A measure of sentimental attachment is no doubt due to the affectionate beast; planting its relics in a garden, with some shadowing bust to keep mourning watch and guard over them, or in the corner of the back yard, where the house cat can come at midnight to yowl forth its lamentations, or at the meadow's edge, where it once pursued the squirrel or the timorous flying hare—such mortuary disposal may be held as within the deservings of the animal, and no fault need be found with them.

It has been proposed here and there that dog cemeteries should be chartered, so that the costlier type of animal belonging to the more gushing and sympathetic type of female might find a prepared place to rest in to which its right need not be questioned. Visitors to Blenheim, where the famous spaniels come from, or to the now vacant seat of a once renowned Duchess of York, may find such post-mortem canine bivouacs, where the barking beasts have had spread for them by loving hands [illegible], with headstones in due array and inscriptions for memory, and there are no doubt lots of others connected with the ancestral houses of dog-loving England and elsewhere. In a country where imported collies cost $5,000 or $6,000 apiece, with other breeds coming well up toward like standards of price, it may seem reasonable enough that when they come to die they should not be cast forth on the nearest dunghill, like the played-out yellow dog which used to figure so influentially in the insurance business, and other low-down curs of that kind and color. There are plenty of precedents for dog cemeteries if any are thought to be needed, but when they are founded, those who use them will show good sense if they are somewhat conservative in their rituals. Fool ideas, whether male or female in their origin, should not be allowed to prevail in them, though where the fancy dog is concerned they are apt to be generated so abundantly.

Just now the female Parisian is taking the lead in the fool ideas to which the dog-fancying female everywhere seems prone. She has always dressed up her pet animal in ornamental costume, varied to suit the season, and some time ago she brought into fashion the practice of putting rubbers on its feet in wet weather. Now she has discarded these in favor of shoes, which are made of all colors and are about the texture which the animal's skin would be after it had gone through a tannery. When the fashionable Parisienne now goes forth to take her drive in the Bois she carries along her pup thus panoplied, and it is not impossible, it is, on the contrary, quite probable, that pretty soon the same fashion may be adopted here. If it comes it will have to wear itself out in its own way. Those who set the style will stand by it as long as they choose to do so, leaving to those who don't admire it the free indulgence of their opinions, but not caring a rap about them one way or the other.

RUSSIAN MANCHURIA.

It is plain that the Russian "Pharaoh" in the further parts of Asia has not even yet learned the whole lesson of his afflictions. The treaty of peace between Russia and Japan distinctly provides that in that part of Manchuria left to Russia, as well as in that part acquired by Japan, traders of all countries shall have equal rights. Yet a bull-headed Russian General, GRODEKOFF by name, has taken upon himself to interdict Japanese from Russian Manchuria. Diplomatic representations of an urgent kind will doubtless be made at St. Petersburg. And Japanese diplomatic representations at St. Petersburg are more likely to be efficacious now than they were in 1903.

Siberia is not Manchuria. Nevertheless the expulsion of Jewish and Japanese traders from Vladivostok, though probably within the competency of the local Government, is an act of very doubtful policy. It must be assumed that if Jewish and Japanese traders are able to thrive at Vladivostok, it is because they supply the commercial demand more acceptably than the Russian traders who were already in possession. The occasion seems to be distinctly one for the searching of hearts on the part of the Russian traders, not for the issue of an edict which shall give them a monopoly of trade in which they cannot sustain a competition.

Woman Suffrage in Italy.

From The London Pall Mall Gazette.

ROME, March 6.—The question of woman suffrage has suddenly and most unexpectedly assumed large and amusing proportions in Italy. Last year the idea of women voting was regarded as a purely academic one, while twelve months later it is looming so large that many "mere men" are rushing into print for the purpose of proving the inferiority of women.

Signorina Sacchi, who applied to the proper authorities to be allowed to vote, on the ground that it is not forbidden by Italian law, was benevolently listened to, and her name inserted in the voting list, her example being followed by many others. But—and here is the rub—the lists must be submitted to a higher authority, and he may, and probably will, refuse the desired permission. Meanwhile a constituency has fallen vacant, and its enterprising electors have invited Signorina Sacchi to stand, the idea being to make her a Deputy before the electoral lists are revised! Thus she stands a very fair chance of going down to posterity as the first woman Deputy in Europe, and of having attained this triumph of "feminism" in a country centuries behind others in such ideas, and where woman is still regarded as too precious a possession to walk alone or be allowed full liberty in anything.

Fatal Cobwebs.

From The London Mail.

The application of cobwebs to stop bleeding from a wound on his finger, received while feeding a chaff-cutter, caused the death from lockjaw of William Philpott, 65 years old, of Minster, Sheppey. A verdict of "accidental death" was returned at the inquest, March 6.

FOREIGN NOTES IN BRIEF.

Firing a revolver as a salute to a wedding party, in accordance with an old Bavarian custom, a schoolmaster at Wuremburg, used ball cartridges by mistake and killed one of the bridesmaids.

A legacy of £10 caused the death of Thomas Archer, a night watchman of Fleetwood. He was found dead in bed on Saturday, after a drinking bout, which he began on receiving the money.—London Mail.

An interesting archaeological discovery has been made in Naples during the construction of Forcella Street. A Greek wall, dating from 400 B. C., which surrounded the ancient city, has been unearthed. The wall, which consists of two parallel sections, runs east and west, thereby contradicting the testimony of ancient topographers, who affirm that the Greek wall went northward at this point.

The French Postmaster General, M. Alexandre Bérard, is a man of letters in more senses than one. He has just published an interesting book on La Bresse and Le Bugey, in the Department of the Ain, which M. Bérard represents in the Chamber of Deputies. M. Bérard is not the only distinguished citizen of whom the Ain has reason to be proud, for Voltaire, Quinet, and de Coligny were all born either at La Bresse or at Le Bugey.—Paris Correspondent London Express.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Senator Culberson walked into the Senate restaurant at noon to-day and saw Senator Dolliver sitting at a table with some friends. The Iowa man looked up as the Texan entered and said:

"Come over here, Culberson, and join us."

Senator Culberson crossed the room and said: "Good morning, Senator. How are you?"

"Just and reasonable," answered Dolliver, "if not fairly remunerative."

The official stenographers of the House have reported so far this session about 2,775,000 words, with the session perhaps a little more than half over. There is a busy, talking time to come, however, and the full bill will probably be about 6,000,000 words for the session. That is outside of the committee hearings, which will be more than half as much additional, so that the House will have sent to the Printing Office as the talk that has been made by or to its members while at work on the floor or in committee rooms, approximately 10,000,000 words. The Senate will easily double that, if it does not exceed it, although the Senate often sits only four days a week, while the House is always busy at least five days, and sometimes sits on Saturday. That will be a round total of 20,000,000 words thus uttered at this session. Figured on the basis of the money appropriated by the session, these words will cost the country about $25 each. The average pay for literary productions is less than 5 cents a word, although extraordinary cases, like that of Rudyard Kipling or Mark Twain, command as high as $1 a word. If the pay all went to the producers of the Congressional words it would be the best paying literary job on earth.

Senator La Follette loves a farm and has a nice one in Wisconsin. He also loves a good horse and has had some in his day. He tells a story now and then when it fits a situation, as it often does, of an experience with one of his men.

"He was a faithful old chap," says the Senator, "and I liked him and trusted him with a good deal of responsible work.

"One day, some years ago, I had to go away from home and I said to him: 'Charlie, I am going away for a few days and I want you to take especially good care of the brood mare in the boxstall.'

"'Yes, Sir,' he replied; 'I'll take the best sort of care of her.'

"When I came home the first thing I did was to go and look at the mare. She was rough-coated and gaunt. I knew she had not been looked after, and I taxed Charlie with it.

"'See here,' I said, 'you did not take good care of this mare as I told you.'

"'You're right,' snapped Charlie back, 'I didn't do a thing to her.'

"'Well, what on earth do you mean?' I said. 'Why didn't you take care of her?'

"'I didn't think, Sir, that was why.'

"'Why didn't you think?' I demanded.

"'Why, hang it, I wasn't hired to think,' retorted Charlie. 'Why don't you do your own thinking?'

"The sheer audacity of the answer took my breath away, and I turned without saying another word.

"The moral of the thing," continued the Senator, "has occurred to me more than once in my experience with people who never undertake to do anything for themselves."

GETTING RID OF SURPLUS.

Where Proposed Reduction Would Weaken Policy Holders' Security.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In connection with the recent insurance investigation and the recommendations of the Armstrong Committee of the new laws to be enacted, the question of the ownership of the surplus of stock companies that will be affected by the new law seems to be lost sight of. I refer to that part of the proposed legislation which sets a minimum standard of surplus a company would be allowed to hold.

I carry a policy in a New York company having assets of $150,000,000, (round numbers,) and their surplus, as advertised by them recently, is $16,000,000. If the investigating committee's bills become law this company will have to reduce its surplus to about $5,000,000. I believe about 90 per cent. of this company's business is on the non-participating plan. According to its contract that 90 per cent. of policy holders could not claim the surplus, so the question naturally arises who would get it when the company divests itself of it.

There seems to be a belief among insurance men that the stockholders of that company would claim it, although the premiums of the policy holders are represented by this surplus. This opinion seems to be reinforced by the fact that this company was not represented at the hearing before the Armstrong Committee last Friday and instructed all its agents to stay away from the Capitol at Albany on that day.

This question of ownership of surplus may also come up with stock companies doing a participating business, not to the same extent, though, for a participating company would, no doubt, distribute it among their policy holders in proportion to premiums paid.

PROFESSIONAL SECRETS.

LL. D. Holds Rule of Confessional Should Apply to Lawyer and Client.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The question whether Albert T. Patrick will release his former counsel, Mr. House, from the obligation of professional secrecy is a matter of very great importance to the public. Hitherto it has been maintained not only in the practice of law and medicine, but even in the ministry, whether Roman or Protestant, that secrets imparted in professional intercourse cannot be revealed.

About four years ago a distinguished physician in London was sued for damages by one of his patients, whose secret he had revealed in a conversation with his own wife. The highest courts of appeal sustained the plaintiff. Some years ago in the notable case of murder by Constance Kent the Rev. Mr. Wagner, a Protestant clergyman of Brighton, England, absolutely refused to make known Miss Kent's confession. The court ruled that a Protestant clergyman was under the same compact of professional secrecy as a Roman priest.

Mr. Jerome's attitude emphasizes the importance of the situation. He said in court, "The defendant, Patrick, has an excellent chance to clear himself, and he does not avail himself of it." Now, there may be many reasons quite apart from the murder of the late Mr. Rice why Mr. House should not be placed on the stand; yet the District Attorney has practically made it a test of Patrick's guilt.

It seems to me that the honored custom of professional men, whether in law, medicine, or the ministry, being absolutely bound to secrecy, should be maintained, and that they should not be released from the compact of professional secrecy even by their own clients.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK.

A Southerner Excepts to Code of Honor Involved in the Recent Assault.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am indignant at the treatment accorded Mr. Anthony Comstock by the lawyer who defended a man charged with the crime of making and vending a vile nostrum for immoral purposes. I understand that this lawyer accused Mr. Comstock of putting up a conspiracy to do this man an injustice. This charge he characterized as a lie, whereupon the lawyer struck Mr. Comstock in the face.

I have been intimately acquainted with Mr. Comstock and his work for fifteen years. He has made it a rule never to begin a suit except when in possession of very strong evidence. To entrap a man who is carrying on a lawless traffic by decoy and detective work is not justly called a conspiracy. It is constantly resorted to by public officers in order to obtain evidence against criminals. Mr. Comstock has been a fearless, relentless, and successful prosecutor of the worst scoundrels in human form, the corrupters of youth. He has done more to overthrow the traffic in obscene literature and pictures and to destroy the business of the gamblers, the green goods men, and the procurers of young girls for dens of vice than any other man. No wonder these people hasten to write letters to the lawyer thanking him for striking this man.

It must be a fine code of honor which leads a young lawyer to strike an old man, who is in broken health, and this in contempt of the court and to the joy of dealers in obscene literature, gamblers, and swindlers. Which of these two men stands before right-thinking people as an honorable man—the prosecutor or defender of a corrupt dealer charged with a heinous crime; the aged man with a record of many years of self-sacrificing and heroic conflict with the most dangerous forms of evil, now infirm from the injuries inflicted by bad men who have repeatedly assaulted him with intent to kill, or this lawyer with an exaggerated sense of his own dignity, and later obsequiously and effusively apologizing to the court?

A SOUTHERNER.

FORM AND EYESIGHT RUINED.

Flat Desks Responsible for Harmful Tendency—An Easy Remedy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the car to West Twenty-third Street Ferry this morning were ten persons wearing glasses. All were round-shouldered. In every school room and in every office the school children, stenographers, bookkeepers, and copyists are round-shouldered, and the large majority of office workers wear glasses.

Between the two defects is a connection. Stooping over books and papers will, as a matter of course, produce round shoulders, and a stooping position that is harmful both to lungs and stomach. In this position the eyes of school children become congested, and elongated from front to rear, and they thus acquire myopia—nearsightedness.

The remedy is simple and obvious. Workers on books and papers should, as far as possible, raise their work to an angle of 45 degrees in front of, instead of under, the eyes.

A few days' practice will demonstrate the benefit of this. How many will try it?

"His Glassy Essence."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. L. P. Smith's query as to "His glassy essence" is getting interesting. The plain material question has entered the realm of idealism, where the metaphysician can view it through a glass clearly. The suggestion that glassy essence is a corruption of the text, and that ghostly is the proper word, is a momentous thought. The reflection of one's self in a glass is the most perfect ghost ever seen by mortal eyes. The reflection seen in a glass is so common that it excites no wonderment, and yet it is a profound mystery. Of course, the bald, blank materialist will smile. His mind is imperceiverant, and therefore incapable of dreaming dreams while awake. Prospero, the mouthpiece of Shakespeare in "The Tempest," says: "We are such stuff as dreams are made of." Hamlet says: "There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so." In "Cymbeline," Act IV., Scene 2, the following: "Hush! How dare you ghosts accuse the thunderer?" "Most ignorant of what he's most assured of his glassy essence" means he's most assured that his image (his ghost) is in the glass, but is entirely ignorant of its meaning.

Joseph's Corn "Corner."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It would seem to me that Mr. Rockefeller (and his followers) is leaving out of the Josephan controversy the part that God played in it. God inspired Joseph with the knowledge which enabled him to interpret Pharaoh's dream. He did this solely for the purpose of saving His own people. There is no doubting the fact that Joseph was a good business man, but it was never a part of God's plan to sanction graft in any form. The reason Joseph accepted payment for the grain is very plain. God never gave His people the idea that they might sit idly down and be fed.

In my opinion, and it seems to me it must be the opinion of Biblical scholars as well, if Mr. Rockefeller wants to find a justification for his father's conduct in cornering the price of kerosene at the expense of the poor, he will have to seek it in some other place than between the covers of the Holy Bible.

Trustees—Produce That Poker!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The statement in your issue of this date that the Finance Committee of the New York Life Insurance Company found no difficulty in approving the expenditure of their policy holders' money for political purposes after they had resolved themselves into a "company of gentlemen" brings to mind a story.

An Irishman at the close of a convivial meeting, being accused by his hostess of having stolen her kitchen poker, swore by everything he was supposed to hold sacred that he was as innocent of such larceny as the child unborn. When asked to declare "on his honor as a gentleman" that he had not taken the poker, however, he immediately produced it from underneath his cloak.

Perhaps these "gentlemen" will be found ready to make the required restitution if appealed to on their honor as Trustees.

Interested in Art News.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Thursday art lovers were much pleased to find in THE TIMES a full column about the Brandus sale, which was ignored by all other newspapers. Why not keep up the good work? Surely there are enough people interested in art here to justify a little space during the short season, especially the sales of important pictures which are not yet so famous as to fetch thousands, and thus fire the commercial imagination.

In the Good Old Days.

From The Chicago Tribune.

Aristides had grown weary of being called "the Just."

"My reputation for square dealing has become so notorious," he complained, "that I haven't had a chance to refuse the offer of a bribe or to kick a grafter out of my office for years and years, and I'm suffering from a lack of exercise!"

Singularly enough, it never occurred to him that he might utilize his notoriety by entering the lecture field or writing for the illustrated magazines.

THE ROOT OF THE EVIL.

True Principles of Honesty Lost to Sight in the Modern Rush.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I hold $35,000 of life insurance and consequently have with much interest perused every word of the report of Hamilton's address in the State Capitol yesterday. If ever a man spoke the truth he did.

Our trouble in all this tremendous rush, race, and fight of the last generation for supremecy in commercial affairs is the sinking of true principles of positive honesty. Anything which got business passed. By "advice of counsel" every devious device to get the better of the other fellow, if it stopped before murder, has been acceptable. Eminent men of affairs lack the honest courage to regard the plain, simple over-reaching as what it really is, dishonesty and sharp practice.

On the other hand, the plain man coming up by political accident has stood ready to "make a little something," and Sir Robert Walpole's epigram, "Every man has his price," has stood as a working fact. And men in executive places have met the situation as John A. McCall (a man, I believe, at conscience honest) "took the world as it was and worked it."

There is law enough on the statute books to cover every case known—not more law is needed, but a clear cut, upright measuring of the right and wrong of things by the standard of the eternal truth voiced in the Ten Commandments, and this applies to each man, woman, or child, whether in high position or low. If a strong and able man stands in a high place may that man possess the courage to speak out at the first tendency toward debauching men for the price and not snicker over it as a good thing and sharp business, which brings a money profit, but a blight to the soul. This country is not going to the dogs—we are likely to do better.

Where to Send Money for Japanese Famine.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I want to thank you for the assistance to the Japanese famine fund rendered by your editorial in this morning's TIMES. The need of the people in those provinces of Japan is very great; their fine national pride keeps them silent, and just such assistance from newspapers as you have given would be of the greatest help in alleviating the distress.

Will you kindly allow me to correct one error in your statements? You said that through the National Red Cross alone $45,000 has already been sent. This figure includes the contributions collected from all over the country by The Christian Herald—$20,000, I know, may be more. Will you not announce that money for the relief of the Japanese famine may be sent to Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, Room 503, 300 Fifth Avenue, Treasurer of the New York State Branch of the American National Red Cross, and therefore Treasurer of the Japanese famine fund?

W. C. LANGDON,
Secretary Executive Committee.

Russia's Debt to Germany.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In this morning's TIMES Waclaw Perkowski again sets himself up as a diagnostician of National ills. His diagnosis is opposed to that of other National diagnosticians. Not long ago a student of international politics told me that the reason Russia failed in her military operations against the genius of Japan was because she had crowded to the wall those factors, largely, which Waclaw Perkowski dubbs "German by birth or descent." Russia owes a good deal to Germany, and studious Russians emphasize the fact by going to Germany for what Russia cannot give them. The facts—and enlightened English and American witnesses to the facts—are against Waclaw Perkowski, who is the purblind victim of Polish resentment. Russia can only be modernized by influences from the outside. The Japanese slap has only demonstrated the deep somnolence of the pure Russians.

Labor Day for Horses.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I noticed an article in one of the daily papers a day or two ago in regard to the parade for work horses, instituted by the Boston Work Horse Parade Association in that city four years ago. It is said that a marked improvement in the treatment and condition of working animals has been the result. Would it not be an excellent idea for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to institute such a parade, to take place here once a year?

Any of the humane societies of New York, Brooklyn, Jersey City, or Hoboken could unite in an effort of this kind, giving medals of any suitable prizes as awards. Also any animal lover of wealth could give his or her individual prize of medal or money, and thereby encourage the drivers in treating with kindness the animals who help them to earn their living.

Taking Property for Public Purposes.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A bill is now pending in Albany which lessens the expense of taking property for street openings. It is one of the best measures that has been introduced at Albany in years. It is not only beneficial to the city, but to the property owners as well. Why should not this bill be made to apply to all property taken by the city for public purposes. A commission of three has been taking testimony for land required for the Chelsea Park on the west side for many months, and it is safe to say that it will continue to do so for a year or two more. The bill now pending in Albany provides for one Commissioner, and proceedings of this character would be wound up in six months. We have not forgotten the fact that the Commissioners for the widening of Elm Street (John Scannell being one of them) received about $17,000 each for their so-called services.

That New Transfer Rule Again.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

This evening about 7 o'clock, on a Madison Avenue car coming downtown, a gentleman and two ladies got on at 100th Street with several other people. The car was not crowded. About Ninetieth Street he walked down the car to the rear door and asked the conductor for transfers for Eighty-sixth Street, reminding the man that he had given him a quarter, and as he received the change had asked for the transfers. The conductor replied that he had not askd for them, and would not get them. After some argument the car stopped at Eighty-sixth Street. The conductor rudely told the party they could get off without transfers or go on downtown. One of the ladies indignantly protesting as they got off gave a negro laborer, standing on the platform, an opportunity to join with the conductor in much laughter at her expense.

POLICE O. K. ST. PATRICK FOR TIM M'CARNAHAN

Who Had Been Led Into Base Suspicions of the Saint.

"ME DAD" HADN'T COME HOME

And "Me Mudder" and Tim Being Left Hungry He Feared the Saint Was Bad Company—Reassured.

Tim McCarnahan was in trouble again yesterday, and of course he went to the Tenderloin police about it. Tim has lived all his twelve years in the neighborhood of Eighth Avenue and Thirtieth Street. His cheerful faith in the wisdom and infallibility of "de cops," from patrolman up, is something refreshing. He often takes his woes to the Tenderloin Station.

Maybe it is because of his deportment, but, anyway, he always receives manly treatment; they never laugh at him to his face, and rarely behind his back. For he is usually in such strenuously dead earnest.

He was when he wanted Santa Claus "pinched" because Santa had taken the money and the note left for him by Tim, but had failed to show up with any small part of the things Tim had written down. Not a man laughed then.

He was again when he wanted his father "pinched" because he had dropped Irish whisky into the open mouth of Tim's caged sparrow, "Gorge W.," and then had guffawed when George W. died. Tim even got some satisfaction then, and on other occasions he has presented his case without being laughed at.

There was no timidity expressed in the manner in which the door swung open late yesterday afternoon and Tim strode into the Tenderloin Station. There is no timidity in Tim's soul. Sergt. McCann was working on his blotter, but the shock-haired boy climbed up on the iron railing in front of the desk so that he could see the Sergeant's face. Over the snub-nosed roundness of Tim's face was a cloud of dark, serious concern.

"Sarge," he began, with that husky tremor in his voice that it always has when his square little jaw is hardest set, "Sarge, who's St. Patrick? Tell me 'bout dat guy. I'm burnin' to git onter him."

"What's wrong now?" asked Sergt. McCann. "St. Patrick's all right. He's a perfect gentleman."

"'Perfect gent'man' be danged!" exclaimed Tim in disgust. "Is he straight, or is he on de fritz? I know he's a swell guy, 'cause I've heard lots 'bout him. But is he a booze-lapper? Dat's whut I wants to know.

"Now, wait, I'll tell you why I'm tryin' to git onto him," hurried on the boy in explanation. "Me dad started early dis mornin' to git a spread. He was due back at 9 o'clock wid de real butter, an' de potatoes, an' de swell roast, an' all de rest.

"Comes 12 o'clock—no dad—no roast—no nothin'. An' me mudder an' me' bout to croak fer somethin' to eat. 'Cause, yer see, he took all de paper money I had, all de wash money she had, an' all de bricklayin' money he wuz supposed ter have. Nobody seen his dough. But it wuz to git a spread to celebrate dis Saint Patrick guy.

"Comes 1 o'clock—no spread. Everybody else in de house cuttin' up an' eatin fit to kill—all 'bout de Patrick guy. Dey asks me mudder an' me to eat wid 'em, seemin' to know dat de ole man wouldn't be back. But she wouldn't go, an' she wouldn't let me go, which is all O. K., says I.

"Comes 4 o'clock, an' I asks me mudder where she reckons the old gen'l'man an' de spread is. 'Wid St. Patrick,' she says. She didn't laugh like she does when she's kiddin' me, an' I guess whut she said wuz on de level.

"Now, whut I wants to know is: Who is dis St. Patrick guy? Whut's his biz? Whut's his manners when he ain't workin'? Does he 'sociate wid sour-smellin' gin mills? If he don't, he is straight goods, an' it'll be all right, an' me mudder an' me will git de spread sometime to-night. It'll taste better fer havin' to wait—a lot better, I knows dat.

"But, say if de Patrick guy is a booze-lapper, why—why, well, it'll be two crullers fer me in de mornin'. Dat's all. You see, now, why I'm anxious. On de level, now, whut kind of a guy is Saint Patrick? Seems to me I got a hunch he's a booze-lapper."

Sergt. McCann, who just now is Acting Captain, turned over a lot of leaves in the blotter before he answered. Then he spoke up with much of that hoarseness that characterizes Tim's voice when he is most in earnest.

"Say, kid, on the level," said the Sergeant, "the Patrick guy is all right. I've known him a long time. Take it from me, he is straight goods. He's darned good company for anybody, and he never lets anybody that runs with him do anything shady if he knows about it. Maybe your dad wants to stay with him a good while to-night, and so he'll send the spread home in a basket.

"I expect he's been fixin' up a howlin' swell spread, and it has taken him longer than usual. I bet it'll be home soon after you get there. Only, say, don't tell your mother you've been here. I'll bet it'll be there in a mighty little while after you get home."

And it was.

FOR SELLING OF THE GREEN.

Policeman Mike McMahon Arrests Tim Muldoon—Sullivan to the Rescue.

DAYTON, Ohio, March 17.—Policeman "Mike" McMahon to-day arrested "Tim" Muldoon for selling shamrocks without a license.

Muldoon was coining money on a street corner to-day and had just sold a shamrock to a rosy-cheeked Irish girl, when McMahon seized Muldoon, in spite of the protests of the crowd.

The case was promptly dismissed by Judge Sullivan.

SUSAN B. ANTHONY'S WILL.

Leaves the $10,000 Estate to the Cause of Woman Suffrage.

ROCHESTER, March 17.—The will of Miss Susan B. Anthony was offered for probate this afternoon. The estate amounts to about $10,000, all of which is left to the woman's suffrage cause. The Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw of Philadelphia, Lucy E. Anthony of Philadelphia, and Mary S. Anthony of this city are the trustees.

The will was drawn Jan. 19, 1904. By its terms Mary Anthony will not receive anything from her sister's estate.

Off for the Astor Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Brooks and Mrs. T. Moncure Perkins, the sisters and brother-in-law of Mrs. Nannie Langhorne Shaw, who is to marry Waldorf Astor in London, sailed for Liverpool on the Cunarder Lucania yesterday morning. They went to attend the wedding, which, Mrs. Brooks said, would be held early in April.

Bazaar for the Foundling Asylum.

Owing to the severe storm of Thursday, many friends of the New York Foundling Hospital were unable to attend the bazaar at Delmonico's for the benefit of that institution. Consequently, the managers have decided to hold a supplementary sale at the Foundling Hospital, 175 East Sixty-eighth Street, next Tuesday, March 20, from 11 A. M. until 5 P. M.

MISS LEARY'S BENEFIT.

Italian Charitable Work Profits by the Waldorf Concert.

The large ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria was crowded last night for the concert given for the benefit of the Society for Italian Immigrants, of which Ernesto Fabbri has been elected President, and for Miss Leary's Italian Settlement, the work that led the Pope to confer upon her the honorary title of Countess. A good sum was realized to aid the charities.

One of the aims of the Immigration Society is to open schools for Italians employed in the lower grades of labor. One such already has been opened at Aspinwall, Penn. The Italians there, engaged in excavating for Pittsburg's great filtration plant, live in shanties outside the town and are shut out of the life of the community.

The Italian Consul was present last night in a box decorated with Italian and American flags. Among the box and seat holders were Miss Leary, Miss Helen Dunham, Miss Laura J. Post, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Dana Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. James Speyer, Mr. and Mrs. E. Fabbri, Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hammond, Mrs. David H. Greer, Mrs. Grenville Winthrop, Mrs. W. Pierson Hamilton, Mrs. John Greenough, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Whitridge, Mrs. Pinchot, Mr. and Mrs. Stanford White, Mr. and Mrs. Seth Low, and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Choate.

TO WED COUNTESS LATAZZI.

Fiancee of Edward K. Mohler of Cleveland Is an American.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, March 17.—Edward Keene Mohler, a Cleveland man, is to marry the Countess Latazzi of France at St. Mary's, Westminster, London, on March 21. The first news of the approaching wedding came to Cleveland in the form of wedding invitations. Mr. Mohler inherited a fortune from his uncle, Gen. D. W. Caldwell, formerly President of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad. He is 35 years old.

The Countess Latazzi, it is said, is an American woman who several years ago married a French Count, now dead.

A DAY'S WEDDINGS.

SHEARER—KELLOGG.

Charles J. Shearer, advertising manager of Bloomingdale Brothers, was married yesterday afternoon to Miss Ruby Helena Kellogg at the bride's home, 260 West 140th Street. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Goddeth of Calvary Methodist Church, 129th Street and Seventh Avenue. Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Shearer departed on a trip to Washington and the South. At a dinner given by his co-workers to Mr. Shearer before the wedding several valuable gifts were presented to him, as an evidence of their appreciation of his services. The gifts included a handsome marble bust and an oil painting.

GORDON—EATON.

The wedding of Miss Viva Eaton and Edwin K. Gordon took place last night at 8:30 o'clock at the Orsonde, Broadway and Seventieth Street. The Rev. Dr. Atlebury officiated. John W. Daly and Miss Charline Daly of Buffalo attended.

An Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Lorsch of 266 Lenox Avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor J. Lorsch, to Albert Lassner.

BELLEVUE AT THE THEATRE.

Medical Students Help Out "Mr. Brown" with College Yells.

Medical students of the New York University and Bellevue Medical College attended Friday night's performance of "Brown at Harvard." The entire orchestra and boxes were occupied by the students and the Faculty was well represented. The house was decorated with the college colors. A succession of Bellevue yells kept the house in an uproar. Among them being:

> Appendicitis, Diabetes,
> Rip! Ra! Ru!
> Bellevue! Bellevue! N. Y. U.!
> Myorcaditis, Appendicitis, Tuberculosis, too!
> Typhoid, Fibroid! Sis! Boom! Bah!
> Bellevue! Bellevue! Rah! Rah! Rah!

Between the second and third acts the orchestra played the college song, "The Violet," which was sung by the entire student body, and received an ovation. The students afterward visited Chinatown.

TESTATOR WROTE ROOSEVELT

Surrogate Won't Probate Goldsticker's Will—He Was Insane, Say Contestant.

Surrogate Thomas refused yesterday to admit to probate the will of David Goldsticker, who died last Fall. The estate amounted to $50,000, and was left to some of his brothers and sisters. Samuel Goldsticker, the testator's brother, was named as the executor of the will. The contestants were two other brothers, Louis and Martin. The contest was made on the ground that the testator was of unsound mind. He was in a sanitarium for several years before his death.

Goldsticker's delusions led him, it is alleged, to write letters of complaint to President Roosevelt, ex-President Cleveland, George J. Gould, J. P. Morgan, and Russell Sage. He was 35 years old.

Samuel H. Kauffmann Buried.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 17.—Samuel Hay Kauffmann, President of The Evening Star Newspaper Company, was buried to-day in Rock Creek Cemetery after the last rites of the Episcopal Church had been performed by Bishop Henry Y. Satterlee. The honorary pallbearers were Senator William B. Allison, Frank A. Richardson, F. B. McGuire, Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, Theodore W. Noyes, Thomas Hyde, Gen. John M. Wilson, and Charles C. Glover.

Y. W. C. A. Needs Help.

The Young Women's Christian Association appeals to friends and the public for immediate financial help. To meet the obligations incurred in 1905 it was necessary to use about $13,000 of the association's unrestricted invested funds. The same additional amount will be needed for 1906. Contributions may be sent to Mrs. George F. Butterworth, 7 East Fifteenth Street.

Robert B. Roosevelt Better.

The condition of Robert B. Roosevelt, President Roosevelt's uncle, who has been ill at his home, 57 Fifth Avenue, since Friday morning with a peculiar form of rheumatism, was reported as improved last night. Mr. Roosevelt was able to sit up yesterday. His physicians believe he will recover.

"STEP LIVELY," SAID ELEPHANT TO "HIPPO"

"Babe" Also Pushed and the Circus Then Got Aboard.

OPENS HERE ON THURSDAY

How Those Snakes Kept "Greatest Show on Earth" from Arriving Till St. Patrick's Parade Was Over.

Once more the Barnum & Bailey Circus is in its Spring quarters in Madison Square Garden. Four days more and the band will play, the elephants will walk around, and all the multitudinous wonders of the Greatest Show on Earth will be visible again.

The circus reached Madison Square Garden early yesterday morning. The animals and circus fixtures were landed at the Mott Haven yards. From there the big circus moved downtown by way of Lincoln Avenue to 134th Street, then to Willis Avenue, and over the bridge to First Avenue, down to Twenty-seventh Street, and over to the Madison Square Garden.

Three hundred men were at work in the Garden arranging for the circus. The floor was being ripped up down to the steel beams above the basement. Heavy planks were laid, and everything made in readiness for the dumping of 900 wagon-loads of river clay to make the arena. By Monday the individual performers will have a chance to limber up. There will be a full rehearsal Wednesday evening, preliminary to the initial performance Thursday afternoon.

"Tody" Hamilton, expert in superlatives, arrived with the first load, reaching Mott Haven soon after 1 o'clock yesterday morning. Before greeting the friends gathered there he carried a bag of peanuts to Babe, the oldest elephant of the circus. When this duty was done he was ready to talk.

"Here we are again," said Tody, "the Barnum & Bailey Circus, the Greatest Show on Earth. We did not reach the Garden earlier partly because of the snow and sleet, which made our task of loading a herculean enterprise, but chiefly because we have in our menagerie the most marvelous collection of snakes ever congregated, and it did not seem proper to bring them into the city on St. Patrick's Day.

"We have rarely had so hard a time in getting away from our Winter headquarters. The dragging of the wagons to the three sections of our train needed every bit of power we had. Each section of our train was about a mile long.

"The roaring of the lions made the good people along the road fear that another storm was approaching, and the combined vocal efforts of the tigers, leopards, jaguars, wolves, and other wild animals made the cattle on a thousand hills mad with fear, so that they stampeded to left and right, an event I fear which will cost us a pretty penny when we come to settle the damage suits.

"Now the honest, so-help-me, cross-my-heart truth is that if it had not been for Babe, the elephant, we might have been still starting, instead of arriving. She is the gentlest old dear that ever was, and she has the power of a mogul engine. But the best of it is that she has such a sweet disposition. She is the peacemaker in our huge family of natural enemies.

"To begin with, when we started to drag the hippopotamus in his wagon one of the hind wheels stuck in a rut and all our horses and all our men could not budge it. We prodded old Nebuchadnezzar out of his cage into the snow. The big, fat fellow had never seen snow nor felt bitter cold before.

"He is as amiable as a pug dog, but he was out of his element, and terribly frightened. He ran about, lifting his feet high, and it was some time before he could be lassoed and dragged to his cage. Good-natured as he is, he is also as stubborn as a mule. He did not like the cold and the snow, but more seriously objected to the cage wagon.

"Babe was brought out, her trainer explaining that old 'Neb' would not behave himself. Babe went up to him, butted him a couple of times with her huge head to make him look up and pay attention. Then she went to the south side of him, put her forehead against him, and shoved. He gave a grunt of disapproval, but clambered up the runway into his wagon. Babe, being rewarded, began to show signs of distress, and that is another story.

"Among our other properties is a baby elephant, which the others began to tease as soon as he arrived last Winter. They would hurt the little one whenever they could. Babe watched the teasing for a while and then asserted herself. She butted big Jim of the long tusks so hard that he had a pain in his side for some time, and then she went for the others. The baby took the greatest liking to his protector, and they were always together.

"Yesterday while Babe was busy with the hippopotamus one of the other elephants began to abuse the little elephant. Babe heard him squeal, and she went through a barn door as if it had been paper. She had the offender down and out when her trainer got to her. She obeyed him at once, and, with her adopted son, marched quietly to her car, where she held him close to her and seemed to be trying to sooth him when the train pulled out for New York."

COAL STRIKE TO BE STAGED.

Henrietta Crosman to Star in a New Play, "Don't-Care Nancy."

A new play founded on incidents of the coal strike is announced for Henrietta Crosman. The piece is a four-act drama by Thompson Buchanan, and will be called "Don't-Care Nancy."

The two chief scenes are laid in the soft coal region of Kentucky during a struggle between miners and capitalists. Miss Crosman will be seen in the rôle of a heroine of the people, who brings peace between tre warring factions.

Maurice Campbell will produce the play in three weeks at Louisville, Ky.

Downs-Lefferts Wedding April 17.

The wedding of Miss Louise A. Lefferts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Lefferts, of Flatbush, to Ira B. Downs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel H. Downs, will take place on April 17 at the old Lefferts homestead, Flatbush Avenue and Lincoln Road, where five generations of the Lefferts in succession have been married. Mrs. C. Montague Cooke, Jr. of Honolulu, Miss Lefferts's sister, will be matron of honor. The Misses Gertrude Sullivan, Coralie Mead, Florence Foster and Miss MacKinny are to be the bridesmaids. Herbert Downs will be his brother's best man.

MR. GERICKE'S FAREWELL.

The Last Concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's Season.

The last concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's New York series was given yesterday afternoon in Carnegie Hall. There was a very large audience, and the occasion was recognized as one of special and regrettable import, in that it was Mr. Gericke's last appearance as conductor of the famous orchestra in this city. Mr. Gericke conducted in a fashion that will be remembered as representing his best, and his men seconded him in every possible way in giving a performance of splendid spirit, finish, and euphony.

The orchestral numbers were all familiar. They began with the overture to "Der Freischütz," which was read without any attempt at emphasizing the effects which modern conductors love to make in this piece, but yet with great spirit and dramatic contrast. Goldmark's glowing "Sakuntala" overture followed, in which Mr. Gericke's tempos are somewhat faster than those of some other conductors in this piece. The symphony was Schubert's in C, whose heavenly lengths had not been unfolded in a New York concert hall for several years, and which were heard with manifest delight. It was a performance that warmed the hearts of all the lovers of Schubert's wonderful music, in which every beauty was brought out with consummate art and with a full appreciation of the supremely poetic and imaginative spirit of the work. It was a delight to hear all the instrumental touches so perfectly presented—from whom else shall the oboe theme in the Andante be heard so exquisitely blown?

Mr. David Bispham was the soloist and sang a ballad by Frederick S. Converse, a setting for baritone voice and orchestra of Keats's poem, "La Belle Dame Sans Merci," a work in which the composer has given more to the orchestra than to the voice that declaims the verses, making it a symphonic poem with a voice part and relying upon the orchestra to present the moods of the poem. He has written some strikingly descriptive music, orchestrated with distinction. As to its success in heightening and extending the power of the poet's words, there may be some doubt; and upon this must rest the success the musicians attempt. Mr. Bispham also sang the air, "An jenem Tag," from Marschner's opera, "Hans Heiling," and in both he did some violence to the text through his distortion of the vowel sounds.

There was great and long continued applause for Mr. Gericke, who was again and again called out; and finally, when the audience would not go, he came to the front and spoke a few words, expressing his gratitude for the sympathy and kindness that had been extended to him in New York, and saying that he could never forget it. He had previously acknowledged much applause after the performance of the earlier numbers on the programme, and had shared it with his men by making them twice rise in a body to acknowledge it.

LAST DAY AT THE OPERA.

Mmes. Sembrich and Eames Make Their Final Appearance—Lohengrin in the Evening.

Two operas of widely varied character made up the programme at the last matinée of the season at the Metropolitan Opera House yesterday. It would be difficult to find in operatic literature two greater contrasts than Puccini as he is shown in the ultra modern "Tosca," and Rossini in the classic beauty and simplicity of "Il Barbiere di Seviglia." But there were two popular prima donnas to say farewell, and the large audience did not concern itself with the difference between the music of old and new Italy.

Mme. Eames, in spite of a rumored indisposition, was in good voice and sang her prayer in the second act with uncommon sweetness and beauty of tone. She was warmly applauded by the audience, and MM. Scotti and Dippel, who sang for the last time this season, came in for their share of the parting enthusiasm.

Mme. Sembrich sang the second and part of the third act of Rossini's opera, just as Mme. Eames had taken from Puccini's work the first and second acts. She added variety to the second scene when after an especially brilliant performance of Strauss's "Voce di Primavera" waltz, she sang "Home, Sweet Home" in English. The touching beauty of her interpretation brought out such an enthusiastice demand that she followed it with "Ah, non giunge," and finally retired from view struggling under a load of roses.

Mr. Dippel sang the tenor rôles in both the operas. Mr. Scotti, Mr. Campanari, and Mr. Journet were also in the casts.

In the evening the last performance of the season was given, when "Lohengrin" was performed, with Mme. Rappold, Miss Walker, Messrs. Knote, Goritz, Blass, and Mühlmann in the chief rôles. There was a very large audience, and the last farewells were given with much enthusiasm.

RACHMANINOFF NOT TO COME.

Moscow Composer Cancels Engagements in America This Spring.

Plans that had been made for American appearances of Mr. Rachmaninoff, the Russian composer, conductor, and pianist, had to be abandoned yesterday because of the receipt of a cable dispatch saying that he would not be able to come this season.

One of his engagements was for the concert of the Russian Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall on April 7, when he was to have been the piano soloist, and was also to have shared the baton with Modest Altschuler, the conductor. Arrangements had been made for other concerts in this and other Eastern cities, and it was expected that he would start from Moscow within a few days and would be here early in April.

Mr. Rachmaninoff is conductor at the Imperial Opera in Moscow. His work was greatly complicated by the recent fighting in that city, and since order has been restored his duties have been very heavy. Letters received by friends in this city show that the disorder forced him to do some reorganizing of his forces, and that he felt that his orchestra would not be in the condition he wished for some time.

What arrangements will be made by the Russian Symphony Orchestra to fill his place is not known as yet. The cablegram came as a surprise. It is announced that Mr. Rachmaninoff will come next Autumn, and it is hoped that he will make a longer stay than was planned this Spring.

NEW RUSSIAN WORKS.

A Symphony by Gliere and a Violin Concerto by Mlynarsky.

The Russian Symphony Orchestra gave more new Russian works at its concert last evening in Carnegie Hall. The most important of them were a symphony by Griere, one of the younger of the Russian composers, and a violin concerto by Mlynarsky. The symphony shows many of the familiar earmarks of its kind; it is clear and easily intelligible music, but of very little significance below the surface. The themes are very short and have the Russian stamp, and they are repeated and reiterated with a certain cleverness, but little of a logical symphonic development is derived from them, and the work scarcely does more than skirt the edge of musical feeling. The concerto, played by Mr. Saslavsky, concertmaster of the orchestra, is in two movements; or two movements only were played. It is agreeable, melodious, but scarcely more.

Of the smaller pieces an effective intermesso called "Night," from Napravnik's opera, "Dubroffsky," and a "Cossack Dance," by Seroff, were both repeated.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Lincoln," a character drama by Benjamin Chapin, will begin a brief engagement at the Liberty Theatre on Monday, March 26. Mr. Chapin appears in the title rôle.

The dramatic section of the French Alliance of New York will present "Le Baiser," a comedy by Theodore de Banville, and "Disparu," a comedy by Alexandre Bisson and André Sylvane, in Carnegie Lyceum on Friday, March 23, and Saturday, March 24.

A series of Shakespeare recitals will be given by Marshall Darrach at the Waldorf-Astoria on the mornings of March 24 and 31 and April 7. Among the plays presented will be "The Merchant of Venice," "Julius Caesar," and "Twelfth Night." The patronesses include Mrs. Seth Low, Mrs. Russell Sage, Mrs. James Speyer, Mrs. S. Osgood Pell, Mrs. John R. Drexel, Mrs. Thomas H. Whitney, and Mrs. Frank Edson Perkins.

JOHANN MOST DEAD AFTER BRIEF ILLNESS

Noted Anarchist Expires at Friend's House in Cincinnati.

IN JAIL IN MANY COUNTRIES

Came Here in 1882 and Served Three Sentences in America—Was Born In Bavaria in 1846.

CINCINNATI, March 17.—Johann Most, the Anarchist, died to-day from erysipelas.

Herr Most came to this city on Monday, on the invitation of friends, and was the guest of Adolph Kraus of Cutler Street. He was to deliver a lecture in Chicago on Wednesday night, but on account of an attack of erysipelas he was obliged to cancel his engagement. Up to a few hours before Most's death his physician expressed confidence that the patient would recover.

Herr Most was delirious most of the time during the last few days of his illness, suffering greatly, and occasionally repeating parts of his most famous speeches. During the greater part of last night he was unconscious, but during the morning he regained consciousness for a short time, and at 9 o'clock seemed much more cheerful and apparently was suffering little pain.

Later he again became unconscious and his strength failed him slowly till he died. With him at the end were a few of his friends in this city, who had been caring for him during his sickness.

No plans have yet been made for the funeral, the friends in this city awaiting word from Most's wife, to whom a message was at once sent.

Johann Most boasted when he landed in New York twenty-four years ago that he "had been in prison for liberty in almost every country in Europe." Certainly, since his arrival on American soil, he had no occasion to complain of a lack of hospitality on the part of American jailers. He was always in hot water with the authorities, his latest term in jail having followed a violent editorial on behalf of those who murdered Kings and rulers, which he saw fit to print in the Freiheit on the day following the shooting of President McKinley.

Herr Most was born in Bavaria in 1840. In early life he developed agnostic tendencies, and refused to go to confession. One of the priests thought to overcome his obstinacy by threatening him with a whipping. Most was defiant, and was marched off to jail.

"Since that day," he was wont to say proudly, "I have never entered a church."

In 1871, in Vienna, he was prominent as a Socialist agitator. Finally he was arrested and found guilty of high treason. The general amnesty saved him on this occasion and he moved on to Chemnitz, a manufacturing town in Saxony. Two years later he was expelled from the country. He then repaired to Mayence, where he founded a newspaper, and whence he was sent to the Reichstag. This took him to Berlin. One of his speeches on the Paris Commune caused his arrest on the charge of inciting to rebellion. He was found guilty and served two years in prison.

While serving the sentence he was well treated and had access to all manner of books and plenty of time for study. It may fairly be said that he educated himself during this period of his life.

He came out of jail embittered against all government and renewed his career as an agitator more energetically than ever. He had achieved unusual prominence and inspired the sincerest distrust of the authorities at the time of the passage of the "muzzle law," when he was again forced to change his domicile. This time he went to England.

Settling in London, he began the publication of the Freiheit. Taking up the extreme Bakunist, or destructive, theory, he soon alienated the constructive Socialists, or followers of Marx. There was dissension even among his own followers, so violent were the doctrines he preached. When Emperor Alexander II. of Russia was assassinated Most brought out his paper in red ink and openly recommended pillage and massacre. In 1881 the paper was seized, and Most was arrested and sentenced to sixteen months at hard labor for inciting to murder. He was released from imprisonment toward the close of 1882 and sailed at once for New York.

Here he had an enthusiastic reception, and addressed a large audience in the Cooper Union. From the time he landed he was a storm centre. His campaign against the established order of things took him to different parts of the country, and there is hardly a city in the United States where he did not address his anarchistical followers.

He was always a big card with New York Anarchists, and never lacked support. Time after time he was arrested, and time after time he was put in jail. On the day after President McKinley was shot down by Czolgosz—Most was then the editor of a second Freiheit—he published an encomium of the murder so rabid that Central Office detectives were sent out to arrest him on the charge of disorderly conduct. He fought hard to escape imprisonment, appealing his case to the highest courts, but in June, 1902, he was taken to prison to serve a year's sentence.

Shortly before he commenced his sentence and while he was out on bail he addressed an audience of Anarchists at New Irving Hall, working them up to a pitch of frenzy which resulted in a riotous demonstration. His followers fought bitterly to save him from arrest, but he was placed behind the bars and kept there over night. The police records at the time showed that he was arrested in 1896 for making inflammatory speeches, fined $500, and sent to jail for a year. He was hardly out of jail when he again offended, and received the same dose for the second time.

His last term in prison seemed to cool him off to a certain extent. When released he managed to curb his tongue and his pen to a sufficient extent to insure freedom, but he never lost his place as Arch-Anarchist.

In personal appearance Most was far from attractive. When little more than a child he became ill and an operation was performed which disfigured him for life.

Most wrote his autobiography. In closing the work he thus flung defiance at the world:

"The rogues of all sorts and conditions are leading a life of gayety and men of my stamp must drain one cup of bitterness after another until—well, until a universal political and social cyclone sweeps up and down the globe and cleanses the atmosphere and makes it fit for human beings to breathe."

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The cold weather continues in all parts of the country, although temperatures are again approaching the normal over the northeastern Rocky Mountain slope.

The day was generally fair east of the Rocky Mountains, with cold west winds in northern districts and light, variable winds over the South. Rain fell in the South Pacific districts and snow over the Southwestern Plateau.

The weather Sunday will be fair with rather low temperature for the season, except that rain is probable in the Southwest. Monday also promises to be fair, except in the same locality.

Winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be fresh west to northwest; South Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, fresh northeast to east; Lake Michigan, light west to southwest.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND MONDAY.

Eastern New York, New Jersey, New England, Eastern Pennsylvania, and Delaware—Fair and continued cold Sunday and Monday; fresh west winds.

Western New York and Western Pennsylvania—Fair Sunday and Monday; fresh west winds.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

3 A. M.	41	4	3 P. M.	45	31
6 A. M.	41	3	6 P. M.	45	31
9 A. M.	38	2	9 P. M.	48	20
12 M.	44	8	12 P. M.	36	24

This thermometer is 103 feet above the street level. The average temperature yesterday was 28; for the corresponding date last year it was 43; average for the corresponding date for the last twenty-five years, 35.

The temperature at 8 A. M. yesterday was 24; at 8 P. M. it was 26. Maximum temperature, 32 degrees at 3 P. M.; minimum, 24 degrees at 6 A. M. Humidity, 72 per cent. at 8 A. M.; 51 per cent. at 8 P. M.

TO SEND GIRLS TO VASSAR.

The Students' Aid Society to Hold its Benefit on April 2.

The annual benefit for the Vassar Students' Aid Society, which is purely a charity organization, will be given on April 2 at the Hudson Theatre. The first three one-act plays will be "The Mallet's Masterpiece," by Edward Peple; "The Land of the Free," by W. C. de Mille, and "The Watteau Shepherdess," by Harold McGrath. These will be followed by "The Dance of the Iris," by Frances Nathan.

Between the plays the Roumanians, who are Russian players, will dance and sing, and will play on the flute, violin, and piano, and Mrs. Willa Holt-Wakefield will give musical interpretations between the acts.

The Vassar Students' Aid Society, since it was organized in 1890, has maintained from three to six girls at Vassar each year. It loans these girls money, which they return after they become self-supporting. There are branches of the society all over the country. The society is anxious to send double its usual number of girls to college next year, and appeals to the public for its co-operation in this benefit performance.

COL. J. B. KILLEBREW DEAD.

Well-Known Southern Editor and Writer on Agricultural Subjects.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 17.—Col. Joseph B. Killebrew died here to-day. He was born in Montgomery County, Tenn., May 29, 1831. While still an undergraduate at the University of North Carolina he was editor of The North Carolina University Magazine. He was admitted to the bar in 1857. In 1871 he became agricultural editor of The Union and American of Nashville, and a year later, when The Rural Sun was established, he became its editor in chief.

In the same year he was appointed general agent of the Peabody education fund for Tennessee, and also became Assistant State Superintendent of Education. In 1874, assisted by the State Geologist, Dr. J. M. Safford, and a strong corps of local writers, he issued his work, "The Resources of Tennessee." Subsequently he published several works on agriculture.

He was chief of the department of woods and minerals of the Atlanta Exposition in 1881, a Commissioner of three of the largest railroads in the South, and a charter member of the Tennessee Exposition Company.

BONHAG'S NOTABLE WIN IN THE PASTIME GAMES

Takes Three-Meter Race Against Big Field in Garden Meet.

HAHN AND SHEPPARD SCORE

A. A. U. Championship Goes to Olympic Sprinter of Irish-Americans —Mitchell Wins with Weight.

George V. Bonhag, the Irish-American distance runner, who is going to Athens as a member of the Olympic team, won the most spectacular victory in the Pastime Athletic Club games at Madison Square Garden last night. In the long list of handicaps on the programme he was the only scratch man to score a victory. The big field included 500 athletes, and the narrow track gave little chance to the men on low marks, but Bonhag, judging his pace admirably, threaded his way through the thirty-five starters to whom he allowed distance in the three-meter race, and, running down one after another, finally overtook the leader on the last lap and beat him home by five yards by a brilliant spurt on the tape.

The Olympic athletes who competed were Archie Hahn and W. D. Eaton, the sprinters, and James S. Mitchel, the weight thrower. Hahn won the Amateur Athletic Union championship for 60 yards in handy fashion, and Mitchel won throwing the 56-pound weight for height easily with a fifteen-foot throw. Eaton failed to get better than third in the sprint, being beaten by J. J. Danaher of the Xavier Athletic Club for second place. All four men who came through to the final overran their marks and were put back a yard, while Eaton and Callahan were penalized a second time. The latter withdrew, but Eaton ran. The handicap, however, proved too great for him to overtake Danaher.

Melvin Sheppard won the other Amateur Athletic Union championship, the 1,000 yards, in hollow fashion. There were seven starters when the race began, but the pace proved too fast for all save three. Joseph Bromilow and Bart Sullivan entered the last lap behind Sheppard, but the wonderful schoolboy let out a link, and simply ran rings around the pair. He won by thirty yards from Bromilow, who beat Sullivan by a narrow margin for second place.

There were thirty trial heats necessary in the fifty-meter handicap, and none but limit men survived. J. F. O'Connell proved the winner from the eight-foot mark. In the 400-meter handicap the same condition existed, the limit men winning nearly every place.

Two good relay races were run, one for the Public Schools Athletic League championship. The Boys' High School won this handily from De Witt Clinton and the High School of Commerce. In the other the Pastime Athletic Club beat the quartet sent down by the Cambridgeport Gymnasium Association. The summary follows:

One-Mile High School Relay, Public Schools Athletic League Championship.—Won by Boys' High School—C. S. Boyce, G. Wiggins, L. R. Murphy, and A. B. Collins; De Witt Clinton—L. Waters, T. Clancy, E. Staley, and G. Hurlburt—second; High School of Commerce—Smith, Vorhis, Hallock, and Hoffman—third. Time—3:50 4-5.

1,000-Yard Amateur Athletic Union Championship.—Won by Melvin W. Sheppard, Irish-American A. C.; Joseph Bromilow, Jr., Irish-American A. C., second; B. F. Sullivan, Cambridgeport Gymnasium, third. Time—2:23 2-5.

One-Mile Special Relay.—Won by Pastime A. C.—F. Trube, E. J. Sweeney, J. M. Devere, and W. E. Grady; Cambridgeport Gymnasium A. C.—Bart Sullivan, J. W. Roberts, L. Wheaton, and F. McDonald—second. Time—3:52 1-5.

Putting the 24-Pound Shot.—Won by L. E. J. Feuerbach, New York A. C., 34 feet 6 inches; R. Sheldon, New York A. C., 34 feet 2 inches, second; J. S. Mitchel, New York A. C., 30 feet 1 inch, third.

60 Yards, Amateur Athletic Championship.—Trial Heats—First Heat—Won by W. S. Eaton, Cambridgeport Gymnasium; J. J. Danaher, Xavier A. C., second. Time—0:06 4-5. Second Heat—Won by Archie Hahn, Milwaukee A. C.; P. J. Callahan, New York A. C., second. Time—0:07.

Final Heat—Won by Archie Hahn, Milwaukee A. C.; J. J. Danaher, Xavier A. C., second; W. D. Eaton, Cambridgeport Gymnasium, third. Time—0:06 4-5.

Harvard Gymnasts Beat Penn.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., March 17.—Harvard won a dual gymnastic meet with the University of Pennsylvania at the Hemenway Gymnasium to-day by 31 points to 17. The judges found that the Crimson excelled in general work and in better execution of the more difficult feats. Krauss of the visitors won the only first place for his team, this being in the parallel bars. Harvard took firsts in the horizontal bars, side bars, club swinging, flying ring, and single tumbling.

Yale Wrestlers Win at Cornell.

ITHACA, N. Y., March 17.—Yale outclassed Cornell at wrestling to-night in the dual meeting here, winning all of the six bouts. Four decisions were on falls and two on points. The shortest bout was between Kenewarthy of Yale and Whitehead of Cornell in the heavyweight class, Whitehead being thrown in 1:10.

NEW RECORD BY NORTHRIDGE.

Fast Hurdle Racer in 23d Regiment Games—Boys' High Championship.

A new armory record by S. C. Northridge and the winning of the Long Island interscholastic championship in the one-mile relay by the Boys' High School team were the features last night in the twenty-eighth indoor games of the Twenty-third Regiment Athletic Association, held in the armory, Bedford and Atlantic Avenues, Brooklyn. Northridge, who was the holder of the armory record at 0:16 1-5, clipped two-fifths of a second from the old time, and hearty applause greeted the announcement of the new figures, 0:15 4-5.

The presence on the floor toward the close of the games of the Boys' High School team created a ripple of excitement among the athletes, particularly when it became known that the team had just come from the Pastime games in Madison Square Garden, where they had won the Public School League championship at the same distance. The four members of the team, Bryce, Wiggins, Murphy, and Collins, added the second championship to their score of the evening's victories with the greatest ease, beating the Polytechnic Preparatory team by over 30 yards. The time was 3:45 1-5.

Northridge added to his athletic success later in the evening by the narrowest sort of a victory after a splendidly contested race in the 220-yard event. He just won at the tape in 0:25 1-5, from scratch. Summary:

65-Yard Dash, Novice.—Won by C. A. Pierce, Co. K; T. H. Cooper, Co. B, second; P. L. Foote, Jr., Co. E, third. Time—0:07 4-5.

ATHLETICS IN ENGLAND.

Oxford Coaches Disappointed—Olympic Team Will Be Strong.

Next to the Olympic games, the annual rowing race between Oxford and Cambridge is the principal subject discussed among amateur athletes of England. According to "Billy" Kelly, in his latest London news letter, Oxford, with three old Blues rowing against two for Cambridge, combined with their pronounced victory last year, would appear to have the better chance, but the vicissitudes of training often play havoc with a coach's plan, and so far the Oxonian mentors have experienced little else than disappointment.

"Neither crew," writes Mr. Kelly, "looks like turning out as heavy as was expected. An average of 175 pounds per man was expected of Oxford, but they will be much heavier. Cambridge should average 179 pounds, but at present they are a little under that weight.

"It is common gossip," says Mr. Kelly, "that John Flanagan, 'Jim' Mitchell, and Martin Sheridan will come to England for the Amateur Athletic Association championships in July."

Furthermore, in his letter Mr. Kelly writes: "It is feared that J. W. Horton of the South London Harriers will not compete at the Olympic games at Athens. He has been feeling ill for a month, and has just come back from the north after a rest. The absence of Horton at the games would be a pity, as it would then be demonstrated whether he would be able to cope with Schick, Hahn, or Parsons.

"The United Kingdom," says Mr. Kelly, "will be strongly represented in quality, if not in quantity, at the Olympic games. G. E. Larner, holder of the amateur walking record; R. P. Crabbe, S. Abrahams, F. M. Edwards, and A. R. Churchill, all of Cambridge University; Lieut. Halswell, English and Scottish quarter-mile champion; W. D. Anderson, Scottish half-mile champion; L. J. DeB. Reed, a good sprinter, and D. W. Walters of Cardiff are positive entrants.

"In a conversation with A. B. George, the great runner and brother to the famous W. G., he informed me that all the running events at the Olympic games, from the quarter-mile on, were at the mercy of the countrymen. He figured on Lieut. Halswell, Anderson, McGough, Churchill, and Crabbe to account for these events, despite what I told him of Sullivan's performance last Summer of 4:22 4-5, and Sheppard's more recent one of 4:22 1-5 on an indoor board track. He said Crabbe's performance of 4:21 1-5 on a none too hard track would beat both men.

"The President of Oxford University A. S. is quite a versatile athlete, as is shown by his performance on Feb. 20, when he won the 100 yards, the high jump, the weight, and the mile. The mile event he covered in 4:34 4-5, a very creditable performance, since he was never looked on as anything but a quarter and half miler.

"Polo players during the coming season will be subjected to one change in the Hurlingham rules, which deals with 'stick-crooking.' It is as follows:

"'No player shall crook an adversary's stick unless he is on the same side of an adversary's pony as the ball, or in a direct line behind, and his stick is neither over nor under the body nor across the legs of an adversary's pony. The stick may not be crooked unless an adversary is in the act of striking at the ball.'

"This rule is practically the same as that of the Indian Polo Association; indeed, the prohibition of stick crooking across a pony's legs—a cause of numerous accidents—or of crooking an adversary's stick at all except when he is in the act of striking at the ball, are both taken from the Indian code."

Columbia's Gymnasts Perform Well.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., March 17.—An enthusiastic crowd witnessed the triangular gymnastic exhibition between teams from Columbia, Yale, and Rutgers to-night in the Rutgers College gymnasium.

Fleissner of Columbia made the hit of the evening, eclipsing all other ring exhibitions by his Maltese cross swinging. Butler of Yale did the best work on the horizontal bars. Yale also had two high-class men in the vaulting horse events, Price and Mason. In club swinging Columbia was represented by Stewart, the all-around intercollegiate champion. With the exception of the rings, the best event was the exhibition on the parallel bars by Meltzer and Schoonmacher of Columbia.

ALL KINDS OF BOYS IN GARDEN'S BIG MEET

City Officials at Public Schools Athletic League Sports.

MAYOR "MINDS" A LAD'S TOGS

Athletes of Manhattan Schools Capture Nearly All of the Events—Large Crowd Present.

Boys representing nearly every civilized nationality under the sun gave the true cosmopolitan flavor to the great indoor athletic meeting of the Public Schools Athletic League in Madison Square Garden yesterday. The big tournament of relay races, for that was what it actually amounted to, held a crowd of 10,000 spectators excitedly interested for four hours. Japanese youths, those from Russia, France, Germany, Italy, England, and elsewhere jostled each other around the dirt track with the cheerful spirit of American democracy. While they were aflame with the fire of the contest the closely packed crowd in the arena, galleries, and every place where standing room afforded cheered continuously.

Keenly watching it all with no little show of amusement, tempered by the fact that he seemed to realize the sense of duty of his important office toward the homes that the gathering represented, was Mayor George B. McClellan. He sat in a box attended by William Willis, his secretary, through nearly the entire programme. He characterized the games as one of the most stupendous meetings of the kind that he had ever witnessed. So impressed was he that he pledged the unqualified support of the City Government, so far as he was concerned, and believed that the people of the city should do all that they could to encourage them.

City Superintendent of Schools W. H. Maxwell, President E. H. Winthrop, Jr., of the Board of Education; Health Commissioner Dr. Thomas Darlington, and other officials expressed the same thought. The 1,500 competing boys provided an impressive spectacle for them as they glowed with the enthusiasm of victory or quietly accepted defeat with a fine display of sportsmanlike conduct. Throughout the long programme there was not a discordant note despite the amazing mixture of races and creeds represented. The boys of Manhattan made almost a clean sweep in the various events.

One of the athletes, hotfoot to get in his race and seeing no place to put his bathrobe, noticed the smiling face of Mayor McClellan above him in the box. Not knowing, perhaps not even caring, who the pleasant-faced personage was, the boy threw the robe up to his Honor, with a hurried request to "mind it" until he had finished his competition. The Mayor laughed outright at this display of American independence. He agreed to look after the boy's property, taking it into the box with him.

The relay races, of which there were eight on the programme, resulted in spirited competitions. The little chaps of the midget teams came in for the loudest applause, which drowned out the tooting of the brass band. No one appeared to notice the band, anyway, and it was only the singing of the National anthem by a big chorus of Public School No. 24 that caught the attention of the vast assemblage, which respectfully hushed for the moment, with a fine show of patriotic respect.

A surprising feature at the close of the meet was the victory of No. 62, situated at Hester and Essex Streets, in the heart of the New York Ghetto, over the team of No. 24, 128th Street and Madison Avenue, in the flag relay race. Summary:

"POLY PREP" TAKES TROPHY.

Interscholastic Championship Goes to Brooklyn—Newark Academy Second.

An excellent delegation of athletes from a number of the leading preparatory schools in New York and the immediate vicinity met in competition yesterday afternoon at the Eighth Regiment Armory, Park Avenue and Ninety-fourth Street, to decide the indoor interscholastic championships. The school winning the largest number of points received the championship trophy, which developed a warm contest between the "Poly Prep." School, Pingry School, and the French Academy. The "Poly Prep." School lads won with a total of 32 points, Newark coming second, with 25, and Pingry close behind, with 23.

"Poly Prep.'s" triumph was due to a large number of second and third positions, for the school only secured one first, earned by C. A. Robbins in the pole vault. Summary:

60-Yard Dash, (Senior)—Won by West, Pingry School; Cryster, Manor School, second; Mackenzie, Mackenzie School, third. Time—0:07.

COLLEGE CREWS IN REGATTA.

Representative Entry Expected for American Association Races.

The annual regatta of the American Rowing Association, which will be held on May 26 on the Schuylkill River, Philadelphia, promises to be intercollegiate in character. Invitations have been sent to Yale, Cornell, Columbia, Syracuse, Pennsylvania, Harvard, and Georgetown. It is known that Pennsylvania, Harvard, and Georgetown will send crews, and it is expected that Yale, Columbia, and Syracuse will also be represented. Cornell has advised the Stewards that every effort will be made to send one or more crews. Last year the Ithacans were much in evidence and their junior eight established a record for the course.

This year Cornell will have her hands full during the week in question. On May 26, the same day as the American Rowing Association regatta, Cornell's 'Varsity eight will row against Harvard's 'Varsity eight at Cambridge. On May 30 Cornell will conduct a junior regatta at Ithaca, and her second crew will compete in it. Cornell is therefore undecided whether she will compete both at Philadelphia and at home. But as two other crews are expected to do this, it is hoped that Cornell will be seen at Philadelphia also. Harvard has been requested to send a second crew to Ithaca and Pennsylvania has agreed to do so. Both Harvard and Pennsylvania will row at Philadelphia on the Saturday preceding the Cornell regatta, so it is hoped that Cornell will also compete in both regattas.

The Stewards have been proceeding on the assumption that the college crews will once more welcome a big regatta to test their men. Heretofore, at least before the formation of the American Rowing Association, the collegians have been obliged to try out their crews in dual races, and thus have had no real test before their intercollegiate regattas. Little can be learned of a crew's possibilities by competing against a solitary rival. College oarsmen desire a real test and will probably be well represented at Philadelphia.

Every effort is being made to secure the entry of the Annapolis crews. The middies had arranged to row against the second crew of Yale on May 26. Yale is wanted at Philadelphia on that day, and as Julian W. Curtiss of Yale is also one of the Stewards he is expected to lend his influence.

Piries to Sell Tartan and Mavis.

The champion raceabout Tartan, which furnished the most interesting racing on Long Island Sound last year, when handled by Allen H. Pirie, is offered for sale, together with Gordon L. Pirie's raceabout Mavis, which is eligible for the twenty-two-foot class. The Piries are to leave Indian Harbor and to summer near Chicago, where they will devote their time to racing the Chicago racer in the Lipton Cup contest and the twenty-one-footer Quien Sabe, which they bought last year. The absence of these two men from the Sound removes two of the best amateur skippers in New York waters.

Yachts Building and Transferred.

F. K. Blanchard of New Rochelle has sold the auxiliary sloop Narda to Sidney Hegerton and Alfred Hamburg.

John P. Elton has sold the auxiliary yawl Pawnee to A. Winsor Weld.

C. W. Harkness of the New York Yacht Club is having built by Ramage & Ferguson at Leith, Scotland, a 210-foot steam yacht, which is to be delivered about July 1.

The Lipton Cup racer building for the Toledo Yacht Club is nearly finished at Manchester.

Four new challengers are building to race for the Pacific Lipton Cup, now held by the Detroit, which has twice won it.

J. M. Riggs is building a 65-foot twin screw steamer at Sheldon's yard. She is equipped with two 35 horse power engines.

Crowninshield is building two boats for the Chicago Athletic Club, an 18-footer and a Lipton Cup challenger.

Charles Quinn has delivered the new 15-footer to the Columbia Yacht Club.

McAllister Brothers have bought the steam yacht Wanda from G. Searing Wilson. The boat was used during the Spanish war as a dispatch boat.

W. T. Douglass has sold the sloop Carol to William J. Caen and the yawl Lady Eldridge to Ralph Goddard.

Robert C. Mitchell has bought the Herreshoff 30-footer Noto from Charles H. Taylor, and E. Q. Trowbridge has bought another, the Gamecock, from Louis Bacon. Both will race under the Sachem's Head Yacht Club colors.

Frank R. Neil has bought the Lawley built yawl Vidofour from McConnell Brothers. D. C. Roberts has bought the 40-footer Gorilla.

B. C. Conway has sold the auxiliary yawl Hulda to H. H. Swartwour of the Seawanhaka-Corinthian Yacht Club.

Clifford Mallory has sold the 30-footer Hanley, which raced in the New York Athletic Club's Block Island race last year, to Walter M. Beiling of Bayonne.

J. J. Feckler has bought Lawrence Jones's auxiliary schooner Attaquin.

Morgan Barney and C. D. Mower have begun work on the Chicago Athletic Club's 21-footer which is to race for the Lipton Cup on the lakes.

Yachts and Yachtsmen.

Eight yachts have entered for the New Rochelle Yacht Club's ocean race for the Brooklyn Cup.

Edward R. Coleman's schooner Hildegarde, a contestant in the transatlantic race for the Kaiser's Cup, is reported for sale.

John F. Harris states that he will not place the schooner Chanticleer in commission, neither the old cup defender Volunteer, another expected contestant for the King's Cup.

The Penataquit Corinthian Yacht Club is to make extensive improvements at its Bay Shore Club house at a cost of $15,000.

The Old Mill Yacht Club of Port Chester, N. Y., has elected R. J. Dillon as Commodore, E. S. Church as Vice Commodore, R. L. Berriam as Rear Commodore, R. J. Warren as Secretary, J. Hermon Lyon as Treasurer, and seven Trustees—the Commodore, Secretary, and Treasurer, and William Sayre, D. C. Gibson, F. L. Downing, and Fred Manning.

The Newport Yacht Club is to build a Summer home on Dyer's Island.

ALCOHOL FOR AUTOS MAY DISPLACE GASOLINE

Motor Car Owners Awaiting Coming Tests with Great Interest.

A. C. A. WILL HOLD CONTEST

Recent Increase in Price of Gasoline Will Stimulate Experiments for Substitute Fuel.

Automobilists are awaiting with considerable interest the announcement from the Board of Governors of the Automobile Club of America of the plan and conditions for the various tests which the club proposes to hold this year. George F. Chamberlin, who was appointed by President Dave Hennen Morris as Chairman of the committee to draw up suggestions for serviceable tests, has presented his report to the Governors.

Chief interest in these forthcoming tests is being centred just at present in the alcohol motor problem. Experiments in the direction of using alcohol for motor fuel have been made by several investigators, but they have not yet attained any great measure of success in this country for automobile use. With the increased price of gasoline, attention has been directed afresh to the possibilities of alcohol for a serviceable and cheaper fuel.

The wholesale price for the best gasoline, that which is required for automobile use, is now quoted at 14½ cents a gallon, and deodorized stove gasoline is 12½ cents a gallon. The man who buys only in small quantities pays nearly 20 cents, however, for his gasoline. This increase in the price of gasoline is not confined to this country. It has been noted by motorists in England with considerable anxiety. Retail purchasers there claim that they now pay 4 cents a gallon more than was the case a few months ago. As here, alcohol is being looked to as the substitute which may free the automobilists from the expense of using gasoline.

President Morris has put himself on record as favoring a very thorough and serious test of alcohol motors. To make these tests of the highest efficiency the club proposes to offer prizes sufficiently attractive to manufacturers and inventors to stimulate their best efforts. No serious attempt has ever been made in this country to show a large number of motor users just what can be accomplished by the use of alcohol as fuel. One great drawback has been the high internal revenue tax which has made no discrimination between the highest grades of alcohol and the lower or denatured grades. A bill is now before Congress to remove the tax from grain alcohol used for industrial purposes, and although little public attention has been paid to it, the progress of the bill has been watched with care by autoists and farmers alike. It has been stated that in the far West, the farmers use more gasoline for their cooking stoves than all the automobiles in the country. With the possibility of purchasing denatured alcohol at from 12 to 15 cents a gallon, the farmers would secure just as good results and at a cheaper rate.

The Germans have taken the lead in experimenting with denatured alcohol for motor purposes. The first attempts were not successful, the difficulty being to get the alcohol in a sufficient state of vaporization. What was then regarded as a drawback, turned out to be an advantage, for in consequence of the difficulty in igniting the air mixture it could be compressed to a greater extent in the motors, using up much more heat than was possible with gasoline motors. With the alcohol engine, less heat is radiated from the cylinder than in the gasoline engine. This is a distinct advantage but difficulty has been experienced thus far in starting the engine, more time being needed to get the car running.

Experiments are now being made by several automobile manufacturers with alcohol motors and some interesting results are expected to be brought out in the coming tests. The Automobile Club will not confine its experimental contests to alcohol uses, but a number of other tests will be arranged in the direction of producing greater efficiency in different mechanical directions.

Pres't Angell Against College Football.

CHICAGO, March 17.—President James Burrill Angell of the University of Michigan last night explained in detail his ideas concerning the evils of football. He spoke on the subject at the annual banquet of the Chicago Association of Michigan Alumni.

Football in the high schools all over the country, President Angell said, should be abolished. On the other hand, he prophesied a new life for the game in the universities as a result of the recent reforms attained by representatives of the Western conference institutions.

International College Chess Match.

The international college chess match between Pennsylvania, Brown, and Cornell and Oxford and Cambridge will be played by cable next Saturday. The Triangular League suggested to the English universities adjudication by the referee of such games as should remain unfinished, if in the opinion of the referee the positions have reached legitimate ending.

Power Boat Paragraphs.

John Redfield of this city is having a 56-foot cruiser, with 40 horse power, built at Swasey, Raymond & Co.'s, which is expected to make 14 knots. Charles Mallory has also ordered a 60-footer, with 50 horse power equipment.

Frederick B. Morse has bought Arthur S. Gray's 60-foot cruising launch.

MacConnell Brothers have sold the 40-foot motor boat Hope to Dr. H. P. Beck, and the Tidly Adly to F. H. Chubuck.

Small Brothers are building a 30 horse power hunting cabin launch for W. C. Bryant, 50 feet over all; a 28-foot launch for James P. Leighton, and a whaleboat cruiser, 38 feet over all, for A. H. Gilman.

Eben Stevens is building a 40-foot Craig hunting cabin launch to race in the Knickerbocker's long-distance race from Marblehead to College Point. T. S. Young is having a similar boat built, 48 feet over all.

A 55-foot motor yacht, equipped with a 60 horse power Speedway, is building for C. B. MacKinney at Morris Heights.

John R. Hegeman, Jr., is having built at New London a whaleboat motor launch, to be equipped with a 15 horse power Lathrop tandem motor.

Walter Ferguson has challenged through the Motor Boat Club of America for the Inter-State Championship Trophy on behalf of his White Fox.

Frank A. Egan of the Atlantic Yacht Club has purchased a 50-foot launch.

ROUGH WORK IN BASKET BALL

School Lads Resort to Fisticuffs and Are Put Out of the Game.

Swallow, who plays as one of the forwards on the Boys' High School Basket Ball team, and Oakes, one of the guards on the Pratt Institute team, furnished considerable excitement for the spectators who witnessed the basket ball game between those two teams at the Pratt Institute gymnasium last night. After some rough play the two contestants resorted to fisticuffs, and several friends of the boys rushed out on the floor and took part in the contest. Referee Lochmuller and a special officer of the institute finally quieted the fracas and the game was resumed. Referee Lochmuller ordered both players from the floor, and it looked as if the game would be stopped, as the Boys' High School had only four players to finish the game. The Pratt team's Captain agreed to play four on a side, which made the game very slow. The Pratt team won by a score of 40 to 16. Klein and Mills, the forwards on Pratt's team, scored 28 points. Crosby, Captain of Boys' High School team, did not take part in the first half, but went in the second period, Hennessy retiring.

The game opened with Tuttle shooting a basket in less than two minutes, and was followed by Mills, Klein, and Oakes shooting baskets at will. Ritschy did all the scoring for Boys' High. At the end of the first half the score was 17 to 6 in favor of Pratt. The Pratt players made most of their points in the second half, Klein making five from the field, Mills four from the field and one from the foul line, and Oakes and Tuttle one each. The preliminary game between the Long Island City Hospital freshmen and the class of applied electricity, 1906, was won by the latter by a score of 38 to 9. The line-up:

Pratt, 40.	Position.	Boys' High, 16.
Mills	Forward	O'Connell
Klein	Forward	Swallow
Tuttle	Centre	Moorehead
Oakes	Guard	Hennessey, Crosby
Hall, Wise	Guards	Ritschy

Goals from field—Mills, (7,) Tuttle, (4,) Klein, (6,) Oakes, (2,) Ritschy, (4,) Crosby, (2.) Goals from fouls—Mills, (2,) Crosby, (2.) Referee—Mr. Lochmuller, Amateur Athletic Union.

BASKET BALL CHAMPIONSHIP.

First Two Games in Series of Protective Association Tournament.

The first two games scheduled in the tournament for the championship of the Protective Basket Ball Association of the Eastern States were decided last evening at the People's Palace, Bergen Avenue and Forest Street, Jersey City. In the first game the Franklins of Westchester played a fast and exciting game against the Cedars of Flushing, barely beating them by the score of 12 points to 11. The second game was also fast, but at times rough, resulting in many foul plays on both sides. The Atlantic five of Rockaway Beach defeated the Xenia Athletic Association team of Hoboken by the score of 14 points to 11. The line-up:

FIRST GAME.

Cedars, 11.	Position.	Franklin, 12.
W. Talbot	Right forward	G. Von Bommel
A. Lawrence	Left forward	C. Bible
P. Talbot	Centre	C. Ryer
P. Kennedy	Left guard	B. Sutjer
R. Lawrence	Right guard	G. Sutler

Goals on fouls—P. Talbot, C. Bible, B. Sutler. Goals from field—W. Talbot, (2,) Von Bommel, (4,) C. Bible, P. Talbot, (2,) A. Lawrence. Umpire—W. A. Stillman, Seneca Athletic Association. Referee—Thomas H. Smith, Protective Basket Ball Athletic Club. Time of halves—Twenty minutes.

Atlantic A. A., 14.	Position.	Xenia A. A., 11.
G. Schappert	Right forward	W. Hicks
W. Welderman	Left forward	G. Nelson
C. Frey	Centre	J. Gerity
W. Ward	Left guard	P. Stephens
G. Thorpe (A. Tuttle)	Right guard	C. Mullens

Goals from field—Schappert, (2,) Hicks, (2,) Gerity, Stephens, Weiderman, Frey, Tuttle. Goals from fouls—Gerity, (3,) Weiderman, (4.) Referee—W. Walsh, Institute Athletic Club of Newark. Umpire—Thomas H. Smith.

March Wind Handicaps Shooters.

The cold March wind of yesterday was a handicap to the Crescent Athletic Club shooters, and poor scores were the result. Frank B. Stephenson carried off the honors of the day with a percentage of 84¾, while his brother George followed with 82½ per cent. F. B. Stephenson led for the March Cup with a score of 23 out of 25 targets, and Dr. F. C. Rayner was first for the State Trophy with a score of 25, with 5 targets as a handicap. For the Team Trophy F. T. Bedford, Jr., and G. G. Stephenson had the highest score. The fifteen Target Trophy shoots were well distributed, the winners being F. B. Stephenson, 3; G. G. Stephenson, 2; L. M. Palmer, Jr., 2, and Theodore W. Stake and Lewis C. Hopkins, 1 each.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

In order to facilitate the distribution of touring information among the members of the Automobile Club of America, a clerk has just been appointed to the Runs and Tours Committee of the club and he will devote his entire time to the preparation of information concerning routes, hotels, repair stations, freight rates, licenses, registrations, customs duties, and other necessary data that may assist tourists both in this country and abroad. Members of the club can secure this information on application or may have tours made up for them through special districts or countries where they may desire to travel.

The Chairmen of the new American Automobile Association committees have submitted the names of the members selected for their committees to President John Farson in Chicago, and the latter will make public announcement of the complete committees early this week. Meetings of the Racing Board and the Touring Committee will be held in a short time.

The Cadillac Motor Company has moved into its new building, at Broadway and Sixty-second Street. The building has been especially constructed for motor uses. There are four floors besides the basement, and a complete variety of all the Cadillac cars will be kept. A garage has been fitted up for a number of Cadillac cars and a fully equipped repair shop has been installed.

Reports brought to the city from automobilists who were among the exhibitors and visitors to the Boston show last week are to the effect that it was far more successful in every way than had been expected. Automobiling throughout New England has never attracted the attention of so many persons, and many owners professed a willingness to enter the Glidden Cup tour if a portion of the route takes in New England.

Eddie Bald, who is now selling Columbia cars in the West, believes that the sporting side of automobiling this season will develop a number of hill-climbing contests and track racing with cars of regular touring and runabout types. He does not think that high-powered racing cars will be seen in many track competitions.

The Association of Licensed Automobile Manufacturers has admitted the Lozier Motor Company of New York to membership and granted a license to manufacture gasoline automobiles under the Selden basic patent. The Lozier Company has paid back royalties and an initiation fee of $2,500. This addition to the membership of the A. L. A. M. brings the total up to thirty-eight concerns which are affiliated and paying royalties under license of the Selden patent.

Now that another race over an American course for the Vanderbilt Cup is assured, several American manufacturers who have hitherto been unrepresented in any international contest have expressed a determination to construct cars to compete in the event. The comparative success of an American car in the Vanderbilt race last year caused the European makers to realize that the American car would soon have to be reckoned with.

A number of automobile makers have experimented lately with solid tires for light vehicles intended strictly for town service, and the results have met with a certain measure of success.

Among the events arranged by the Atlantic City Automobile Club for the beach races there on April 26, 27, and 28, are races for gasoline cars of various weights and for steam cars, a race for touring cars of forty horse power or less for amateurs, and four touring car contests under price classification from $1,500 to $4,000. There will be a price handicap for four-cylinder touring cars and also one for two-cylinder cars. In addition there is scheduled a handicap for cars that do better than a mile a minute, a race for air-cooled cars, and one for machines of six cylinders.

E. R. Thomas, the Buffalo manufacturer, who is fighting the California auto tax law, says in regard to his recent experience in Los Angeles: "Apparently while the civic bodies and the railroads are doing their best to bring tourists to Southern California and keep them from going to Florida and Cuba, the city authorities are working to drive them away. It costs $150 to ship an automobile out there, and the extra assessment comes as a decided surprise."

FAVORITES WON DERBIES AT NEW ORLEANS TRACKS

MARTIN PILOTS THE WINNER

Minnie Adams, with Nicol in the Saddle, Captured City Park Prize with Ease.

NEW ORLEANS, March 17.—Guiding Star to-day led his field home in the Crescent City Derby. The race was worth $7,290 to the winner. Of the eight elected to start, Guiding Star opened favorite at 2 to 1, with Ellison's pair, Lady Navarre and James Reddick, second choice at 5 to 2. Lotus Eater and Ben Hodder were at 4 to 1, and the others at longer odds. At the close Lotus Eater had been backed down to 13 to 5 and was favorite. Guiding Star, at the same odds, was a strong second choice, while the Ellison pair had gone back to 9 to 2.

Redfern sent Ben Hodder out to make the pace, and opened up a gap of two lengths in the first quarter. Martin handled Guiding Star with skill, keeping at all times within striking distance, and the moment Ben Hodder showed signs of tiring sent his mount to the front and won by half a length. Lady Navarre was driven to the limit to beat Lotus Eater for the place. The attendance was large, the weather clear, and the track fast. Frank Lord was the only winning favorite. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Six furlongs. Tom Mankins, 115 pounds, (W. McGee,) 6 to 1, won; Arabo, 115, (W. Robbins,) 10 to 1, second; Fenian, 112, (D. Vittatoe,) 8 to 1, third. Time—1:15. Triple Silver, Sanctome, Still Hunt, Whorler, Felix Mozzes, Electric Spark, Il Dottore, Invincible, and Elastic also ran.

SECOND RACE.—Four and one-half furlongs. Frank Lord, 113 pounds, (W. Robbins,) 13 to 10, won; Colloquy, 103, (Ibert,) 5 to 2, second; Lucy Marie, 103, (Sewell,) 8 to 1, third. Time—0:55. Friction, Our Own, Al Powell, Glad Pirate, and Sam Barber also ran.

THIRD RACE.—One mile and twenty yards; handicap. St. Valentine, 114 pounds, (J. Martin,) 2 to 1, won; Blennenworth, 96, (W. McGee,) 8 to 1, second; Goldsmith, 111, (L. Smith,) 11 to 5, third. Time—1:42 2-5. Logistilla and Little Scout also ran.

FOURTH RACE.—One mile and seventy yards. Besterling, 106 pounds, (Moreland,) 13 to 1, won; Celebration, 111, (Feicht,) 10 to 1, second; Louise Macfarlan, 110, (Perrine,) 10 to 1, third. Time—1:47. Rolla, Avoid, Consuelo II., and Capt. Bob also ran.

FIFTH RACE.—The Crescent City Derby; one mile and an eighth. Guiding Star, 116 pounds, (J. Martin,) 13 to 5, won; Lady Navarre, 111, (Sewell,) 9 to 2, second; Lotus Eater, 116, (Lyne,) 13 to 5, third. Time—1:54 2-5. Ben Hodder, James Reddick, Disobedient, Hollowmas, and Macy, Jr., also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Six furlongs, Southern Cross, 123 pounds, (L. Smith,) 8 to 5, won; Rapid Water, 130, (J. Martin, 9 to 10, second; First Premium, 108, (Bedell,) 6 to 1, third. Time—1:13 3-5. Columbia Girl and Whippoorwill also ran.

SEVENTH RACE.—One mile and seventy yards. Prince Salm Salm, 105 pounds, (P. A. Wash,) 20 to 1, won; Fred Hornbeck, 105, (Bedell,) 8 to 1, second; Lemon Girl, 103, (Noone,) 8 to 1, third. Time—1:47 2-5. Gleeman, Brilliant, Trogan, Beechwood, Pirates, Dance, Jungle Imp, Imboden, and Ed Early also ran.

Fred Cook's filly, Minnie Adams, fairly smothered her field for speed in the City Park Derby to-day. Nicol sent her to the front at once, and she set her rivals a killing pace. She never was reached, and won easily by a length from Kercheval, which was second all the way. It was almost a two-horse race. In the betting Minnie Adams was always favorite at 5 to 2, with Joseph second choice at 5 to 1. Kercheval had some backing at 10 to 1. Kargut, St. Joseph, and Debar all suffered from crowding and interference; insufficient, however, to affect the result. The Derby was worth $6,450 to the winner. Odd Trick, Bradley's Pet, and Emergency were the other winning favorites. The attendance was very large. The weather was fine and track good. Summary:

FIRST RACE.—Three and a half furlongs. Odd Trick, 112 pounds, (Nicol,) 9 to 10, won; King Leopold, 115, (Koerner,) 8 to 1, second; Beau Brummel, 111, (D. Hall,) 5 to 1, third. Time—0:42 2-5. Bluedale, Doubt, Irene A., and Mary Candlemas also ran. Sam Cook was left at the post.

SECOND RACE.—Two miles. Bradley's Pet, 101 pounds, (McIntyre,) 6 to 5, won; Eclectic, 109, (Nicol,) 3 to 1, second; Hymettus, 108, (J. Hennessy,) 20 to 1, third. Time—3:34 2-5. Honda, Little Elkin, and Piller also ran.

THIRD RACE.—Steeplechase; full course. Ohio King, 146 pounds, (S. McClain,) 12 to 1, won; Blue Mint, 129, (McClure,) 9 to 2, second; Gould, 150, (Pemberton,) 9 to 2, third. Time—4:00 2-5. Bluegrass Girl and Evander also ran. Sweet Jane pulled up, and John E. Owens fell.

FOURTH RACE.—One mile. Monochord, 105 pounds, (Swain,) 8 to 1, won; Iole, 103, (Romanelli,) 4 to 1, second; Fonsoluca, 107, (Oregar,) 5 to 2, third. Time—1:40 3-5. Asclepias, Gravina, Labor, The Trifler, Lieut. Rice, Brushton, and Lady Consuelo also ran. La Cache bled and was pulled up.

FIFTH RACE.—The City Park Derby; one mile and a quarter. Minnie Adams, 117 pounds, (Nicol,) 5 to 2, won; Kercheval, 122, (W. Allen, 8 to 1, second; Orbicular, 122, (E. Morrison,) 12 to 1, third. Time—2:06 2-5. Jack Dolan, Debar, Tambeau, Tarp, St. Joseph, Monterey, and Kargut also ran.

SIXTH RACE.—Seven furlongs. Capitano, 110 pounds, (Nicol,) 5 to 1, won; Percy Clark, 108, (Austin,) 6 to 1, second; Marco, 103, (C. Morris,) 15 to 1, third. Time—1:27 3-5. Loch Goil, Arthur Cummer, Anne Davis, Red Ruler, Vivat, Pretorius, Ernest Parham, Lineal, and Gaimeda also ran.

SEVENTH RACE.—Six furlongs, handicap. Emergency, 126 pounds, (B. Smith,) even, won; Meadow Breeze, 107, (C. Morris,) 5 to 1, second; Airship, 108, (Nicol,) 7 to 2, third. Time—1:14. Pat Bulger and Cascine also ran.

New York University to Play Trinity.

Manager Robertson of the New York University baseball team has announced the arrangement of a baseball game with Trinity College in the course of its regular schedule, and takes occasion to deny the reported severance of athletic relations between New York and Trinity, which was heralded last Fall after the football game between the two institutions.

WEST POINT FENCERS LEAD.

Harvard Second and Annapolis Third in Intercollegiate Meet.

West Point's team of foilsmen won the thirteenth annual championship of the Intercollegiate Fencing Association last night, while two of the Military Academy cadets, Capt. Forrest E. Williford and O. A. Dickinson, tied for the individual honors. The bouts were held in the gymnasium of the New York Athletic Club, and were attended by a fashionable gathering. Harvard University finished second to West Point, while the Naval Academy, Annapolis, was third.

In the point scoring West Point won 31 bouts with 11 defeats; Harvard won 28 bouts and lost 19, while Annapolis won 22 and lost 20.

The final chapter in the careless management of the championship occurred when Williford and Dickinson were ordered out to fence off for the individual trophy by Dr. Graeme M. Hammond. Although it had been known to the scorers for some time previous that the two cadets had tied, they had been allowed to don their ordinary attire. Dr. Hammond, as referee, was much chagrined, but consented to allow the cadets to fence their bout for the individual championship at their convenience. Lack of anything like systematic supervision was noticeable throughout the meeting, and there was considerable disappointment expressed by the contestants.

Heckheimer, Captain of the Cornell team, fresh from his triumph of the much-disputed bout which the judges were unable to decide upon after more than an hour's wrangling at 1 A. M. yesterday, was first out in the evening finals. He was smarting under the injustice of being forced to repeat his bouts, and he made short work of Frederico Lage of Columbia and the champion of last year. The failure of the judges to render proper decisions, despite their being graduate fencers, led to several acrimonious squabbles, which were straightened out before the evening bout, after a most unsatisfactory ending to the championship series had been threatened.

The spectators were more interested and evinced enthusiasm over the fencing of the dapper West Pointers and the sturdy Annapolis Middies. Dickinson was the first to score for the West Pointers, and the followers of the Army became jubilant as he scored over Burdick of Annapolis. But Brandt of the naval team turned matters about when he signally defeated Capt. Williford of West Point. Brandt possessed a long reach and a sure, adroit lunge. By all the skill at their command the naval cadets endeavored to overcome the lead that the West Pointers had established in the preliminary bouts. Brandt, who was actually a substitute for Capt. G. C. Dickman of Annapolis, who was taken ill, worked like a Trojan. He scored cleanly, and in rapid succession won from Heckheimer of Cornell, Humphreys of West Point, and Kehrlein, Captain of the Columbia team.

Capt. F. E. Williford and O. A. Dickinson of West Point finished their bouts somewhat early in the evening. Both tied for the individual championship with twelve victories and two defeats. The former's best work was his meeting with Heckheimer of Cornell, while the latter displayed his greatest flash of brilliancy during the bout in which he overcame Kehrlein of Columbia.

Seven universities were represented in the championship this year, Pennsylvania and Princeton being eliminated during the preliminary bouts. Pennsylvania tied with Harvard, but the latter won by five wins to three in the fence-off during the afternoon.

FOOTBALL FORMATIONS UNDER NEW RULES CODE

Entirely Novel Systems to be Developed for the Game.

DEFENSE BOTHERING COACHES

Two Men to Play in Backfield at All Times, Three for Kicks—Centre Behind the Line.

The tendency of a number of the smaller colleges throughout the country, and some of the larger as well, to regard the work of the National Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee as completed and to adopt without waiting for its final meetings the code as it has already been tentatively passed as the governing rules of the game for next Fall, rather forces the hand of the legislators. There will be in consequence probably no further alterations made except such as are necessary properly to phrase the rules.

There is a disposition on the part of all to regard the forwards, which have lately come to be looked upon as the most important factors in the game, as of greatly lessened importance. Said one expert the other day: "The winning teams next year will be those having the best quarter backs and kickers." This conclusion is evidently based on the expectation that forward passes and kicking are going to be especially prominent in the play, and certainly it seems as though the kicker who can place his punts to advantage and get either good distance or high kicks, according to the placing of the opposing backfield, will be in great demand, while the unerring passer of the ball and the safe catcher will be at a premium everywhere.

Certainly there is no chance at all for a continuance of systems of play based on guards and tackles back. Line plunging as a steady practice is a thing of the past. That line plunging will not be used at all is an absurd conclusion. It will always be the safest play when short distances are to be gained, but to gain ten yards by such practice in three downs is impossible when teams are evenly matched.

The quick starting, fast running backs that can skirt the ends or cross buck into the flanks of the line will be at a tremendous premium, and probably the most effective formation for this style of play will be the straight three-man back formation. If the opposing defense can be compelled to withdraw three men into the backfield, leaving only eight in the line to oppose these attacks, there is no reason why those slanting runs into and outside of tackle should not be very effective.

The formation for attack will certainly vary considerably, probably by reason of the large introduction of trick plays of various characters. Fakes from kick formations are sure to be popular, since every time a man drops back for a kick the defending side will have to have its backfield well covered. Plunges straight through the forward line, long forward passes to the ends, and wide, circling runs by the first man to receive the ball are very likely to be successful from such a formation, with the two elements of surprise and the weakened defense to favor them. With the forward pass there can be little effort afforded to blocking kicks, which will again facilitate the success of fake and trick combinations.

The defensive formation is the one that is attracting most attention. First of all the prohibition of more than six men in the forward line has to be met. The best way to meet this requirement appears to be not to withdraw the ends for the reason that plays are most likely to come their way. There will be more attention paid to end defense, in other words, than ever before, and the flanks will have to be strengthened at the sacrifice of the line defense. This can be best done by withdrawing the centre two yards behind the line, allowing the flanks to remain unchanged. Probably the two half backs will play close behind and between the ends and tackles and the quarter back and full back be withdrawn at various distances in the backfield, to meet kicks and forward passes ahead of the line.

The provision that a kick which strikes the ground before being touched by the defending side is a free ball, and may be secured by any player on either side compels the defense to play kicks absolutely safe. It will not do to allow one man to play back on the chance that he can reach and catch the ball. If it go over his head it will roll toward his own goal, and any man who can outfoot him can secure it. He must play back and another man play at an intermediate distance to handle short kicks for the same reason. When the kick formation is assumed it is probable that a third man will go back.

To the strategist the possibilities of such a condition in the introduction of fakes and trick plays are great, and the result is likely to be an ever shifting variety in attack, with swift moving, quickly changing action that will increase the interest in the game immeasurably. There is no limit apparently to the novelties which the genius of the born tactician can introduce. Certainly the season will carry a burden of interest at the start that will surpass that of any other season in the history of the game.

GOLF AT PINEHURST.

J. D. Foot of Apawamis Won Final of Spring Tournament.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 17.—The thirty-six-hole final rounds of the second annual Spring golf tournament were played to-day under perfect conditions.

The match of the day was between J. D. Foot of Apawamis and C. L. Becker of Woodland, Foot winning on the seventeenth hole, 3 up and 1 to play.

L. D. Pierce of Woodland took the first division consolation, defeating Allan Lard of Columbia by the liberal margin of 9 and 8, doing a seventy-six on the morning round and going out in thirty-six in the afternoon.

J. D. Climo of the Euclid Club, Cleveland, took the second division, and H. M. Redpath of the Royal Club, Montreal, the consolation, and E. M. Barnes of Englewood took the third, and Frank Presbrey of Garden City the consolation of that division; G. W. Daw of the Island Club, Troy, took the fourth, and M. B. Johnson of Euclid the consolation.

The women's match play handicap, begun early in the week, ended to-day, Miss Almira P. McNeely of Philadelphia, scratch, winning the first division final from Miss Florence Condon, also of Philadelphia, who had an allowance of five strokes, 1 up, on the home green. It was a pretty contest throughout, the score being even from the turn to the home green, Miss McNeely winning this hole and the match. The medal play scores were 98 and 98.

The second and semi-final rounds were characterized by excellent golf and some surprises, two of the scratch players—Miss Mary C. Dutton of the Oakley Club, the winner of last year's United North and South championship, and Mrs. Myra D. Patterson of Englewood, who held the title until defeated by Miss Dutton—being disposed of.

Mrs. N. G. Marvin, New London, N. H., (15,) won the first division consolation from Miss Ethel Check, East Orange, (5,) 2 up and 1 to play, and Mrs. G. H. Converse, Boston, (3,) the second division, defeating Mrs. H. S. Denny, Pittsburg, (1,) 2 up and 1 to play.

HOCKEY VICTORY FOR YALE.

New Haven Freshmen Overpower Columbia, Winning by 5 Goals to 1.

Yale's freshmen overpowered the Columbia freshmen at hockey last evening at the St. Nicholas Rink, the New Haven team scoring 5 goals to 1 for the Morningside representatives. The visitors quickly showed their superiority, their team work being excellent. Rayborg, in the first half, scored the only goal for Columbia. The line-up:

Yale, 5.	Position.	Columbia, 1.
Trudeau	Goal	Willis
Partridge	Point	Taylor
Murray	Cover point	Bechardt
Williams	Forward	Bartow
Howard	Forward	Kessler
Olmstead	Forward	Rayborg
Driscoll	Forward	McKenzie

Goals—Driscoll, Howard, Olmstead, Williams, (2) Rayborg. Referee—Bert White, New York Athletic Club. Goal umpires—E. McDonald, Nathan Hale School; R. Nathan, Berkeley School.

SHAMROCKS FOR THE GIANTS.

Baseball Champions Have Lively Exercise on St. Patrick's Day.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was an eventful one for the Giants. They enjoyed out-of-door recreation on the ball field for two and a half hours, and Assistant Chief of the Fire Department Donahue presented a shamrock, sent from Ireland, to each member. The souvenirs were pinned on their breasts and the liveliest time of the training season was witnessed. No line-up was attempted. The squads stopping at different hotels were to have furnished the fun, but the clash was abandoned.

To-morrow Manager McGraw will ask his players to exercise for the first time on any Sabbath spent here. The idleness caused by recent rains has caused a feeling of uneasiness upon the part of the Giants' manager, because it is feared that not enough time can be put in between now and the real championship season to get in good condition.

Mathewson may report on Monday for practice work. His condition has improved so much that if the weather remains clear the big fellow will don a uniform for the first time in ten days.

The first sale was announced to-day, Archie Graham being sold to the Memphis team. In the event of any of the regulars becoming ill or showing symptoms of degenerating in a baseball way McGraw intended to hold on to Graham. The deal was consummated with the understanding that Graham can report to the Giants during the season should the hospital list occasion such an emergency call.

Other weeding out plans will probably be made by McGraw during the next few days, as twenty-odd players cannot be carried very long before the season begins.

AMERICANS WON FIRST GAME.

Bat and Field Well and Defeat Birmingham by 6 to 2.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 17.—The Greater New Yorks played a good game against the Birmingham team to-day in the face of damp grounds and chilly weather. The players and the crowd of 1,200 warmed up soon after the start, and the play was fast with enthusiastic applause, most of which was accorded to La Porte, who played third base. Every time he came to the bat he was vociferously cheered, and when he made his long drive to deep right for three bases the demonstration became an ovation. Newton, Keefe, and Leroy pitched well, with the latter two a trifle wild. Birmingham's runs were made by Keefe's lack of control.

Leroy did all right with the wet ball, over which he seemed to have excellent control. Conroy showed up like a veteran in centre field. His batting was hard and he deserved better success in landing the sphere in the proper place than he had. Hahn led the batsmen with three clean drives. As Birmingham put up an excellent game the victory of the New Yorks was all the more to their credit. The score:

EASTERN LEAGUE BASEBALL.

Season Begins on Thursday, April 26, and Closes on Sept. 23.

The schedule of the Eastern League of Professional Baseball Clubs, of which the Providence Club is champion, calls for the opening of the season on Thursday, April 26, and the closing on Sunday, Sept. 23, in all 140 games for each club. No Sunday games will be played at Jersey City, but fourteen have been scheduled for Newark on that day. Jersey City and Newark will divide Decoration and Independence Days between them, Jersey City playing at home in the morning of May 30 and at Newark in the afternoon. On July 4 the Newarks play at home with the Jersey Citys in the morning and the two teams play at Jersey City in the afternoon. On Sept. 3, Labor Day, Jersey City plays two games at Baltimore and Newark meets the Providence team twice. The principal holiday among the Canadian clubs, the Queen's Birthday, May 24, has been allotted to the two New Jersey clubs. Jersey City plays two games in Toronto and Newark will meet Montreal twice.

In the distribution of Saturdays Jersey City has been scheduled for eleven games at home and nine abroad. Newark has thirteen at home and ten abroad.

Indoor Baseball for Advertising Men.

After the annual dinner of the Newspaper Advertising Men at the Café de Ambassadeurs next Wednesday night a novel departure will be introduced. An indoor baseball game between two teams representing the New York and the out-of-town papers will take place in a nearby armory. A spectacular and highly interesting encounter is expected. It is understood the Wall Street team expects to challenge the winner.

Another Victory for Columbia Bowlers.

Columbia's bowlers took three straight games from the Lafayette five last night at the Riverside alleys in West 126th Street. Until the match with Columbia the Lafayette team was the dark horse in the Intercollegiate League, but the Blue and White combination had no trouble with it from the start, and won out easily. M. C. Ansorge of Columbia was in fine trim, being high man in all three games with a score of 199, 208, and 211.

FIRST GAME.

Lafayette—W. W. Shuster, 149; A. S. Kirkpatrick, 160; D. W. Snyder, 144; H. A. Schmidt, 125; R. S. Walters, 174. Total—752.

Horses Train Under Cover.

At Gravesend yesterday morning the track was frozen and as a consequence much of the work of the trainers had to be confined to shed work. Fred Burlew had the Bennington horses out in three sets, but they did not leave the shelter of the sheds. Tom Welsh was also content to give his lot shelter exercise, while most of the others did little or nothing, preferring to wait for a change in the track condition.

Father Bill Daly has promised to give his Benning Handicap candidates, Veronese and Warning, their final tryout for the race to-day, and he will ship to Washington Tuesday.

Jim McLaughlin shipped his big string yesterday. The only ones left behind were Oxford and three of the two-year-olds that are not intended for as early a start.

George Barbee will leave Tuesday with his pair. John F. Ahern and a maiden three-year-old that has been going along exceedingly well and is one that should make good early.

OARSMEN ARE BARRED, OTHERS INVESTIGATED

National Association Takes Radical Action to Keep Sport Clean.

WORCESTER GETS REGATTA

Mulcahy and Varley Disciplined for the Affair at Hamburg—Vesper Henley Crew Charges.

The Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, at the annual mid-winter meeting held last night at the New York Athletic Club house, took a pronounced stand in favor of purity in amateur sports. In a session which lasted less than two hours J. J. F. Mulcahy and William Varley of the Atalanta Boat Club of this city were indefinitely suspended; W. E. Cody of the Harlem Rowing Club, and one of the oldest oarsmen on the Harlem River, was disqualified as an amateur for accepting pay for coaching a crew, and a rigid examination was ordered into the charges against the Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia, Henley crew, and the members of the Ways and Means Committee for failing to satisfactorily account for funds contributed for the trip to England last Summer.

The drastic action of the National Association was intended as an object lesson to the amateur rowing element of the United States, and President Pilkington, in an earnest address, pleaded for clean sport, with the alternative of prompt and effectual remedy by the Executive Committee to enforce it. His remarks were indorsed by the members of the committee and were heartily applauded by a big crowd of amateur oarsmen who were in attendance.

The members of the Executive Committee present were President James Pilkington, New York; Vice President John J. Schaab, St. Louis; Treasurer Charles W. Preisendanz, Philadelphia; Secretary Fred R. Fortmeyer, New York; Claude R. Zappone, Washington; James P. Fox, Boston; Divie B. Duffield, Detroit; Henry Whiting Garfield, Albany, N. Y.; Judge James G. Tighe, Brooklyn; Robert J. Milligan, Philadelphia; John O. Regan, New York.

After the adoption of the minutes of the previous meetings, President Pilkington invited bids for the National regatta, for which Worcester, Detroit, and Saratoga filed applications.

In the selection of a location for the regatta, George A. Farnham, in a short speech presented the claims of Saratoga. Patrick H. Hurley of the Worcester Boat Club followed with an eloquent plea to hold the annual event on Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester. Divie B. Duffield appeared for Detroit, and advocated a recognition of the West. An informal ballot was taken, which resulted as follows: Worcester, 5; Saratoga and Detroit, 3 each. As there was no majority a formal ballot followed, which gave Worcester 6 votes, Saratoga 3, and Detroit 2.

On the motion of Divie B. Duffield of Detroit the selection of Worcester was made unanimous. On the motion of Claude R. Zappone the date of the regatta was set for Aug. 10 and 11, so as not to conflict with the Canadian regatta on Aug. 3 and 4.

Secretary Fred R. Fortmeyer submitted the report of the case of Mulcahy and Varley, of the Atalanta Boat Club, in which it was shown that the two oarsmen had competed in the Hamburg Regatta under rules similar to those in this country. They were on the course nine days previous to the race, affording them ample opportunity to become thoroughly acquainted with the rules. According to observers of the race, a foul occurred at about the 1,200-meter mark, at which time the two crews committing the foul were about two boats' lengths behind the leading crews in the race. A red flag was waved by the referee, indicating that the race would be started over again at that point. The referee disqualified the crew which was at fault. Most of the crews stopped rowing, and the Atalantas slowed down, but afterward began rowing again, and crossed the finish line ahead of the others. Mulcahy, who took matters in his own hands, was notified that the race was to be rowed over, but he refused to take part, despite the fact that the German authorities did everything in their power to induce him to reconsider his decision. The American oarsmen were offered a special cup in consideration of the distance which they had come. This offer was refused, and Mulcahy and Varley cabled to this country that they had won the race.

Upon the acceptance of the report, the following motion, proposed by Divie B. Duffield and seconded by Judge Tighe, was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen that the conduct of Messrs. Mulcahy and Varley at the regatta held at Hamburg, Germany, July 15 and 16, 1905, was unsportsmanlike and contrary to the standards which should govern an amateur oarsman of the United States; that their conduct in cabling to this country that they had won was most reprehensible; that the Regatta Committee of this association be requested to refuse bona fide entries of these men until further notice; that a like request be made to all rowing associations in this country, and that a copy of this report of the committee on investigation, together with a copy of this resolution, be mailed to each member of this association.

The report of the Vesper Boat Club Henley crew case was a big surprise. It charged that Vesper members, Harry B. Hoffman, H. Ragatz, and Oscar Thorn of the Henley Ways and Means Committee, had failed to properly voucher accounts with the Vesper Boat Club. The testimony showed that several members of the Henley crew were not eligible under the Henley rules on account of their occupations, despite the fact that every member of the crew had been vouched for by the Vesper Boat Club when the sanction of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen was requested for the trip; and, further, that sums of money were received by the members of the crew from Manager Thorn which were not properly accounted for.

The names and amounts follow: J. B. Juvenal, $50; John O. Exley, $50; Joseph Dempsey, $50; Roscoe Lockwood, $50; Robert Ayres, $50; Louis Abell, $40; W. G. Gleason, $50; Morris L. Williams, $25; H. H. Lott, $50; Thomas Johnson, $50; F. A. Scheel, $37.50; J. S. Flanagan, $37.50; Charles Armstrong, $37.50; a total of $806.50.

Louis Abell, coxswain of the crew, admitted receiving $25 to purchase an overcoat and $35 additional. Juvenal testified to receiving $100, but said it was to help pay his expenses to the Hamburg regatta, but he did not compete at the latter event. All the men claimed that the money was for the purpose of paying the incidental expenses on the steamer on their return to Philadelphia.

Henry W. Garfield offered four resolutions to the effect that when the Executive Committee adjourned it should meet again in the near future to examine into the charges against Hoffman, Ragatz, and Thorn, and the members of the Vesper Boat Club Henley crew. This was agreed upon, and the date was set for April 7 at Philadelphia.

It was also resolved that "in future no certificate of eligibility shall be given by the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen until the status of each oarsman has been investigated by a committee of this association."

On the motion of President Pilkington former Lieut. W. E. Cody of the Harlem Rowing Club was disqualified as an amateur. Cody admitted receiving $18 a week for eight weeks from the Nautilus Boat Club of Bath Beach for coaching the crew. Cody will be permitted to appear before the Executive Committee at Philadelphia on April 7 to defend his action if he so desires. In moving Cody's disqualification, President Pinkington touchingly referred to the fact that the accused oarsman was one of his oldest rowing friends and a fellow-member of his club.

Section 10 of the constitution was amended to read:

The senior single scull race shall be open to all duly qualified scullers excepting the winners of this race in previous regattas of this association. The successful competitor at each regatta shall be entitled to compete in the championship race. The championship single scull race shall be open only to duly qualified winners of the senior single scull race, and if there should be only one competitor he shall, upon rowing over the course, be declared entitled to the honor of champion.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Dull—Surplus Reserves of Banks Reduced.

Local Institutions Gain Cash, but Offset It by Loan Increase.

Business in yesterday's short session of the Stock Exchange fell away to a point which represented practical stagnation. In not more than three issues were there such fluctuations as to call for comment of any kind. Encouraging news from the miners' convention at Indianapolis, higher prices on European markets, reflecting renewed hope of an amicable adjustment of the Moroccan differences, a bank statement revealing further encroachment upon already attenuated reserves; none of these developments exerted the least influence upon prices. The advices from Indianapolis were to the effect that the chief of the miners' organization had taken a resolute stand for further parleys with the operators before definitely abandoning the idea of a composition of disputed matters. European hopes of a settlement of the Moroccan differences were based largely upon the reported withdrawal of Germany's proposal regarding the government of Casablanca, in consequence of which that port is added to the seven ports that by agreement are to be placed under the control of the French and Spanish police, although a further stumbling block is provided in the German demand for international control of the police.

The support which was accorded Consolidated Gas at the low price touched by it on Friday was again in evidence in the trading in that issue yesterday, and upon transactions running to a volume which made the stock the fourth on the list in point of activity it advanced 2½ points, retaining, however, only a fractional part of this at the close of the day. The Chicago Union Traction shares likewise seemed, for the moment, at least, to have found a natural level, and the trading in them was accompanied by only nominal declines. Serious account is being taken in Wall Street of the losses which must have been inflicted upon financial interests in the City of Chicago as a result of the violent declines in these shares, and the situation was not rendered any more pleasant by the apparent impasse which seems to have been reached in the negotiations between bankers of that city and certain railroads for a purchase by the latter of the Walsh railroads.

Yesterday's bank statement, with its return of a gain of $1,135,000 in cash, reflected a correction undoubtedly of the inaccuracies brought about by the average system in the statement of the previous week. This gain was so far offset by an increase of $5,852,000 in loans and a resultant enlargement of deposits that surplus was diminished by $598,000, bringing that item to $5,865,125, a figure which makes a very favorable comparison with the surplus items of 1905, 1903, and 1902, in all of which years the surplus was well under that now held by the banks. The week in the foreign exchange market ended with an advance of 50 points in demand sterling, placing the rate at 4.8570, against 4.8520 a week ago.

ON THE LONDON 'CHANGE

Various Causes Combine to Cause Dullness and Weakness.

Favorable Turn Hoped for If an Agreement Is Reached at Algeciras—Home Rails Depressed—Americans Show an Improved Tone at the Close.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
[Copyright, 1906.]

LONDON, March 17.—The disconcerting news from Algeciras, the alarming declarations by the Government in regard to the employment of Chinese labor in the Transvaal, and the somewhat increased stringency of the money market combined to make this a dull week on the Stock Exchange. There was very little business, and prices generally showed a downward tendency, though the declines were not heavy.

The market has apparently accepted the situation in the mines department as one likely to be prolonged until the Government's policy is fully determined. It is probable that the powerful combinations concerned in Kaffirs will endeavor to keep them fairly steady, coming to their relief when necessary, as they undoubtedly did last week, but anything like permanent improvement is not anticipated until the questions raised by the Liberal Ministry are fully settled. It is, however, hoped that if the Moroccan Conference reaches a satisfactory termination business on the Exchange will take a more favorable turn.

Considerations of international politics affected consols and other gilt-edged securities this week, the demand for them amounting to almost nothing. The same causes depressed home rails and kept them from responding to the favorable character of the traffic returns.

It is curious that foreign Government bonds showed firmness, but it is understood that the quotations were based on a very small volume of business.

American rails were irregular, but at the close showed an improved tone, due largely to the excellence of the Steel Trust report.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, March 17.—The rates for money were easier in the market to-day and supplies were more plentiful. Discounts were steady.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was lifeless, but the tone generally was good, owing to the attitude of the Continental Bourses, pointing to satisfactory progress being made at Algeciras. Consols were steady and home rails generally were upheld.

Americans opened steady, and were lifted mostly to above parity on good support. They closed easier. Grand Trunk was strong on the traffic increase.

Foreigners were quietly firm.

Kaffirs were cheerful and fairly supported.

Copper shares were in request.

Japanese imperial 6s of 1904 were quoted at 104¼.

Bullion amounting to £79,000 was withdrawn from the Bank of England to-day for shipment to South America.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 15; Lisbon, 4.50.

The Indian Secretary has purchased $1,375,000 in Australian gold, due here April 7.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, March 17.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were steady and had an upward tendency, owing to the belief in an early adjustment of the difficulties at Algeciras.

Russian imperial 4s were quoted at 84.80 and Russian bonds of 1904 at 706.

Three per cent. rentes, 99f 35c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 13½c for checks.

BERLIN, March 17.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were firm, but the dilatory tactics at Algeciras restricted business.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 47½ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates: Short bills, 3½ per cent.; three months' bills, 4 per cent.

KENTUCKY COAL LANDS DEAL

A Corporation Organized to Clear Titles and Develop 500,000 Acres.

The Eastern Kentucky Coal Lands Corporation has been incorporated, for the purpose of getting under central control about 500,000 acres of coal lands in Southeastern Kentucky. The lands are undeveloped, and lie westward of the Pocahontas fields of West Virginia.

S. H. Hoppin of 55 Liberty Street is President of the new company. The development of the field has been hindered by title disputes and differences among the holders of small parcels of land, all of which the organizers expect to clear up by getting the individual owners and claimants to pool issues in the new company.

Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company LIMITED.

NOTICE TO HOLDERS OF BEARER SHARES.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that in accordance with the circular sent to Registered Shareholders on 9th March, 1906, the Directors of Marconi's Wireless Telegraph Company Limited have conditionally allotted to the Shareholders in proportion to their holdings, 128,063 Shares of £1 each, at the rate of one new Share for every two Shares held on 6th March, 1906, at the price of £1 0s. 0d. per Share. No fractions of Shares will be issued, and consequently holders of less than two Shares will not be entitled to participate in the pro rata allotment and Shareholders holding upwards of two Shares will only be entitled to one new Share for each complete two Shares held.

This Notice does not apply to Shares converted subsequent to 6th March, 1906.

In the case of Shareholders domiciled in the United Kingdom Five Shillings per Share upon acceptance of Allotment not later than 23rd March, 1906, and the balance in instalments as follows:—5s. per Share on or before 6th April, 1906, 5s. per Share on or before 4th May, 1906, 5s. per share on or before 3rd August, 1906, and in the case of Shareholders domiciled elsewhere than in the United Kingdom, Five Shillings per Share upon acceptance of Allotment not later than 6th April, 1906, and the balance in instalments as follows:—5s. per Share on or before 27th April, 1906, 5s. per Share on or before 25th May, 1906, 5s. per Share on or before 3rd August, 1906.

Every Holder of Shares to Bearer in the Company who desires to apply for his pro rata proportion of the new Shares must deposit his Share Warrants, together with a written statement of the name and address of the Holder, at the London Office of the Company, 18, Finch Lane, London, E. C., or at the Office of The Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America, Lords Court Building, 27, William Street, New York, or at the Offices of the Banca Commerciale Italiana in Rome, Milan, or Genoa, or at the Office of the Anglo-Austrian Bank in Trieste, on or before 23rd March, 1906, if the Holder is domiciled in the United Kingdom, or on or before 6th April, 1906, if the Holder is not domiciled in the United Kingdom.

In exchange for such deposit a Form of Allotment letter with Form of Accceptance or Renunciation will be issued, which must be forwarded to the Company's Bankers, on or before the 23d March, 1906, if the Holder is domiciled in the United Kingdom, or on or before 6th April, 1906, if the Holder is not domiciled in the United Kingdom, together with a remittance for the first instalment of 5s. per Share, otherwise the allotment will be absolutely forfeited.

By Order of the Board,
HENRY W. ALLEN,
Secretary.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, March 17.—The trading was slow to-day and prices ruled fractionally higher for the usually inactive list. Speculative securities held about steady.

Norfolk Railway and Light 5s were ¼ up. United Railways 4s were the only weak issues, selling down ¼.

G. B. S. Brewing incomes advanced ¼ to 32. There was a decline in Houston Oil preferred of 1½ points; the common recovered fractionally to 11½.

Baltimore brokers are agitated over the bill in the Legislature providing for the taxing of all sales of stock at 3 cents on each $100 of face value; thus stock with the par value of $100 will be taxed $3 for 100 shares. Of course the brokers will put it upon the traders, but they fear it will injure business.

The market to-day closed dull but firm. Shares, 350; bonds, $29,500.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—Nothing of much moment transpired in the very dull local market, which had dealings of only 7,500 shares, more than half of which was furnished by Philadelphia Rapid Transit. With nearly 4,000 shares selling, this stock ranged between 29⅝@29, with 29⅞ at the close, compared with Friday's final price of 28⅝. Union Traction closed unchanged at 62, while Philadelphia Traction went off a point to 99, and recovered half the loss on a small sale toward the close.

There was a good deal of talk about the new trolley projects and their respective merits and chances, but nothing definite was announced. Trading in the rest of the list was practically at a standstill. The list:

CHICAGO QUOTATIONS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, March 17.—Business on the local Exchange was rather scattered today and the selling pressure was small. Title and Trust sold off to 113¾, Edison to 157, Box Board preferred to 13⅝, and Chicago Subway went again at 49. North Chicago, which closed yesterday at 30, sold at 34 and 33, while West Chicago, which closed yesterday at 28, went at 30 in small amounts.

In New York Union Traction issues were fairly steady, with the preferred around 18. Other local issues were dull, though Oak Park Elevated preferred in small lots sold as low as 3¼.

MARCH 1906

THE SPECULATIVE SITUATION.

Two years ago last Monday the United States Supreme Court handed down its decision in the Northern Securities case, declaring that combination to be illegal. This was the beginning of a bull market. Contrary to the expectations of a bear party that had committed itself heavily to the short side in anticipation of just such a decision, Wall Street took a very optimistic view of the whole matter. The Financial Chronicle wrote: "Now at length it looks as if we were getting into the open once more, where we may gain broader views, with liberty probably to rescue our investments from the destruction to which new legal restrictments seemed to have consigned them. Let us all remember that what is called 'good times' may prevail in spots while all other departments have settled down to a permanent lethargy. That condition of affairs, however, would answer only to the spirit of the utterly selfish man's prayer: 'God bless me and my wife, my brother Joe and his wife; us four and no more.' But general prosperity and progress are impossible while torpidity, such as has prevailed recently, is the feature of all security markets. The people who live in the interior may not understand fully the relations of business, but it is none the less a fact that Security Exchanges are the mills which grind up and furnish the fodder for all enterprise."

In that week of 1904 the average rate for call money was 1¾ per cent. Time money was quoted at 2¾ to 4 per cent. for varying periods. Dividend-paying securities, on the other hand, were selling at prices on which their yield to the investor was from 5 to 6 per cent., and more in certain cases. St. Paul was ruling around 140, on which price its yield was 5 per cent. Union Pacific, then a 4 per cent. stock, ranged in that week from 71 to 75. At 75 its yield was about 5.33 per cent. Pennsylvania fluctuated between 111⅛ and 116¾, and at 115 its yield to the investor was about 5.25 per cent. United States Steel preferred, selling around 57 and paying 7 per cent., yielded the investor more than 12 per cent. Dividend-paying securities at that time, in other words, were selling below a parity with money, which is to say that they yielded more on their market valuation than money was worth in the open market. Shortly after this investors, who had been holding off, began to overrun the market, seeking employment for the money, which, without confidence in securities, they had been keeping idle. Wall Street was speedily relieved of its undigested stuff, and a great speculation for the rise began.

Conditions are now reversed. Dividend paying securities on the average are selling above a parity with money, which is to say, they yield less on their present valuation than money is worth in the open market, and the bond market is about as flat as it could be. The demand for investment securities on a 4 per cent. basis is very lax. There is hardly a banking house in the Street that is not "hung up" with bond underwriting of one kind or another.

By a curious coincidence the United States Supreme Court, on Monday last, the second anniversary of the Northern Securities opinion, handed down a decision in the so-called Paper Trust and Tobacco Trust cases, holding that a corporation may not plead the Fifth Amendment and refuse to produce books and papers; that while an individual may stand on his rights as a citizen and refuse to give evidence on the ground that it would tend to incriminate him, a corporation is the creature of the State and has no such immunity. The effect of this decision, obviously, is to enable "investigations," for which there is now a public passion, to go deeper than they have before. It is caluculated to promote corporation whacking—a diversion which, to Wall Street's way of thinking, has already attained an undesirable scope.

The stock market last week was equally insensible to good and bad news. It was unmoved by an importation of gold, and totally disregarded the Supreme Court decision just referred to. On the same day the same court handed down a decision in the case of Chicago versus its traction foes, the effect of this opinion being to give the municipality absolute control of the situation, and there was a crash immediately in Chicago Union Traction securities sufficient to wipe out many millions of invested wealth, but the stock market regarded this as an isolated matter, and got only the duller. Similarly, a further decline in Consolidated Gas on the prospect of a drastic reduction of the dividend was apparently a matter of no general concern. Then on Thursday the Missouri Pacific submitted an annual report which showed that it had not quite been earning its dividend, and the stock broke abruptly, but this also was disregarded by the market as a whole. A good many other influences of more or less potential value were unheeded.

The week's trading was of very little consequence. It was the kind of market which a well-known broker once dismissed from conversation with the illuminating observation that the cropiers were playing with each other. Commission house business was infinitesimal.

There is a well-defined belief that we shall have a better stock market after the 1st of April. Everybody seems to be looking forward to the traditional Spring boom. The idea is by no means confined to traders. Some very prominent bankers have gone on record with predictions of a broader speculation beginning some time in April, and continuing so long as money market conditions are favorable. It is hoped that there will be money enough in April to finance such a movement. It is this belief in a Spring rise that has been supporting bullish sentiment in the last few weeks. If it should come the Street would forget that shrewd men were taking the fullest possible advantage of the opportunity to dispose of stocks, just as it forgot in January that men who know when to be content with their profits never suffer such an opportunity to go unimproved.

At no time since the bull market started, two years ago, have the commission houses been overloaded with stocks on small margins. The speculation, in fact, has been supported by comparatively few men, conducting individual operations on a scale never before known, followed by the office trading element, which is always near at hand, and which will trade when the market is active and let it alone when it is dull. The impulsive outside public has not been present in force at any period of the advance. Perhaps it will escape entirely.

Brokers as a rule are provided with time money considerably in excess of their present requirements, and their margined lines of customers' stocks have been reduced one-third to one-half since the culmination of the January boom. This leaves the market in a strong technical position. The liquidation appears to have run its course, at least for the time being, as shown by the failure of unfavorable influences to produce fresh selling in any volume, as well as by the inability of the bear crowd to make effective capital of news suitable to bearish operations. To this extent it may be affirmed that immediate conditions seem to favor the bull side rather than the bear side, as a speculative proposition, barring, of course, developments such as might impair confidence in quarters where speculative stocks are concentrated and start liquidation among the large holders.

Indications point rather clearly to the leadership of a new class of stocks upon any resumption of bullish activity—such, for example, as Pennsylvania, Norfolk & Western and Baltimore & Ohio, all of which are below the prevailing standards of value. It may be taken for granted that there can be no successful bull movement in which the United States Steel stocks are included. These issues, it may be remarked, have been acting rather badly of late, notwithstanding most flattering reports of earnings for the quarter now closing. The behavior of Union Pacific has been very encouraging to its bullish followers. The stock holds a commanding position, and could easily be made to dominate the entire market, simply by being turned aggressively to the bull side.

GREENE COPPER

Have you read the series of analytical articles on this stock which have been running for four weeks past in

Walker's Copper Letter

in the Boston Commercial?

If you are an investor or a speculator and at all interested in

COPPERS

you should read this letter every week.

We have a few numbers left and you can have your subscription dated back, if you choose, and secure the five issues which contain the extended discussion of the investment value, speculative position and future prospects of

Greene Consolidated

More accurate, reliable, and profitable information concerning Coppers, the active stocks, the mines, and the metal market is to be found in The Boston Commercial than in all other publications combined. It always contains Walker's Weekly Copper Letter in full.

Those who know of the record made by this letter during the past three years will tell you that no copper share holder or other investor can afford to be without it.

The Boston Commercial is edited by Geo. L. Walker, who makes frequent personal visits to the mines, and writes with full knowledge of his subject. He is a recognized authority on coppers.

STOCK NOW OFFERED AT PAR,

$5.00 PER SHARE,

is one of the most desirable investments on the market to-day, combining absolute safety with every possibility of paying enormous dividends.

1. Their mines are proven producing mines, have produced $25,000,000 and have every prospect of yielding many times that amount.
2. They are located in what is conceded to be "the greatest mineralized zone in the known world;" Guanajuato, Mexico, with a recorded production of $1,500,000,000 guaranteeing that the mines of the Company are practically inexhaustible.
3. There are hundreds of thousands of tons of ore now mined awaiting treatment, which alone insures dividends for years.
4. There is no question about the necessary capital to make this one of the great mining enterprises of the age. Everything that is necessary to equip these properties, according to the most modern ideas of successful mining, has been paid or contracted for, and in a few months the ore will be under treatment, yielding gold and silver bullion for the market.

Progress of the Company Since Purchase of Properties.

Company took possession and began work on its properties on June 15, 1905, since which time the following has been accomplished:—

CONTRACTS.

With Allis-Chalmers Company, Milwaukee, Wis.—For a 100-stamp mill, with a daily capacity of from 300 to 400 tons, which they are now erecting. Most of the Machinery called for under this contract is now on its way to the Company's properties.

With Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, Pittsburgh, Pa.—For thirteen 30 to 50 horse power electric motors and a 5¼x6 inch Deane triplex Power Pump.

With Mexico Mine and Smelter Supply Company, Mexico City, Mexico.—For Air Compressors.

With Wellman-Seaver-Morgan Company, Cleveland, Ohio.—For Electric Hoists.

With United States Steel Products Export Company, New York.—For quantities of steel for construction work, all of which has been delivered.

With C. L. Banks, Guanajuato, Mexico.—For masonry and foundation work.

With Guanajuato Power & Electric Company, Guanajuato, Mexico.—For all necessary power to be used in the Company's operations.

With Peter Schuttler Company, Chicago, Ill.—For wagons and trucks to be used for hauling and transportation, which have been delivered.

With various dealers.—For large shipments of mules for hauling and transportation. They are now at work on the properties.

With Mexico Mine and Smelter Supply Company, Mexico City, Mexico.—For concentrators.

With numerous concerns for large shipments of cement and lumber, deliveries of which are constantly being made.

LAST AND FINAL CONTRACT TO COMPLETELY EQUIP PROPERTIES,

With United States Steel Products Export Company, New York.—For the delivery and erection of 52 Steel Cyanide Tanks, was made on February 20, 1906.

IMPROVEMENTS.

Principal shafts of the mines retimbered and extended.
Construction of large dam, creating a vast watershed, giving storage capacity of 70,000,000 gallons.
Rebuilding and repairing roads to Marfil, a distance of eight miles.
Grading and foundation work for buildings and machinery.
Tramway built from shafts to mill.
Completion of assay house with full equipment.

Supervision—N. B. SHERROD, M. E., Construction. E. HARRIS, Mining.

These are some of the important achievements accomplished by the Company during its possession of the properties, and in less than one year it has developed into a great industrial enterprise. For rapidity of work this record compares favorably with any mining proposition ever undertaken on so large a scale. Nothing has been left undone to place these great mines on an earning basis at the earliest date possible.

With all improvements completed and installed the stock should be worth many times the present selling price through the conservative capitalization of the Company, and in offering it at $5.00 per share the opportunity is presented of securing an investment that will yield large profits both in dividends and in the enhanced value of the stock. The stock is offered at $5.00 for only a limited period.

We present this stock for subscription with our unqualified indorsement, and advise its purchase while it remains at its present figure. With implicit confidence in the future of the Company, we recommend it to the most conservative investor.

Prospectus, reports, subscription blanks and full particulars on request.

DON'T BUY MINING TRASH

The indications are that the COPPER and GOLD BOOM of 1905-1906 will be the greatest on record. Many legitimate stocks have already shown a steady increase in ACTUAL VALUE of from 100 to 1,000 per cent. Others will no doubt do equally well. Before investing, inquire into the intrinsic value of properties through our statistical department, free of charge, and thus avoid the risk of buying stocks of doubtful value.

$50,000 and $100,000 wanted on Manhattan income property; also 2d mortgage money. LUDLOW, DAY REALTY CO., 10 East 42d.

The issue of Treasury stock of The Pittsburgh Bullfrog Mining Corp'n, Ltd., at 35 cents per share being nearly subscribed, the price will be

ADVANCED TO

45 CENTS PER SHARE

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 21st.

The two veins recently discovered on our Sapper claim, composed of quartz and white talc, the identical Shoshone formation, indicate that equal development will make the shares of this Corporation worth many times par, as it has already done for the Montgomery-Shoshone. That this fact is thoroughly appreciated by the knowing ones on the ground, is shown by the large number of orders being received for the stock from Bullfrog and Rhyolite.

Immediate application is therefore advisable on the part of those who wish to secure this stock at 35 cents, as no more than the allotted amount will be sold at this price.

The right is reserved to reduce or return any subscription.

APPLICATIONS BY MAIL should be accompanied by check to the order of this Corporation, at the rate of 35 cents per share for the number desired. Minimum subscription accepted, 100 shares.

Quaker Oats Stock Increased.

The stockholders of the Quaker Oats Company at a special meeting held yesterday in Jersey City adopted a resolution increasing the company's capital stock by $1,500,000, making the total capital stock $18,500,000. The company, which was organized in 1901, owns the American Cereal Company, which has manufacturing plants in Chicago, Akron, and Cedar Rapids, Iowa. The money realized from the sale of the new stock will be used to take up $1,500,000 of bonds of the American Cereal Company.

MARCH 1906

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

If there was any noticeable change in the character of last week's dealings, it consisted of nothing more serious than the absence of the seven-figured transaction which has come to be regarded as an essential feautre of every few days' business. Sales such as that of the Broadway Tabernacle, the Bennett Building, and Lord's Court have become so frequent, that to be without one might reasonably create the impression that there is something the matter with the market.

A glance at daily reports, however, ought to be enough to dispel any such notion. If forty or fifty sales of flats and tenements every twenty-four hours mean anything, it may safely be asserted that there are still a few buyers in the field for properties of this class. Furthermore, this investment and speculation in the cheaper grades of multi-family houses is much more widely distributed than it was two or three months ago. Then the upper east side and the easterly part of Harlem were producing about nine-tenths of it. To-day the Bronx is well represented; in the region from Thirty-fourth to Fifty-ninth Street, east of Third Avenue, speculators are busy accumulating plots of proper size for reimprovement, while not in three or four years has there been any such volume of trading on the lower east side as there is at present.

Buying of vacant property by builders is apparently proceeding on a conservative basis. New operations are being launched almost every day on the Heights, but not in such numbers as to justify the overproduction talk that is becoming popular in some quarters. With the actual running of trains through to the Dyckman Tract and King's Bridge, it is expected that that territory will now be in a position to realize the expectations which have been made the basis of speculative activity there, off and on, for thirty-five years.

Felix Isman's purchase of the block front on Fifth Avenue, between 106th and 107th Streets, and the sale of the southeast corner of Fifth Avenue and 108th Street to a firm of operators afforded the latest evidence of the decline in that neighborhood's prospective future, from one of millionaires' mansions probably to apartment houses of middle grade. These block fronts near the northeast corner of Central Park have afforded one of the few conspicuous examples in recent years of the exploded real estate boom.

LATEST DEALINGS BY BROKERS.

Louis N. Norwood has sold for M. L. & C. Ernst to John T. Williams a plot of thirteen lots at the southeast corner of Broadway and 188th Street; also, a plot of about ten lots on 188th Street.

The local Board of Washington Heights has adopted resolutions in favor of the regulating, grading and sewering of a new avenue running from 181st to 196th Street, about 200 feet west of Broadway, to be known as Bennett Avenue, in honor of the late James Gordon Bennett.

Corner Sold on Cedar Street.

Robert R. Rainey has sold for Israel C. Russell to Archibald A. Forrest the northwest corner of Cedar and Washington Streets, a four-story building, on lot 20.9 by 56 and irregular.

J. N. Kalley & Son and Robert Colgate & Co. were the brokers in the sale of 262 Greenwich Street and 91 Murray Street, for William Colgate. The buyer is the Fort Amsterdam Realty Company. There has been no transfer of this property since 1824.

Buyer for Lexington Avenue House.

Henry Salant as attorney has bought from Bernard Baruch the dwelling 1,608 Lexington Avenue, 16.8 by 75.

Nichols & Lummis were the brokers in the sale and resale of 218 East Seventy-second Street.

Edwin Epstein has bought the three-story dwelling 219 East Seventy-second Street. The report that Mr. Epstein has sold 223 and 225 East Seventy-second Street is denied.

E. Henry Eckhardt has sold for H. B. Smith 128 West Fifty-third Street, a three-story brownstone dwelling, 18 by 50 by 100.5, to Louis Kendal.

West Twenty-fifth Street Purchase.

W. Hamilton McBride of Ames & Co.'s office has sold for James Shanny 308 and 310 West Twenty-fifth Street, two four-story tenements, 40 by 100. The buyer is James W. Blake. This is the first time this property has been sold in sixty years.

The same broker has also resold to C. P. Ryttenberg 127 West Twenty-ninth Street, a three-story building on lot 19 by 47.

Pocher & Co. have sold the five-story tenement, on lot 25 by 100, at 439 West Thirty-eight Street, for M. E. Donovan to Charles Held.

Pocher & Co. report the resale of the five-story tenement, on lot 25 by 100, at 407 West Fifty-sixth Street, for the Badt-Mayer Company to M. L. & C. Ernst.

New Garage on West End Avenue.

Gross & Gross have sold for William H. Crawford to the White Sewing Machine Company the property, 100 by 100, on the west side of West End Avenue, 50.5 feet north of Sixty-ninth Street. A six-story building which covers part of the plot will be used by the company as a garage.

Sale of 91st Street Apartments.

O. G. Manss has sold for Gustav Odinderfer 140 and 148 West Ninety-first Street, two five-story double apartment houses.

William R. Lowe & Co. negotiated the recently reported sale of the Greenfield estate's holdings on Manhattan, Lawrence, and 127th Streets to Max Marx. Samuel Schenkein was the buyer, not the seller, of the plot on the north side of 163d Street, 175 feet east of Amsterdam Avenue. Jaffer & Goldfield were the brokers.

To Build Branch Post Office.

Henry H. Otten has sold to the Builders' Construction Company the plot on the north side of 140th Street, 105 feet west of Eighth Avenue, 45 by 100. The building to be erected on the plot has already been leased to the Government for use as a branch Post Office.

Irving D. Steinhardt reports that Parsons & Holzman have sold the seven-story elevator apartment house 22 Lenox Avenue; also, that Caroline Z. King has sold the five-story apartment house 136 West Ninety-sixth Street.

Sachs & Co. have sold for a client to John Palmer 545 West 125th Street, a five-story double flat, 25 by 100.

Corner Sold on Morningside Park.

A. V. Amy & Co. have sold for Rudolph Wirth the Avondale, a six-story apartment house at the southeast corner of Morningside Park East and 116th Street, on lot 26.5 by 87.

Bloch Brothers have bought the southwest corner of Seventh Avenue and 149th Street, a five-story, four-family flat, 25 by 95 by 100.

Simon Kreielsheimer bought of John M. Haffen 514 East 155th Street, a four-story triple apartment, 27.6 by 100, adjoining the corner of Morris Avenue.

F. R. Tobin has sold for Peter Rouss to the estate of Thomas R. Tobin 2,392 to 2,398 Seventh Avenue, southwest corner of 140th Street, a seven-story apartment house known as the Dorothy, on plot 99.11 by 100.

Upper Madison Avenue Deal.

M. L. & C. Ernst have bought from Horowitz & Lefkowitz 1,493 and 1,495 Madison Avenue, a six-story apartment house with stores, 50 by 100, betwen 102d and 103d Streets.

Shweitzer & Levis have sold for Ernest Bullowa to N. Newman 1,708 and 1,710 Park Avenue, two five-story flats with stores, each on lot 25.3 by 90.

Thomas J. Bannon has bought 235 and 241 East 114th Street, two five-story tenements, each 25 by 100.11, and has resold 235 to George R. Simpson.

Bloch Brothers have bought the five-story flat 74 East 119th Street, on lot 25 by 100.11. Greenberger & Co. were the brokers.

Resale of Fortieth Street Houses.

Isaac Haft has resold the five-story tenements 310 and 312 West Fortieth Street, which he bought at auction on Wednesday.

Carl Jacobs has sold, in conjunction with George Jacob and B. Oppenheim, for Mrs. E. Smith and the Maguire estate, to Julius Bachrach, the two four-story brick buildings, each 16.8 by 100, at 345 and 347 East Thirty-second Street.

O'Reilly & Dahn have sold to Charles B. Gumb 1,658 First Avenue, a four-story double flat, 25 by 75.

Adolph Dittmar has bought, through Frankenthaler & Sapinsky and Charles Kaufmann, as attorneys, the five-story tenement 1,163 Second Avenue, 26.4 by 47.6.

O'Reilly & Dahn have sold to Samuel Wenk 540 East Eighty-fifth Street, a five-story tenement on lot 25 by 100.

Eighth Avenue Corner Leased.

J. Arthur Fischer has leased for Mandelbaum & Lewine and the New Amsterdam Realty Company to P. J. Flannery the four-story building 681 Eighth Avenue, northwest corner of Forty-third Street, for a term of ten years. Mr. Flannery will remodel the building.

William H. Falconer has leased 11 East Seventy-fifth Street to Charles E. Smith and 28 Irving Place to Mrs. K. Loft.

H. L. Suydam & Co. report the following leases: Store and basement at the southwest corner of Third Avenue and Fourteenth Street, to Carapell & Catamaras; store and basement at 31 Bond Street, to Gariol & Co.; store at 449 Broadway, to P. F. Collier & Son; store and basement at 204 Greene Street, to B. A. Kinsle; store and basement at 495 Broome Street, to Holland & Webb; store and basement at the southwest corner of West Broadway and Third Street, to Frank Wachter, and the store and basement at 500 Broadway, to S. Brooklyn Flats Change Hands.

Mrs. Frances Levy has sold for the Jerome Realty Company to M. Ganz and S. Peyser, 391 and 393 Fouth Street, Brooklyn, two four-story single flats, each 23 by 95; also, to a Mr. Stoerger 389 Fourth Street, a similar house on lot 23 by 95.

THE AUCTION ROOM.

Auction room demand, as reflected in the results of last week's offerings, seems to be for improved rather than vacant property. Thursday's sale of Washington Heights lots, so far as actual buying by disinterested parties was concerned, was hardly up to expectations. The offerings of improved properties on the preceding day, while attended by some bidding in, were on the whole successful. Besides several scattered tenements and dwellings there were also sold the building at 45 University Place, for $45,700, and the apartment house 2,781 Broadway, for $89,000.

Bronx lots, in the shape of an offering listed by Joseph P. Day for Wednesday, will occupy a prominent position in this week's schedule. The properties include the block front on the north side of Longwood Avenue, between Beck and Fox Streets, the block front on the east side of Cypress Avenue, between 136th and 137th Streets, plots on 136th and 140th Streets, near St. Ann's Avenue, and others on Third, Wendover, and Tremont Avenues.

Two partition sales, to be conducted by the same auctioneer on Friday, affect the property 500 West Broadway, near Houston Street, and a building on Greene Street, near Broome Street.

A foreclosure offering which may be the centre of some attention is that of 82 Park Row, just north of the Brooklyn Bridge entrance. This is one of the group of properties controlled by Sire Brothers in the block to be condemned for the site of the enlarged Bridge terminal. The parcel will be sold on Tuesday to satisfy a judgment of about $32,000 over a prior mortgage of $40,000.

There will also be a sale at the Bronx Auction Room on Tuesday, when Walter Whewell will put up the three-story frame flat at 684 East 175th Street.

Some interesting history attaches to Joseph P. Day's announcement that he will sell 85 Nassau Street at auction on March 28. This property was transferred by John George Leake to Peter Corne on Jan. 14, 1800, or considerably more than a century ago, and has remained in the ownership of Corne's descendants ever since. Corne's daughter, Elizabeth de Givencourt, married Oliver G. Kane in 1825. The Kane family resided in the Nassau Street house until 1847, when they bought a lot uptown and built the residence at 26 East Tenth Street, which is to be sold at auction on the same day.

MORTGAGE FILINGS FOR WEEK.

There were recorded last week 484 mortgages for $6,617,909, of which 245, for $2,588,608, were at 6 per cent.; 104, for $1,129,676, at 5½ per cent.; 58, for $1,150,500, at 5 per cent., and 5, for $70,850, at 4½ per cent. In the corresponding week last year there were recorded 687 mortgages for $18,948,597, of which 266, for $2,179,952, were at 6 per cent.; 216, for $3,042,470, at 5 per cent.; 64, for $2,726,000, at 4½ per cent., and 16, for $410,000, at 4 per cent.

SUBURBAN DEALINGS.

Sales of Large Tracts on Long Island —Offering of Mamaroneck Lots.

O. B. Ackerly and Stephen Yates have sold for Robert F. Cox a tract of twenty-two acres fronting on Manhasset Bay to John Rose and H. F. Cary of Manhattan. The property is to be developed immediately.

Ackerly & Yates also report the following Long Island sales: For Mrs. Andrew B. Richardson, fifty acres at Central Islip; also, 188 acres at St. James, known as the Willetts Farm, for John Behrmann; also, 195 acres at Holtsville for J. T. Hurd; also, for the North Shore Realty Company, ninety acres at Bay View, Southold, known as the Hennebury Farm, to a Mr. Coleman.

J. Lyon Gardiner of Gardiner's Island has conveyed to M. J. Degnon thirty-six lots in Long Island City, on Hunter's Point Avenue, Mount Street, Anabele Avenue, and Manley Avenue. This property is a portion of the old Debevoise estate.

Abram F. Breche of Brooklyn has conveyed to T. R. Martin and Milton S. Kistler 42½ acres of land on the Hempstead and Jamaica Turnpike, Queens.

The Federal Land and Improvement Company sold during the week fifteen lots at Amityville, L. I., for $3,125.

The Sound Shore Realty and Title Company, which last Summer developed and sold the Sound Shore subdivision, one of the Iselin properties at New Rochelle, announces a preliminary sale of lots on West Street at Mamaroneck. These lots, which form a portion of the Cedar Springs property, are within a few minutes' walk of one of the local stations on the new Westchester electric road. The tract skirts for some distance the Mamaroneck River. Extensive improvements have been begun by the owners, including macadamized streets, water and gas mains, and sidewalks.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

No Duty Assessable On Water in Wool —Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Somerville, the Board of United States General Appraisers laid down yesterday the principle that the wool schedule of the Dingley tariff law was designed to levy duty on wool, and not on water contained in the wool. The ruling was called forth by the action of the Collector of Customs at Philadelphia, who declined to make an allowance for an unusual absorption of water in an importation of wool entered by Thomas Kenworthy's Sons.

In ascertaining the weight of the wool for the purpose of assessing duty, the board holds that it is immaterial whether the absorption was from sea water, rain water, or mere moisture. In every instance customs officers must make due allowances for the presence of water or moisture when estimating duty. The importer's protest was accordingly sustained.

In a decision by T. S. Sharretts, the board overruled a claim filed by G. W. Sheldon & Co. of Chicago regarding the classification of unfinished hypodermic syringes. They were assessed at the rate of 60 per cent., and were alleged to be properly dutiable at only 45 per cent.

General Appraiser Fischer wrote a decision reversing an assessment of duty on portfolios of art illustrations imported by Charles L. Freer of Detroit.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

WHEAT.—Following some irregularity and an easier tone around the opening the wheat market developed pronounced strength yesterday, and before the late close had advanced to 86c for May, or the highest price touched since the recent decline. The early decline was based chiefly on Liverpool's drop of ¼d and the continued excellent crop prospects in Western States, owing to the fact that wheat is so largely under snow covering. The trade was also impressed by Australian shipments of 1,424,000 bushels, although the estimate for world's shipments was only 9,600,000 bushels, compared with 9,936,000 bushels the previous week. At Paris there was a partial 10 point advance, and Budapest was 4 points up, but Berlin closed net unchanged. In the last hour of trade the Northwest was a good buyer of wheat, and at 1 o'clock May was quoted at 86c, July 84⅝c, and September 83⅝c. The cash market closed firm, as follows: No. 2 red, 86⅝c elevator and 87½c free on board afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, 87¾c free on board afloat.

CORN.—Starting out barely steady in tone, the market for corn ran into some good buying orders, which gave it a stronger tone, the regular close in New York being ½c above the previous night, while further advances developed on the curb. At 1 o'clock May was quoted 50⅛c; July, 50⅛c; September, 50⅛c; October, 50⅛c, and December, 49⅝c. The receipts of only 320,000 bushels at Western points against 736,000 bushels last year, in connection with clearances of 426,000 bushels and prospects for continued light receipts, were among the factors having a bullish effect on the market. Cash corn was firm, closing in New York as follows: No. 2, 51½c elevator and 49⅞c free on board afloat; No. 2 white, 49⅞c, and No. 2 yellow, 49⅞c free on board afloat.

DON'T PAY RENT
OWN YOUR OWN HOME
Don't look at to-day or to-morrow; LOOK AT YOUR FUTURE. What is it—one of toil and slavery? Think of your old age and be prepared for it by taking advantage of our proposition while you have an earning capacity, and the old age and future will take care of itself. Do not delay, as delays are dangerous, for time and tide await nobody. The most valuable asset you can have is your own home. Our system of home buying is simple, conservative and safe. The Company is backed by reliable and responsible business men.

Since our plan has been in operation in America it has been very successful. It is patterned after the CELEBRATED SYSTEM which has been operated successfully in England for over sixty years, where thousands of HAPPY HOME OWNERS have benefited by it.

Every Dollar Invested Now
at Elmhurst Square will add many times to its value. There is a new era of prosperity dawning for Queens Borough. Lack of adequate transportation facilities will no longer depress prices, and prices have been depressed for so many years that the public mind has not yet grasped the situation fully—what the new tunnels and bridges and railroad development will do in establishing a higher range of values throughout the whole of Long Island. Bear in mind, however, that the further you get from the city's centre, the less likely you are to share in the general advance. The ratio of profit is always greater along the main arteries of Rapid Transit.

ELMHURST SQUARE
is almost under the shadow of Herald Square, 16 minutes from 34th Street, approached by 7 transportation lines—fare 5c. It is restricted and fully improved with sidewalks, curb and gutter—the only addition in the Borough with sewers and paved streets. Convenient to churches, schools and stores; healthful surroundings and every essential of a high-class residential suburb. Buy now—if you wait until the completion of all the improvements it will cost two or three times as much. Lots and plots at nominal prices. Call or write for Transportation Booklet No. 6, with a bird's-eye view of Greater New York, maps and views.

PARIS & MACDOUGAL, 1,123 Broadway, N. Y.

ALL EYES ARE TURNED ON BEAUTIFUL
QUEENS-COURT.
The choicest and most desirable home site in Queens, adjoining Belmont Park. The property is beautifully situated, restricted and improved; the ground is high and park-like, having served for a generation as a country seat.

Unequalled Transportation Facilities

Two railroad stations on property; quick and frequent trains; 40 trains per day over the third-rail subway from Flatbush avenue and Atlantic avenue. It is authoritatively stated that the Belmont Tunnel will be completed by Sept. 1, giving through service, making Queens-Court as accessible to City Hall, Manhattan, as 42d street is to-day.

You know what followed the opening of the New York Subway—the boom which it gave the Bronx. Buy now at Queens-Court, the terminal of the Brooklyn Subway, and make large profits.

Easy Terms or Cash Discount. Free Transportation.

WESTCHESTER.
FOR SALE.

A CHOSEN FEW

ANYWHERE IN WESTCHESTER COUNTY

CHESTER HILL......—IN THE HEART OF RESTRICTED MOUNT VERNON, on plot 50x105, stands a "House of Seven Gables," more or less. Enough artistic to be attractive and not too much for practicability; in a word, five rooms on first floor, parquet floors; second floor, four rooms, large closets, immense tiled bathroom, commodious hall; third floor—Gables? Yes, but high ceilings. South, East and West exposures. One billiard room, and two others. Verandas and vestibules. We invite an early inspection. Less than $10,000.

WHITE PLAINS......—10 ACRES; would cut up into 119 lots; absolutely the only acreage left within few minutes' walk of station; circumstances will let it sell RIGHT NOW for $16,000. Ask how much can be made on this.

VALUE PLUS........—JUST LISTED EXCLUSIVELY WITH US; location, Fulton Avenue, Mount Vernon; rooms, eight; improvements, all. Owner anxious to sell, asking price $7,500.

HARLEM ROAD......—43 MILES OUT; 130 acres. Buildings? Yes. Good, and in most picturesque location; high ground; fine trees; $60 an acre only. A Thinker would buy this without seeing it.

BY THE SQUARE FOOT.....—THIS IS HOW WE ARE SELLING LAND on the White Plains Road, Mount Vernon, known as the Rockwell Property. Buy a Square, on the Square, and get a Square Deal. One man has squared his money by this operation within two years. A WORD to the wise is NOT sufficient, but S. U. F. P. NOTE:—These letters occur on all of our signs throughout Westchester County. They mean something.

HARTSDALE.........—NEAR STATION; beautiful stucco and shingle Cottage; it's new; too much cannot be said of fine location and superb country view for miles. Either $6,000 with good sized plot, or $7,500 with extra large frontage.

CORNER PLOT.......—FINEST SECTION, CHESTER HILL, MOUNT VERNON; house magnificently finished throughout; first floor in oak, birdseye maple and curly birch; on second and third floors, parquet floors; private telephone, electric lights, hot water heat, three tiled bathrooms, 12 rooms and dressing room, cedar room, pantries, private halls, immense closets; built two years; owner will exchange for New York City property or Mount Vernon property. Savings Bank Mortgage just placed of $20,000. The place is cheap at $45,000. There is also a barn with coachman's apartments. Offer requested.

WHITE PLAINS......—PROSPECT HILL; attractive house, almost new; steam heat, double hardwood floors, some special features, stable, coachman's quarters; area equals 9 city lots. Price, $15,000. Allowance made for one not wanting stable.

BUSINESS IS BUSINESS.........—BUSINESS PROPERTY is worth the serious consideration of business men if it will pay better than 10 per cent. We have it on Fourth Avenue, Mount Vernon. Property along this avenue is going like hot cakes. If you want a parcel, WHY,—S. U. F. P.

LARGE ACREAGE....—5 MILES ABOVE WHITE PLAINS; convenient to two stations; 95 acres; grandest building site we know of so near New York. The views are superb and you'll agree with us. MORE than the ordinary farm buildings. Late owner died 10 days ago. To sell quick, $24,000. The widow might as well ask $40,000. But it's your chance.

A WONDER..........—20 PER CENT.! Yes, 20 per cent. on your investment in a new house, Chester Hill, Mount Vernon; hardwood floors throughout; tiled bath, steam heat, electric lights. Only five (5) minutes from New Haven Station. Never been occupied.

WHITE PLAINS......—READ THIS CAREFULLY. 25 acres, with buildings in A1 order; large road frontage; 3 dandy sites, a brook, splendid shade; $60,000 estate as one neighbor, something better on the other side. Price, $17,500.

LOTS OF LOTS...............—IN CRESTWOOD, YONKERS PARK. We have a corner on prices of corner and inside lots. See others first, then you will buy through us.

LAKE AND SOUND VIEW......—ONE OF THE FINEST IN WESTCHESTER COUNTY; 110 acres between Mt. Kisco and Armonk; 16 room house on fine elevation; stream of water and numerous springs; some woodland, boating and fishing. $25,000.

LONG ISLAND.
FOR SALE.

$100,000,000 on Tunnels and Bridges is being expended to connect Long Island with Manhattan. What all this means to the future of Long Island beggars the most vivid imagination.

In the History of SUBURBAN REAL ESTATE

There has never been such an opportunity for profitable investments as we are now offering at

FLORAL PARK

Right on the Main Line of the Long Island R. R. and not more than 20 Minutes From Broadway

On Completion of the Pennsylvania R. R. Subway.

EVERY DOLLAR OF THE MILLIONS WHICH THIS RAILROAD AND THE BELMONT TROLLEY SYSTEM ARE SPENDING FOR QUICK RAPID TRANSIT TO LONG ISLAND MEANS AN ADVANCE IN THE VALUE OF LOTS AT FLORAL PARK.

As soon as all the new transit facilities are in operation residents of Floral Park will be able to reach Herald Square in less time than residents of the Bronx do now.

Then the History of Bronx Real Estate will be repeated in

Floral Park

You know what sensational advances Bronx Real Estate made a little over a year ago, when the Subway was opened and the public suddenly realized that transit facilities are the prime factors in real estate values outside of the congested centres of Manhattan.

FLORAL PARK has already every advantage and convenience for the commuter. It is less than 15 miles from Herald Square, on the main line of the Long Island R. R., on which electric trains are now being operated from the Flatbush Ave. Station in Brooklyn. Forty trains a day.

We have developed a large tract of land within a few blocks of the railroad station, and are offering

$10 DOWN. $5 PER MONTH.

Titles guaranteed by the Title Guarantee and Trust Co.

BY NEXT SPRING THESE PRICES WILL BE ADVANCED 25%.

FLORAL PARK has all city improvements, several good hotels, and a number of stores. Its churches comprise the leading denominations. Its public school is one of the finest on Long Island, and its Fire Department is a model of its kind.

THE NEW YORK TIMES:

I have been a constant advertiser in The New York Times since the early part of December, 1905, and have procured and consummated several sales through the advertisements that I have inserted in The New York Times, and have come in contact through the advertising with new prospective buyers, which I would not have succeeded in getting if I had not used The New York Times as an advertising medium. I am now fully convinced that the right kind of advertising in a paper like The New York Times will bring forth to any continuous advertiser good results. I have inserted several different qualities of advertisements in your paper, and have as yet to find any one of them that did not bring some replies.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES.

Retail Clothing House
Near New York
Offers Opportunity
To Right Man.

A well-known business man, controlling large interests outside of retail enterprises, unable to give this store his personal attention, will sell half or two-thirds interest in a modern clothing, hat, and furnishing store doing business at the rate of $70,000 per annum, and with personal attention can easily be made to reach $100,000.

This Clothing Firm, with unquestioned reputation, with a system of turning stock four times, (in height of season no more than $30,000 stock,) prominently located in a modern building in the very heart of the business district, is furnished most modern, with best merchandise, perfectly organized, in a city of over 100,000 inhabitants, thirty minutes from New York.

Only hustling business men of unquestioned reputation, willing to give this store undivided personal attention, able and qualified to control management, will be considered. Apply in writing, giving detailed commercial and personal information. Address Box R. A., 822 Times, Downtown.

SELF-RULE IN SCHOOLS FAVORED BY MAXWELL

His Committee Reports in Favor of the Ray System.

INCLUDES A PUPILS' SENATE

Punishments Fixed by Vote—Experiments to be Encouraged in This City.

Associate Superintendents Andrew W. Edson and Edward L. Stevens have submitted a report to City Superintendent Maxwell recommending self-government in the public schools, in order to get the discipline which doing away with corporal punishment is supposed to have destroyed. Dr. Maxwell has expressed the hope that many Principals will make experiments.

"Self-government by pupils should be entered upon in the schools of this city," says the report. "There is a better way of controlling pupils than through repressive and coercive measures. Self-control and active co-operation by pupils in school management are the essential features of a well-givered school.

After visiting various schools in Syracuse and Philadelphia, where various adaptations of pupil self-government are in operation, Messrs. Edson and Stevens concluded that the Ray system might well be introduced. They also studied the "School City," another form of self-government.

"The Ray plan differs from the 'School City' in having less machinery, fewer officers, nothing to do with courts of justice, or with the teaching of civics," the report declares. "Moral suasion is the governing force. This plan emphasizes the excellence of a democratic form of government over a monarchical. It tends to lead pupils to do right because it is right, and to lead pupils to assist others in right conduct. It shifts a large share of responsibility from a teacher to the pupils.

"Instead of forcing the wills of troublesome and mischievous pupils to the teacher's own way of thinking, it leads pupils and teachers to approach every question of conduct in an intelligent and sensible manner."

The plan, as developed by John T. Ray of the John Crear School, Chicago, provides for election of a Tribune in each room, to be the executive officer, and of citizens, elected from among those who excel in personal conduct. Senators are elected from each room, who form the School Senate. This acts as a legislative body. The Principal has absolute veto power over all the acts of the Senate.

Dr. Maxwell said yesterday:

"Without committing myself in favor of the Ray plan, I most earnestly hope that many of our Principals will try it in their schools. The abolition of corporal punishment—one of the most praiseworthy measures ever adopted by the Board of Education—has left the schools, in the judgment of many persons, without adequate means of the discipline necessary for the welfare of the individual pupil or the entire body. A return to corporal punishment is impossible. Expulsion from school and confinement in a truant school—the most severe penalty known to our regulations—is altogether too severe for most school offenses, while the ordinary school penalties, such as keeping in and the deprivation of some privilege are often, when enforced by the teacher, insufficient.

"The temptation is always present, and is generally overwhelming, for the child culprit who suffers punishment of this kind at the hands of an autocratic authority, such as the Principal or teacher, to pose as a martyr. If, however, the punishment were inflicted by a jury of his peers, the consolation would be removed. Ridicule or pity of his fellows is what the pupil finds is hardest to endure and what he will strive most earnestly to avoid. In this psychological fact lies the chief reason of the success, such as it is, that has attended the different forms of pupil self-government."

Pigs Win Against the Government.

After a legal fight to establish their pedigree, forty-three pigs have won a victory against the United States Government, and will not be obliged to pay duty at the rate of $1.50 a head under the provision in the Dingley tariff law for "swine." The Board of General Appraisers held that they were of Berkshire blood, imported for breeding purposes, and therefore exempt from assessment. The Collector of Customs at Detroit had ignored the claims of high pedigree and exacted the usual duty.

The Hamburg Line's New Auguste Victoria Will Develop Novelties.

The Hamburg-American Line's new Kaiserin Auguste Victoria is receiving finishing touches at the shipyards of the Vulcan Shipbuilding Company in Stettin. Workmen are busy night and day, as the great vessel is to be delivered in Hamburg in a few weeks, that she may be ready to sail on May 10 for New York.

The Auguste Victoria, as she is called by those who already have booked for her for the coming season, is not the old Express steamship of that name, but an entirely new vessel, the largest steamship ever built. She is of 25,500 tons gross register, 43,000 tons displacement, is 700 feet long, and has eight decks above the water line. She has one entire deck more than the Amerika, but otherwise, in general arrangement, speed, and appearance, will be a counterpart of that ship.

A Ritz-Carlton restaurant à la carte, elevators, fifty suites and chambres de luxe, most with private bath; a gymnasium, electric baths and massage, special telephone service, and palm garden, with playing fountains, will be among the attractions of this latest addition to the Hamburg Line fleet, now numbering 360 vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 800,000. She will carry 550 passengers in first class, 350 in second class, 300 in third class, and 2,300 in her steerage, and a crew of 650, making a total of 4,150 persons. The cargo holds will have a capacity for 16,000 tons of freight.

ILLNESS SCARES CREDITORS.

Mechanics' Liens for $450,000 Filed Against Peter Banner's Property.

Many mechanics' liens have been filed in the past few days against the real estate of Peter Banner, a commission merchant of 648 Broadway, and against the real estate of the Vallima Realty Company, of which he was President.

Mr. Banner has been ill for three weeks, and some of the material men among the creditors heard that he had a stroke of apoplexy three weeks ago. Payments on the work had been made up to the time he was stricken. The liens, it was learned, were filed against the property as a precautionary measure as the material men did not know what might happen in case of Banner's death.

It is believed that there is ample property to meet all claims. Many of the liens are for the full amounts of the contracts which are still unfinished, while the amounts actually due are small. The liens on the property at Central Park West and Eighty-ninth Street aggregate more than $100,000, and those liens on the property of the Vallima Realty Company, at Central Park West and Seventieth Street, total more than $350,000. Banner was formerly a clothing merchant in San Francisco, and has been a resident of this city for more than twenty years. He was formerly a clothing merchant here but gave up that business twelve years ago and went into trade in hides and wool. In December last he was reputed to be worth $1,000,000 clear. He is said to own the building at 648 Broadway, which he built some years ago, besides the apartment houses on Central Park West on which the liens were filed.

ROUGHS WRECK AN OFFICE.

Assault Telegrapher and Smash Furniture in West 116th Street.

Charles Corper, a Western Union telegraph operator, says that Harlem needs reforming. He went to the branch office at 248 West 116th Street on Friday night to relieve the regular man, who is ill, and fell a victim to a band of young men who usually spend the most of the night at Eighth Avenue and 116th Street, apparently for the purpose of annoying everybody in the neighborhood.

Three men called on Corper between 2 and 3 o'clock and made the office look like a second-hand furniture store before he got a chance to call for help over the wire. They smashed some of the telegraph instruments, the chairs, and mauled the operator himself.

When Corper got a chance he wired to the main office:

"Send help; am being assaulted."

Sergt. Maurice Coughlin at Police Headquarters caught the message in transit and sent word to the West 125th Street Station. Policeman Brady was sent to the rescue, and three others were sent after him as soon as they entered the station. Brady found Corper trying to put the office to rights; his tormentors had just left, he said.

PEOPLE'S SYMPHONY DEFICIT.

Between $5,000 and $6,000 Needed to Defray Concert Expenses.

The People's Symphony Concerts, a semi-benevolent organization, which has been giving each Winter for the last six years orchestral and chamber concerts at which music lovers however poor may hear the best music, reports a considerable deficit for this season.

The admission prices, ranging from 5 to 50 cents, do not cover the expenses, and there is always a shortage which, it is expected, will be covered by voluntary contributions. This year the sum needed is larger than usual because the six orchestral concerts given at Cooper Union are now being repeated at Grand Central Palace.

In order to cover the expense of the last two of these concerts and four more which have been planned, it is necessary to raise between $5,000 and $6,000, and an appeal is made to music lovers in New York to supply the shortage. Contributions may be addressed to the Treasurer, James Speyer, at 24 and 26 Pine Street.

ENFORCES ENGLISH RULING.

Postmaster Rejects Transparent Envelopes for British Mails.

This notice was sent out from the Postmaster's office yesterday:

"Postmaster Willcox invites the attention of the public to the fact that the postal administrations of Great Britain, Canada, and the Transvaal have declined to receive and deliver articles inclosed in transparent or semi-transparent ("outlook") envelopes, for the reasons (among others) that the address of an article so inclosed is rendered indistinct and that the time necessary to decipher the addresses retards the distribution of other articles. Articles mailed in the United States addressed for delivery in Great Britain, Canada, or the Transvaal, which are inclosed in envelopes wholly or in part transparent or semitransparent will therefore be treated as unmailable."

NELLIE BLY ENDS OLD SUIT.

Pays $5,000 to Richards, Who Managed Her Iron Clad Company.

Mrs. Robert Seaman, once known as "Nellie Bly," instituted suit four years ago, as owner of the Ironclad Manufacturing Company, against W. B. Richards, Treadwell Cleveland, and Frank Cazenove Jones for an accounting. Richards, manager of the Ironclad Company, had sued for salary. The other defendants were Directors.

The case attracted great publicity at the time. Yesterday an order of discontinuance was entered and general releases were given by the attorneys for the company and by Mrs. Seaman to the three defendants. In addition, Mrs. Seaman paid $5,000 to Mr. Richards.

Mayor Fagan to Talk at Cooper Union.

"Civic Righteousness," Mayor Mark Fagan's view of it, will be the subject to-night at the People's Institute celebration of its ninth anniversary at Cooper Union. Besides Mayor Fagan of Jersey City, his Corporation Counsel and backer in reform, George L. Record; Mornay Williams, and others will speak on the same subject. A children's chorus of 100 boys and girls and the People's Institute chorus will sing.

LITTLE CRIPPLE'S HOME TO HAVE A BIG BENEFIT

Mortgage Still Hampers Helpers of Destitute Children.

WHAT THE INSTITUTION DOES

Afflicted Boys and Girls Are Taught to Smile, Then to Play—An Opening for Benevolence.

Arrangements are rapidly nearing completion for the huge benefit performance for the New York Home for Destitute Crippled Children, which is to be given at the Broadway Theatre on April 19. The seats will probably be placed on sale in a week or two. Practically all the noted theatrical people in the city, who have the object of this charity very much at heart, will help to make it an artistic success, and friends of the crippled children in the tenements will have an opportunity to give a helping hand to the persons actively interested in their welfare, with considerable enjoyment to themselves.

The home, which is at 141 West Sixty-first Street, was established in November, 1904, chiefly through the efforts of Mrs. A. L. Erlanger, wife of the theatrical manager, who in the work among the poor in the west side tenements which she had carried on for several years, became particularly impressed with the pitiful lot of the crippled children of the very poor. She succeeded in interesting a few well-to-do and generous women friends who succeeded in getting together funds with which the house where the home now is was purchased. In a month from now the last mortgage on the home will be raised, but its treasury will be almost depleted after that has been done, and for that reason the need of funds is very urgent.

In the last months there have been as many as fifty or sixty children cared for at one time by the home. Just now four of the cots at the home are empty. They were left vacant by children who had benefited so by the care and treatment at the home that their mothers came and carried them back to their tenement rooms.

There is one feature that impresses every visitor to the home, and that is that it seems to be a home indeed, not a charity institution, and the inmates like a large family of tenderly cared for children. Mrs. Erlanger, in speaking to a TIMES reporter yesterday, said she did not consider the home an "institution."

"We are trying to get away from the institutional idea as much as possible," she said. "We want the little cripples who come to us to feel that they are at home, and that the kind-hearted matron and nurses are their mothers for the time being. These little ones come to us with the burden of blighted lives placed on their tiny shoulders, and it would be unmerciful, indeed, to add to that by permitting them to even suspect that they are receiving charity. They are only receiving what is theirs by right, but which nature has denied them. If the public will bear this idea in mind, I feel sure that those who are trying to aid the crippled children of the poor need never worry about funds for carrying on the work.

"There are many schools for crippled children in New York, and they are doing an admirable work, but we feel that to cram a lot of knowledge, however useful, into little heads that cannot carry it, should be a secondary consideration at least. We believe their bodies should be built up first and their infirmities healed when that is possible.

"Of course, we give them instruction, too. The first thing we teach a crippled child is to smile. Few of them know it when they come. Then we teach them to play. Toys are unknown to most of them. These little cripples in most cases are the youngest of a number of children, they have been a burden instead of a joy to their parents, and the darkest corner in the tenement home is generally the place where they pass their years of infancy. We try to give them the sunshine and as big a share of boyish or girlish joy as we can."

The children spent last Summer at Ridgefield, where a house was lent to Mrs. Erlanger and her friends for the accommodation of their crippled wards.

"We have not decided where to go this Summer," said Mrs. Erlanger. "We would like to give fifty or sixty children a Summer in the country, and it will depend largely on the contributions we can get in the next couple of months whether we are able to do so. It seems too bad that we do not own a Summer house. It would be a great gift for any one to make to perpetuate the name and memory of some loved one."

Mrs. Erlanger will make her trip to Europe this Summer one of study. And her topic will be the care of crippled children in Germany and France.

"I hope to bring back with me many helpful hints for those who are interested in the little tenement cripples," she said.

NEEDS FUNDS FOR CRIPPLES.

Guild for Children of the Poor Asks Financial Aid.

The Guild for Crippled Children of the Poor is sending out an appeal for funds to enable it to continue the work begun nearly eighteen months ago when the Crippled Children's West Side Free School was opened at 18 Leroy Street.

This is one of the poorest sections of the city and the school represents in that neighborhood practically all the interest and pleasure there is in life for upward of a score of children who attend it. The initial attendance was only three, whom the President of the school, Miss Charlotte J. Howells, and the teacher, Miss Frances Richter, carried in their arms from their tenement homes to the single room where the class was started, because they were too badly crippled to walk the short distance.

For many weeks this had to be repeated every morning in the cases of some of the pupils, but finally Mrs. H. H. Rogers defrayed the cost of a wagonette which now is used to take the little cripples to and from their homes. Many of the pupils have to be carried down to the street and from the wagonette to the schoolroom.

The children vary in age from 5 to 12 years and form two classes, one kindergarten and one primary class. Besides the reading lessons they receive manual training, and there are many exhibits of their work to show that the little cripples have taken kindly to this instruction, and may be aided by it to gain a livelihood when they grow up.

This instruction is only part of the work done by the school. Many of the children receive treatment for their ailments which could not possibly be afforded them in their poor homes, and in the Summer months they are always sent to homes in the country, where they can receive the care that they urgently require.

Miss Howells, who is President of the school, in speaking of its needs, said that three of the little children, owing to their infirmities, could not sit down. Nevertheless they prefer the school to their beds at home, and were quite willing to attend though they had to stand up leaning against a table until cribs could be provided. The school is growing fast, and needs larger quarters and another teacher, but unless funds are forthcoming for its support, the Guild in all probability will be compelled to close it altogether.

Lyman Beecher Stowe, Secretary of the Guild, said to a TIMES reporter:

"The West Side School represents only part of the Guild's work. The organization has established one day school and home for crippled children at 2,111 Madison Avenue, which is under the Presidency of Mrs. Merle St. Croix Wright; another school on the lower east side, which is conducted by Mrs. Henry Goldman, and one in West Fifty-seventh Street. All these institutions now have their own managing boards which have undertaken to finance them. We aim to place the West Side School on the same basis, but in order to enable the Guild to do this and to extend its work to other sections of this city, where it is urgently needed, we need about $5,000."

Among the managers of the Guild are Paul K. Ames, the Rev. Dr. H. Pereira Mendes, Dr. Henry Ling Taylor, Dr. James Potter Fiske, and George Haven Putnam. Contributions should be sent to the Treasurer of the Guild, Miss Myra B. Martin at 27 William Street, New York City.

CARS CRASH ON THE BRIDGE.

Women Faint as They See a Trolley Conductor Crushed in Collision.

In view of hundreds of persons, Arthur Duffey of 1,438 Broadway, Brooklyn, a conductor on the Court Street trolley line, was caught between two cars in a collision early yesterday afternoon on the south roadway of the Brooklyn Bridge, about 100 feet from the Manhattan end. His left leg was nearly severed above the knee, his chest was crushed, and he received a scalp wound and internal injuries.

The accident caused several women passengers in both cars to faint, created a great deal of excitement, and drew a big crowd. While Duffey was in the rear of his car, adjusting the trolley pole, and while his car was at a standstill, a Bergen Street car, in charge of Motorman David Siegal of 391 Sutton Avenue, Brooklyn, ran into the Court Street car.

Siegal fell in a faint on the platform of the car when he saw that he had run down Duffey. He was powerless even to reverse the power and release Duffey, whose screams could be heard some distance.

Patrolman Schilp of the Bridge Squad jumped on to the platform of the Bergen Street car and reversed the power, so as to free Duffey, who, with Siegal, was taken to the Hudson Street Hospital.

At the hospital Siegal regained consciousness. He was arrested and locked up at the Oak Street Station. It was said at the hospital that Duffey might not recover. His leg was amputated. Siegal said that his brakes did not work. Traffic was delayed about ten minutes by the accident.

KILLED BY A NEEDLE POINT.

Police Sergeant Shibles Dead of Blood Poisoning—Ill Only Two Days.

Police Sergt. Frederick W. Shibles died yesterday morning in St. Vincent's Hospital, after only two days' illness from blood poisoning. On Wednesday evening, while in the Charles Street Station, to which he was last attached, he pricked his thumb with a needle.

Blood poisoning developed from the wound the next day, and he was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital. In spite of the efforts of the surgeons he grew steadily worse and died yesterday.

Shibles served in several important precincts, notably, in the Tenderloin, where he was stationed for a long time. He was 51 years old. He was appointed a patrolman in 1883, promoted to be a Roundsman in 1892, and Sergeant in 1896.

Sergt. Shibles lived at 1,805 Anthony Avenue, the Bronx. He leaves two children and his brother is in the Police Department.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS A PRIEST

Father Prat to Celebrate His Silver Jubilee To-day.

The silver jubilee of the rectorship of the Rev. Henry A. Prat, pastor of the Church of St. Columba, in West Twenty-fifth Street, will be celebrated by his parishioners to-day. Solemn high mass will be sung by Father Prat himself at 11 o'clock. He will be assisted by Fathers C. J. Crowley and James M. McDonnell.

Archbishop Farley and other church dignitaries will be present. The Rev. Henry A. Brann, pastor of the Church of St. Agnes, and a classmate of Father Prat's, will deliver the sermon. An elaborate musical programme has been arranged.

The Church of St. Columba was established sixty-five years ago. Father Prat was ordained in Rome in 1868, came to this country the same year, and was assigned to the Church of St. Michael, where he was a co-curate with Bishop Spalding of Peoria, Ill. He succeeded Father McAleer as pastor of St. Columba's in March, 1881.

TO LIE IN CATHOLIC GRAVE.

Dispensation for a Protestant—Body Must Not Touch the Ground.

Although he died a Protestant, and his funeral service will be conducted by the Rev. Emil A. Meury of the German Reformed Church, Peter H. Beckman, who died at his home, 444 Palisade Avenue, Jersey City, on Thursday, will be buried in the Holy Name Catholic Cemetery. Mrs. Beckman and her children are members of St. Paul's Roman Catholic Church, and in consideration of this fact Bishop O'Connor granted a dispensation. Mr. Beckman was 78 years old.

The Bishop orders that the coffin be placed in a concrete vault and covered with a stone slab, so that the body shall not touch consecrated ground.

HOW PREACHER'S WIFE DIED.

One Witness Tells of Hanging and Another of Husband's Action.

NEW ALBANY, Ind., March 17.—In the trial to-day of the Rev. U. Sutherlin, charged with the murder of his wife, Mrs. Laura Whittingill testified that Sutherlin drove away from his barn two hours before Mrs. Sutherlin's body was found.

Lee Pennington testified that he found the body of Mrs. Sutherlin in the house with a rope tied around the neck and the other end tied to a transom. There was no evidence of a struggle. A swing had been taken from the barn and the rope tied around the woman's neck.

BROTHER KILLED BY TRAIN.

He Becomes Confused When Two Engines Approach Him.

PHILADELPHIA, March 17.—Confused by the shrill blasts of locomotives, Brother Peter (John O'Leary) of the Order of Christian Brothers, an instructor at the Catholic Protectory for Boys, near Norristown, Penn., was killed by a freight train on the Pennsylvania Railroad to-day.

Brother Peter was walking along the rails, when trains approached from opposite directions. The whistles bewildered him, and in attempting to step aside he walked in front of a train and was run down.

$300 Ring Found in the Snow.

While clearing the snow from a sidewalk in front of a house in Hooper Street, Williamsburg, yesterday, Edward Dooling, 15 years old, of 13 Nostrand Avenue, Williamsburg, found a diamond ring valued at $300. Dooling went into a jewelry store to ascertain the value of the stone. The jeweler kept it, saying he thought it was stolen. The boy complained to the police, and a roundsman got back the ring. The police are looking for the owner.

CONRIED MOVED RUBBISH AND THEATRE OPENED

Complaint Had Been Filed Against the Irving Place.

MISTAKE ABOUT A LICENSE

It Is Now Said the Manager Hadn't One—Trouble Ahead for Police Officials.

Local theatre managers are having almost as much trouble with the renewal of their licenses this year as they had two years ago. The trouble then, however, was with the Fire Department.

This year the Police Department is the obstacle. Commissioner Bingham's activity in overhauling the Bureau of Licenses, which is at Police Headquarters, has resulted in the preferring of charges by Chief Inspector Moses Cortright against Inspector Dennis Sweeney of the Sixth Inspection District. It is alleged that the Fort George Hotel, at Fort George, was allowed to give concerts and sell intoxicants between July 5 and Sept. 5 last without a license. The place is in Inspector Sweeney's district.

Sweeney's trial is set down for Thursday next. It is said that several Captains, in whose precincts alleged violations of a similar nature have occurred, will also be called upon to face charges of neglect of duty and conduct unbecoming officers of the Police Department.

Inspector Max Schmittberger, who is now absent on sick leave, may also have to stand trial on account of the Irving Place Theatre. Gen. Bingham declined yesterday to discuss the possibility of charges against the Inspector.

Theatrical managers were busy yesterday and Friday night, hunting up their licenses. Most of them were found and posted in conspicuous places last night. Manager Springer of the Grand Opera House made an unsuccessful search for his, but a duplicate was issued when it was discovered at Police Headquarters that a license had been granted.

Lawyer Dittenhoefer appeared for Herr

The Irving Place Theatre was opened last night. A pile of material which had been stored under the stage was removed, and after an Inspector of the Bureau of Buildings had made a report to that effect to Deputy Supt. Gordon, a permit was issued, and the theatre opened its doors to the public.

Commissioner Bingham received a letter yesterday from Supt. Murphy of the Building Bureau, calling attention to the fact that there was a complaint against the Irving Place Theatre because of obstructions under the stage, and the obstructions had not been removed. Supt. Murphy further asserted that Mr. Conried's attention had been called to this state of affairs but that he had made no effort to clear away the débris. Consequently the Building Department refused to issue a permit for the theatre to open.

This was taken to mean that Herr Conried was mistaken when he said that he obtained a license for the Irving Place Theatre last May. Apparently his application was referred by the Police Department to the Bureau of Buildings and was there held up because the complaint was then on file.

Communication was opened with Herr Conried and employes of the theatre began to cart away the material under the stage. Deputy Supt. Gordon visited the theatre last night, and on finding that the law had been complied with granted a permit. A letter to this effect was sent to Daniel Slattery, secretary to Commissioner Bingham, and acting Inspector Hodgins was notified to go to the theatre and see that the violation had been remedied. The Inspector being satisfied the performance was allowed to be held.

Herr Conried was not in the Yorkville Court yesterday morning to answer the summons obtained by Acting Police Inspector Hodgins because no license could be shown for the theatre. I. M. Dittenhoefer, son and law partner of ex-Judge Dittenhoefer, Herr Conried's counsel, appeared for him, and on his application the case was adjourned.

TO FIGHT SAN JOSE SCALE.

Jerseymen Meet and Tell of Its Ravages—Situation Alarming.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., March 17.—Because thousands of fruit, shade, and forest trees are being despoiled in this county by the San José scale a meeting of the Morris County Agricultural Society was held in the Court House here this afternoon and measures suggested for a campaign against the pest.

Members of the society told of orchards being wholly ruined and of all trees on fine estates of wealthy New Yorkers laid waste. Prof. Dickinson of the State Board of Agriculture reported the findings of Inspectors sent out by the State, and he said the situation was alarming. The State experiment station would do all in its power to assist in destroying the scale, he said. He asked that the local authorities see to it that all infected trees are cut down.

The insect is as large as a pinhead and yellow in color. It rests on the bark of trees and sucks the juices out through a long beak. It is carried from tree to tree by insects, birds, or animals which may pass close enough to an infected tree to brush against it. As a remedy, sulphur, lime, and salt are recommended.

STAR HAL MANGLES A MAN.

Stallion Terribly Injures Myron D. Walsh at Wellsville.

WELLSVILLE, N. Y., March 17.—Myron D. Walsh, a well-known horseman and business man, was nearly killed this afternoon by the famous stallion, Star Hal, which was recently bought at the Madison Square sale by Wellsville sportsmen.

Star Hal attacked a visitor at the stables, and when Walsh attempted to drive off the horse it turned upon him. He was terribly injured by the animal's teeth and hoofs before a hostler dragged him from the stall. His right arm was lacerated and broken in two places, his right leg broken in two places, and he was internally injured.

POLITICAL FEUDIST FREE.

Second Man Acquitted on Charge Based on Fatal Fight.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 17.—George H. Dyer was to-night found not guilty of the murder of Policeman Patrick Kearney. The jury required only twenty minutes to reach its verdict, and several of the jurors shook hands with the defendant after the announcement of the result.

The trial was the second for murder growing out of the general pistol battle in which partisans of the two local political factions engaged in front of the City Hall on Feb. 9 last. Kearney and "Babe" Dyer were killed in the affray. Timothy McBride was acquitted of the murder of Dyer last week. McBride was a member of one faction and the Dyers of the other.

NEW WESTINGHOUSE PLANT.

$1,000,000 Concern to Employ 1,000 Hands to be Built in Bloomfield, N. J.

Special to The New York Times.

BLOOMFIELD, N. J., March 17.—The Westinghouse Electric Company has purchased several acres of land in the Watsessing section of Bloomfield, along the Erie and Lackawanna Railroads, and will spend $1,000,000 in erecting and installing a large plant.

The property purchased has been used for a number of years as a baseball ground. Work will be started in a few weeks, and when the structure is completed employment will be given to 1,000 hands.

POSTAL SAFE BLOWERS, LED BY 'GAY CAT,' JAILED

5 Clever Cracksmen Caught Red-Handed in Suffern Station.

WORKED MANY SMALL TOWNS

The "Gay Cat," Gentlemanly and Innocent, Always Went Ahead to Pave the Way—Fat Spoils.

Postal Inspectors J. E. Jacobs and Thomas Meyer believe that they have at last bagged the gang of safe blowers that has been robbing by wholesale the Post Offices in small border towns of New York and New Jersey for more than three months. Five men were caught by the Chief of Police of Suffern as they were about to blow up the Post Office safe there early yesterday morning. They gave their names as James O'Brien, Charles E. Clarke, James Hackett, Patrick Burke, and James Broderick, all said to be aliases.

Marshal Henkel brought all the prisoners to this city, and on their being unable to furnish the $2,500 bail fixed by United States Commissioner Shields they were sent to the Tombs.

According to Inspectors Jacobs and Meyer of the New York office and Inspectors Cortelyou and Gibbons of New Jersey, who have been on the trail of the men for some time, their operations began in December and have been continued without let-up ever since. Their plan of action was generally as follows:

One member of the gang, usually Burke, would be sent ahead to reconnoitre the district and pick out an easy job for his pals to crack. This man was known as the "gay cat." He was chosen for the position largely on account of his innocent and respectable appearance.

When he found a Post Office that looked sufficiently "easy," the "gay cat" sent back word and the others would arrive to do the trick. Once in possession of the spoils the gang would disperse, to meet again at Paterson. They made that city their headquarters, and kept in touch with a large gang of crooks whose head is a famous yeggman, said to be a master among his craft.

The "gay cat," however, did not join in these Paterson reunions. He hustled on to the next town and sized up the situation, so as to have everything ready for another haul the following week. This programme was repeated with but slight variations in sixteen localities in the same number of weeks.

Among the New York towns that suffered from the visits of the safe blowers were Haverstraw, Campbell Hall, Pearl River, and Marlboro. Inspector Gibbons said that in his State the "gay cat" had proved a successful pathfinder at Hackettstown, Ridgewood, Andover, Lafayette, Stanhope, and other places. In each case the Post Office safes were blown open and rifled of their contents.

One member of this gang is said to have been a side partner of the notorious Gussie De Ford, the originator of the nitro-glycerine method of safe blowing. This man, who is known among the yeggs as the "Tecumseh Kind," for a long time acted as the "gay cat" for De Ford's gang. His youthful looks were a great help to him, and a day or two after his arrival in town some safe was generally blown and no one had a notion of who did it.

His skill at picking soft jobs was at fault once, though, and as a result of his steering De Ford up against the New York Central station at Churchville, near Rochester, De Ford was arrested later in a Bowery lodging house. He would have landed in prison had he not escaped by jumping from the car window on his way there. He is now in France living on the money other members of his gang send him as tribute.

CHRYSTIE HAD TO PAY UP.

Racing Motorist's Machine Knocked Farmer's Wagon Into a Ditch.

Special to The New York Times.

EGG HARBOR CITY, N. J., March 17.—A party of motorists, including Walter Chrystie, the auto racer, in his racing machine, the White Flyer, passed through this city to-day on their way to the seashore. On the way to town was Fred Sibat, a farmer, driving a spirited horse attached to a farm wagon.

As the animal saw the snorting automobile he got frightened and bolted. The machine, which was going at the rate of from forty to fifty miles an hour, hit the wagon and threw it into a ditch.

Sibat jumped and was unhurt, while the horse and wagon were pulled from the ditch by the crowd that gathered. The motorists did not stop. Sibat at once swore out a warrant and the police of Atlantic City were asked to hold the party if they should come to that place.

Later word was received that Detective Miller of the Atlantic City police force had stopped the party and arrested Chrystie. Sibat was satisfied to accept $12 for the damage to his wagon, and after making payment Chrystie was allowed to go.

CAUGHT BY DECOY.

Boy Accused of Theft Answered an Advertisement Intended for Him.

By a stroke of strategy Detectives Raynes and McDonnell locked up in the Tenderloin Station last night Vincent Varecker, 17 years old, who said he lived at 1,366 Avenue A. He is charged with stealing a Wall Street lawyer's $70 overcoat.

The complainant was Hyman Westerman, a tailor, of 70 West Thirty-eighth Street. He hired Vincent a week or so ago through an advertisement. On Friday a week ago he sent Vincent out with the $70 overcoat. He never saw Vincent again until yesterday, when in answer to another advertisement put in several newspapers by the detectives Vincent applied for the errand boy's job at the shop of a friendly Broadway tailor, who had been posted. Vincent confessed, the detectives say.

To Rebuild Queens Courthouse.

Borough President Bermel of Queens Borough announced yesterday that it had been decided to rebuild the County Court House in Long Island City. The building was partly burned in November, 1904. Many lawyers believed that the Court House should be located on a site more distant from the railroad tracks. President Bermel said yesterday that to change the site would require a special act of the Legislature placing the question before the voters of the borough.

MAKES ARTIFICIAL ALBUMEN.

German Scientist's Discovery That Is Attracting Attention.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Consul Pike of Zittau reports that an interesting discovery is being discussed by the German press, which refers to the result of a recent investigation by Prof. Emil Fisher of Berlin. He writes:

"It is contended that the principal nourishment reuired by the human body for its maintenance is albumen, according to the renowned professor of physiology, Pfeiffer, the source of all muscular strength. For this reason it has at all times been the endeavor of our learned men to obtain more knowledge of this important ingredient of our daily food. Up till now all such efforts have been in vain, but, it was recognized that were it possible to make artificial albumen, a complete change in the present system of nourishing the human body would eb brought about and would render the now so necessary meat foods to a great extent dispensable.

"Prof. Emil Fisher, director of the leading chemical institution, the Berlin University, has gained the credit of having accomplished the first analysis of natural albumen. He has established the composition of the various ingredients, some of which he has succeeded in producing artificially. The substance thus obtained he has called 'polypeptide,' and it is said to possess a large number of the properties characteristic of natural albumen."

RIVER STOLE BOTH FARMS.

But If Boy Had Made Watch Trade He Might Now Be a Millionaire.

Special to The New York Times.

OMAHA, Neb., March 17.—The peculiar manner in which the erratic Missouri River eats up fortunes in a day and carries the work of a lifetime away, has been exemplified again near Omaha.

In 1868 Samuel J. Belville of Herman, Neb., then 11 years old, and his father came to Omaha. Soon after their arrival a real estate agent tried, in vain, to induce the elder Belville to invest in city property. The prospects were not then alluring, and the Belvilles, who wanted a farm, declared that the city was no place in which to bring up children.

At this point in the discussion the boy, Sam, pulled out his silver watch and looked at it with boyish pride. The real estate agent saw it and said:

"I'll tell you what I'll do, boy. Give me that watch and I'll give you this block of land in exchange. Just hold it, my boy, as an investment."

But the boy said his watch cost $35, and he wasn't going to trade it for a few rods of Nebraska dirt.

The family moved to Burt County, and the father took up a claim. Twenty years passed. They had improved the claim until it was valued at $30,000. Then, one Spring, the fickle Missouri, all of a sudden switched over to the west just far enough to sweep away the Belville homestead.

In the meantime, the son had grown to manhood and also owned a farm. This also has just been wiped out by the river, the two changes in which have left the family almost penniless.

The block of land which the boy refused to take in 1868 in exchange for his silver watch is at Sixteenth and Farnam Streets. It is now worth $1,500,000.

DIDN'T SIGN BEFORE DEATH.

Codicil, Witnessed After Testator Expired, Held to be Illegal.

Special to The New York Times.

KINGSTON, N. Y., March 17.—Hiram G. Olds of this city executed a will in 1904, by the terms of which he gave Mrs. Margaret Gerhardt of this city $500, and the balance of his property he gave to his wife. Early in February he became ill of an abcess on the lungs. On Feb. 21 an immediate operation was decided upon as the only means of saving his life. Two physicians were present.

One physician put everything in readiness for the operation and the other wrote the codicil that Olds dictated. Olds directed that the bequest to Mrs. Gerhardt, provided for in his will, should be revoked. He signed the instrument, as did the physician who drew it. The other physician was busy preparing for the operation and did not see Olds sign the paper.

Olds died before he could be operated upon. When his will and codicil were presented to Surrogate Davis for probate, Dr. William Kemble and Dr. J. D. W. [illegible], who had attended him, told in detail the circumstances in the execution of the codicil. The names of both appeared at the end as witnesses, but it was admitted that one of them had signed his name after both had discovered that their patient was dead. Upon this ground probate of the codicil was denied. The case is said by lawyers to be without parallel in the United States.

A NOVEL THAT SATIRIZES SOCIALISM

"The Scarlet Empire," Written by a Self-made Millionaire Manufacturer---A Story That Reduces Socialistic Theories to an Absurdity.

DAVID M. PARRY.
author of
"THE SCARLET EMPIRE"

Amusing Picture of Life in an Imaginary Country Where the Theories of Social Democracy Are Supposed to Prevail---A Forthcoming Book That Is Likely to Provoke Discussion.

SINCE Bellamy's "Looking Backward" no book has had such an evident mission to show the impossible tangle, the hopeless lethargy in which the Socialists' dream would involve the world as "The Scarlet Empire," written by David M. Parry, President of the National Manufacturers' Association, to be published at the end of this month by the Bobbs-Merrill Publishing Company of Indianapolis.

It can scarcely be considered so seriously as "Looking Backward" from a literary point of view, but it is unusual in its quality of imaginative talent, if not so fair in its entire appreciation of the Socialists' present premises. It is a book that promises to be very widely talked about and very roughly handled by them. "The Scarlet Empire" loses some of its force in the same fashion as the Socialists lose a great deal of theirs—it does not logically excuse the plutocrat, nor does it wholly explain the Socialist. The author establishes a Social Democracy such as the Socialists talk about, but not such as they expect.

"The Scarlet Empire" is the first answer from a man of National prominence to the riotous debate for all kinds of equality.

If it is not literature, it is at any rate an opinion uttered by capital upon the conditions that would prevail if Social Democracy were attained.

Its author is a self-made man, a business man, an enemy of labor unions, a believer in the right of every man to work where and when and for what he pleases without interference. As President of the National Manufacturers' Association he represents over 3,000 of the leading manufacturing establishments of the country, and he was among the first of the manufacturers to make a stand against the Government ratemaking proposition because of its Socialistic tendencies.

He stands for individual liberty, the rights of private ownership and property, and "The Scarlet Empire" is his prophecy of the doom that awaits the Socialists' theory of equality.

His formula of reply is also a dream, but he does not take himself as seriously as the Socialist, for "The Scarlet Empire" is a satire, not in a vicious sense, because it is not provokingly satirical, but in the sense that seems unavoidable because of the weird conditions that would actually prevail if the Social Democracy existed.

The story is told by a Socialist, in the first person, who jumps off the long pier at Coney Island into the sea, preferring death to the "indigent circumstances" his creed has left him in.

"There can be no greater hell than the earth" he lives on, says this man of ideas, and so, despairing of a Social Democracy, he decides to "enter into the democracy of the dead."

Officer Rafferty is not quick enough to prevent this, being probably a fat Coney Island policeman who couldn't swim.

Instead of drowning, he sinks "like a plummet for what seemed many leagues, and yielding to the dreamy sensations that come to the drowning," he finds himself at last stretched on a slab of rock and gazing at a "fishlike creature" that stood leaning over him with a knife in his finny arm.

Instead of killing him, the "fishlike creature" turns out to be a human being from the lost continent of Atlantis, and he restores him to life.

"I am only one of the common herd who, penniless and hungry, drop themselves into the sea," says the restored Socialist.

"You are a citizen of the upper world," replies the citizen of Atlantis, "and of course you do not know that all men are penniless in the country to which I belong. Money is of no value whatever among us, and as for self-destruction, rest your conscience, for that is not counted by us a crime."

"Is this not some cavern along the coast, and are you not a citizen of the United States?" asks the Socialist, for the fish head was but a helmet, and he sees before him a man of athletic build with a beard.

"I know nothing of your United States. I am a fisherman, sometimes a surgeon, and I am connected with the Fishery Department of Atlantis, or, as it is often called, the Scarlet Empire. This chamber is not on the coast, but at the bottom of the sea," he says.

"The Scarlet Empire," he explains, is a Social Democracy, "the most advanced form of government in history." It is a land of many laws, and among these laws is one limiting the number of words which a man may speak in a day.

"This is a verbometer," he says, pointing to an instrument hanging about his neck. "It is a curious contrivance, and the inspectors of speech alone have the knowledge to read from it the number of words it registers. I am limited to one thousand words a day."

"The majority rules in Atlantis," continues the surgeon, "and the individual must obey implicitly. The law placing a limitation on speech was based on the discovery, made generations ago, that an unrestrained tongue leads frequently to crime and conspiracy; besides, there is the further consideration that it is not just, save where the occupation makes exception necessary, for one individual to talk more than another—it is not in consonance with the fundamental idea of universal equality which the Democracy seeks to enforce."

He asks the name of his rescuer.

"I have no name," was the reply. "My number is 713. Tradition has it that in ancient times my family name was Brine, at least my wife so asserts in private."

Doubtless the author of "The Scarlet Empire" has based his story and the manner of its telling upon Lord Bacon's "New Atlantis," a fictitious philosophic commonwealth, which was itself designed after More's "Utopia" and Campanella's "City of the Sun."

Atlantis was first mentioned by Plato, who described it as an island larger than Lybya and Asia Minor together, lying off the Pillars of Hercules, in the Atlantic Ocean. Plato gives a beautiful picture of the interior of this imaginary island, and enriches it with a fabulous history. It has also been supposed that the New World must have been the Atlantis of Plato's description.

Mr. Parry's Empire is a fictitious continent, like Atlantis, rediscovered by him, under the sea, governed by a Social Democracy in existence so long that its millions of inhabitants have forgotten what individuality and temperament and heart and love mean.

"THE HALL OF CURIOSITIES In Atlantis where the wealth and coin of the world was buried."

Those few who have retained some human affections and some sympathies with art and literature and poetry are kept in insane asylums and are known as atavars.

The name is derived from atavism, taken from the Latin word atavus, "a great-grandfather," an "ancestor."

Atavism signifies the reappearance of peculiarities or traits after the lapse of one or more generations, either in the lower animals or in man.

In this underground world of Social Democracy every one dressed exactly alike, a scarlet robe belted at the waist. It was lighted by radium, its motive power was radium, and obedience to the law was enforced by over one million inspectors.

The Socialist hero from Coney Island, who in seeking suicide had come into his own scheme of living, is attended by a doctor, who informs him that he must take "Prescription No. 49."

The medicine is brought, and proves to be so nauseous that he rebels when it is offered to him again. Then the doctor, reinforced by six men, appears, and the doctor says:

"I learn, Sir, that you decline to take your medicine. This is an unheard of act of rebellion! Are you aware that not for five hundred years has any one refused to obey the State physicians?"

The Social Democracy, obedient to its ideals, seizes him forcibly and pours the black stuff down his throat. Afterward the doctor gives him his first lesson.

"In this Democracy," he says, "which has stood the test of centuries, the individual yields implicit obedience in all things to the majority. You must acknowledge, even though you are an American, that the will of the majority must be considered supreme. The individual is merely one atom of the whole. The majority knows what is good for all, and when it speaks the individual must yield his opinion. If the various individuals were allowed to follow their own notions as to what they should or should not do, it is plain to be seen that anarchy would result. Now, this prescription to which you have objected was discovered thousands of years ago, and it has come down to us with all the rest of the blessed heritage of those days. Its efficacy has been proved in millions of cases, and is not open to argument. The majority has decreed that it should be prescribed whenever the heart beats abnormally. To prove this, I have only to refer you to medical edict No. 489,667,542. You thus see that in this land the most solicitous care is taken of the individual, and you need never worry your mind as to what you shall eat, drink, or do."

The hero is turned over to an Inspector of Dormitories and he becomes a resident in one of these large chambers with about fifty others.

In the morning he runs afoul of the Prayer Inspector.

At the sound of a bell the inhabitants are compelled to kneel toward the east, and remain, heads bowed, for five minutes. The hero miscalculates the time, and looks up too soon. An Inspector steps up to him at once.

"Your number?" he asks.

He has not yet been "numbered" by the Social Democracy, but is only a citizen-elect, for whom the doctor is responsible to the State.

The doctor explains to him that if he count two hundred slowly, it will be an exact calculation of the time he should pray, and when the hero inquires what the rest are praying, the doctor is unable to know what their prayers are about—he only knows the mathematical tension of the ceremony.

"That was an Inspector of Prayers," adds the doctor; "he will report you for not praying the required limit of time, but I think, under the circumstances, you will get only the minimum of punishment."

The chambers were all made of a scarlet substance like red marble, and when the hero filed in to breakfast he sat down on a bench at a long table and was served "with a cup of fish gruel and one egg."

"I think there must have been about five swallows in the cup, and it was gone in less than a minute," he soliloquizes captiously. "I noticed that the others took longer with their portions; in fact, they nursed it, and were loath to see it disappear. I wished dearly for another egg, or at least a replenishment of my gruel cup."

One of the Atlantis Socialists secreted his cup in his blouse and tried to bunko the waiter into a belief that he had received none.

But this Social Democracy never made a mistake. So up steps an Inspector to the unhappy youth.

"Why did you do this?" he asks.

"I was hungry, Sir, and wanted more," was the meek reply.

"You will follow me," remarked the Inspector sternly.

"He is under arrest," explained the doctor, "for committing one of the most serious crimes known in Atlantis—that of seeking to obtain more than one's just portion of food."

He goes to the trial of this young man, and his description of what he sees on the way, the "streets of Atlantis," its pillars with strange garlands of light twisting about them, and the dull, listless, lethargic movement of the people that thronged those streets is a vivid bit of imagination.

"In vain I looked for some one with a sprightly step, or with a glint of interest, hope, or purpose in his countenance," he says, "not one among them gave me even a passing glance."

"Doctor, I have not seen a single woman," he says to his preceptor.

"Use your eyes. There is one!" says the doctor.

"I thought that was a man!" he exclaims.

"We are all on a level here, you know," replies the doctor. "In ancient times woman was an object of beauty. There is no necessity for enticements now, as the State manages the marriages, thereby rendering obsolete the barbarous custom of being wooed and won."

Under the influence of an "atavar," a beautiful young girl called Astrae, the Judge reduces the punishment against the young man of plutocratic appetite for whom she pleads, from thirty days on bread and water to three, a lapse of Socialist laws that later almost takes from him his card of citizenship.

For violating Rule 32 in the code concerning prayers, the hero was condemned to go without his dinner.

"What is the religion of Atlantis?" he asks.

"To tell the truth, I don't know what they do say when they pray. Perhaps they say nothing," replies the doctor. "There is a general feeling that calamity would overtake the nation if the habit were broken."

"It looks as if religion may correctly be said to have gone to seed in this country."

"I suppose that would be a valid conclusion, but hereafter you must not neglect to pray in accordance with the laws," is the doctor's ambiguous warning.

The more this Socialist from the upper world sees of Atlantis the less convinced is he that he is alive. "Perhaps, after all, I did die," he soliloquizes.

His first ride on an Atlantis car is nerve racking.

"How fast are we traveling?" he asks.

"About one forsakh or league a minute," replies the doctor, which was equivalent to 200 miles an hour.

"Electric power?" gasps the stranger.

"No; electric force is little used in Atlantis. We

"An Englishwoman in New York": Flat Hunting

Thinks It Best to Import Her Aunt to Act as Chaperon---British and American Attitudes Toward the Boarding House---Discoveries That Made Aunt Louisa Open Her Eyes.

ONE of the latest arriving ships of the American Line brought me a chaperon.

It was my Aunt Louisa.

Now, my Aunt Louisa is a typical British matron, and, in her eyes, the greatest crime a woman, especially a young one, can commit is to do anything that is "without precedent."

Between hard breathing as she walked down the gangway, and during the hour when she watched, all aghast, while the Custom House Inspector pulled her belongings apart, refusing to believe, even in the face of her pronounced English costume and decided English speech, that she was not an American dressmaker smuggling English-made hats and dresses, all unstylish, into these United States, she fixed her lorgnette upon me again and again, remarking, "This is without precedent, entirely without preeedent!"

Then she would turn to the unhappy young American who demanded to know whether her skunk fur caps were sealskin or bearskin, saying crushingly:

"Young person, your impudence surpasses anything I have ever seen! In the first place, it is none of your affair what kind of fur that cape is, and in the second place, it is your business to know all the different kinds of furs, else why are you here?"

There is something about Aunt Louisa that discourages familiarity on the part of those whom she designates as "persons," this world being divided, according to her code, into three classes—"ladies," "gentlemen," and "persons." This latter class is of common gender, consisting of either male or female. When the person is under 30 she addressed it as "young person"; over 30 it is merely a "person."

"Without precedent, without precedent!" murmured my aunt all during the customs inspection. But there came a time when she was almost too shocked even to make that remark. It was at the end of our trip from the dock to my up-town boarding house, when I handed the cabby the $4 which he demanded as his fare.

"It is very inconvenient living so far from the ship," remarked Aunt Louisa. "Four shillings is a large cab fare."

"Four dollars, not four shillings," I corrected gently.

"And how much is that in English money?" she snapped.

"Sixteen shillings, about," I answered.

"Call an officer!" she exclaimed excitedly, and before I could stop her she had addressed a passing policeman.

"Here, bobby, arrest this man!"

"Don't call him 'bobby,' Aunt Louisa!" I exclaimed hurriedly, "and you can't arrest the cabby. His fare is right. Only millionaires ride in cabs here. I ought to have told you that."

"What shall I call the man? Is he not a 'bobby'? I fancied he was a 'bobby.' And you must be mistaken. Two and sixpence would be the legal fare for a journey of this sort!"

I hustled her into the door of my boarding house, she murmuring all the way up to the nice steam-heated room I had hired for her:

"Without precedent, without precedent!"

To be sure, one does speak of a policeman in London as a "bobby," and, to be sure, one never heard of a sixteen-shilling cab fare, except on a foggy night, when one has been known to pay a pound to be driven two miles.

I had expected to remain indefinitely in the boarding house. I have found it both an interesting and enlightening life. But Aunt Louisa found everything so "without precedent" and therefore so unbearable that we immediately started flat-hunting.

I should, perhaps, state that in London it is not "the thing" to live in a boarding house. When Americans come over and settle in the Bayswater and Bloomsbury boarding house districts we English forgive them and receive them into our homes, and sometimes into our hearts, because they are Americans, and we think that Americans may do many things that are "without precedent" and still not be ostracised.

If these same Americans remain long in London they move out of the boarding houses into "lodgings" and become "exclusive." I have heard some of them say that they have almost died of the "exclusiveness"—being to themselves in a bedroom and sitting room, eating all alone at the big round sitting room table and speaking during meals only to the servant or landlady who charges them an inclusive price for "rooms, cooking and attendance," although I will admit she more often than not runs in a bill for what she calls "service." The extra bill for "service" has driven more than one American man in London to profanity, while it has been known to send dozens of American women to the American Embassy, in Victoria Street, or the American Consulate, in St. Helen's Place, to ask for the "arrest of the robber."

Knowing this, let my American readers judge gently of my Aunt Louisa for her desire to arrest one whom she considered an American robber impersonating a cabby.

As I have said, the boarding house is not for Aunt Louisa. She does not like it, and one might also be honest and say that the boarding house does not like her. She is the most British Britisher that boarding house has ever seen. My own idiosyncrasies it has treated leniently. Being younger than Aunt Louisa I am, perhaps, less tightly knit together and am more pliable and adaptable. The fact is I came over here with the intention of adapting myself whenever, after due reflection, I found your American customs better than my British ones. Aunt Louisa did not come for that purpose. She came because I had done something "without precedent" in coming here and living here alone. She came as guardian angel—that is, as chaperon.

On the second day Aunt Louisa said: "My dear, I will not live in a boarding house. I will not sit at table with people I do not know."

"The landlady will introduce you," I ventured.

"I will not be introduced!" she exclaimed irately. "Why should one be introduced? This terrible American custom of introducing is entirely without precedent. One does not introduce in England unless there is some reason for it."

Now, I think my Aunt Louisa is right. You do introduce too much over here. Many times I have been shocked at having men introduced to me without my being asked beforehand whether it would be agreeable. It puts one in an embarrassing position. Both introductions in person and introductions by letter are given without the slightest reason. In England we make a ceremony of introducing. In this country you make a habit of it, and a very bad habit it is, too.

But, mind you, I did not admit this to Aunt Louisa. I merely blinked and looked sidewise, as though a mote had entered my eye, and when Aunt Louisa demanded to know if it were true that there were charming flats in New York where one could live quite nicely and economically, and with one maid, I said quickly:

"Yes, Aunt Louisa," but I made a mental reservation. I wasn't at all sure one could live with the maid, even if the maid could be found. Even the finding seemed to me doubtful. So I kept my own counsel and went flat-hunting with Aunt Louisa.

"It is really a very nice flat," said Aunt Louisa when we had looked at the first Harlem apartment on our list.

"The deposit," said the agent, "will be $10, and the flat will be ready for you to-morrow."

"A deposit!" exclaimed my aunt. "If I take the flat I will give you a proper reference!"

"Certainly, Ma'am," said the agent. "We don't take people here without reference."

"But one would not give a reference and a deposit. I have not decided to take this flat. I wish to look further. If I take it I will give you a proper reference, and you will be paid promptly at the end of the quarter."

The agent gasped. "The flat'll be rented to-morrow if you don't snap it up now you've got the chance. Ten dollars deposit, the rest of the month's rent the day you move in."

My chaperon stalked grandly out of the little hall, not so much as deigning to answer the man.

"We have evidently," she said, addressing me on the way down stairs, "got into the East End districts of New York, yet I should not have supposed that the lower classes could pay that rent, nor would one think such comforts and conveniences would be given them."

"This is not East End, really," I said. "It's a nice part, and the address is 'West.'"

"Then why a deposit and rental in advance? And how could that person expect us to decide? One wants to look at a flat several times before engaging it."

I was just as bewildered as Aunt Louisa. One does not take a flat as one buys a yard of calico, on the spot. A responsible person should not pay in advance. And why pay monthly instead of quarterly?

After a week's flat-hunting I am a bit wiser, and am not sure whether or not I like your method better than ours. Although we have found some landlords who said they let their apartments only on a year's agreement, a very great many of them are willing to let merely from month to month. I understand that even houses are often rented in this way, and that only very occasionally is more than a year's agreement insisted upon. In London you hire your house for ninety-nine years—sometimes you are able to obtain the short end of a lease and are obliged to sign for only twenty-eight or thirty years.

In hiring flats it is almost an unheard-of thing for a landlord to allow only one year's agreement. Three years would be considered a short lease, but you really ought to take a flat for seven years. Of course you may sublet if you can obtain the permission of your landlord.

In London you pay your rent at the end of the quarter, or rather you are expected to pay within fourteen or twenty-one days after the end of the quarter. If you forget it you receive a polite note, and after you have received several of these notes you generally pay. It would be very discourteous not to pay your rent. And besides, the landlord will take your furniture if you don't pay, so most London people like to pay their rent when they conveniently can.

In the East End of London the very poor people pay rent by the week or the month, and often they pay in advance. That is because they have no furniture worth mentioning, and they could easily move out in the night.

But, as I have said, we are wiser now. In five days we learned that flats were taken on sight if they suited. Once Aunt Louisa and I took a flat in London. We looked at it on the 1st of May, we decided that we wanted it in July, and we moved into it on the 25th of September, which is one of the "quarter days" in London. Some time after the end of the first quarter we paid our rent. At the end of two years we wanted to dispose of the flat, and it took us seven months to find somebody who would take it over, and it took the landlord two months and nineteen days to hunt up that gentleman's references and finally decide to accept him, instead of my aunt, as the lessee.

Ah, we do things, all things, more deliberately in England. We think we are happier and live the longer for it. We hate to be hurried. Sometimes I find myself wondering if I could ever learn to hurry as you Americans do. Hurry means worry, and worry means grow old, sans eyes, sans teeth, &c. I have noticed something of the sans eyes about your young women and young men. New York is a thriving place for oculists. London is a larger place than New York, but I am sure that we have not a quarter as many men and women under 30 wearing glasses as you have in New York.

But you are not sans teeth. I never tire of admiring the sound and even teeth of the average American man and woman I meet. We have in England a theory that Americans should have bad teeth because they eat so many sweets. Perhaps you ought to have, but you don't have.

But to go back to the flat-hunt. Aunt Louisa and I have found a flat, and under protest we have paid down our deposit. It is a very pretty flat, and very cheap. At the very least we should have to pay $200 more a year for it in London than we do here, and besides that we should have our coal bill to pay and be under the necessity of heating our water for baths and dishwashing. It is one of those flats where you open your front door by pressing a button in your kitchen, which device I never happen to have seen in London. We have been delighted to find that the doorknobs, the keys, the mantel mirror, all go with the flat. In London they often go with the tenant—that is, the tenant takes his own doorknob, keys, and mantel. In London, if you happen to find these things in the house or flat they are mentioned in the agreement or lease you sign, and you may be asked to pay extra for these "fixtures."

"The former tenants would like to sell the furnishings of the kitchen, I suppose?" asked Aunt Louisa, looking about the kitchen.

"Why, no, Ma'am, not as I knows of," replied the janitor.

"Then will you kindly have them removed directly?" asked she.

The janitor rubbed his forehead. "Which furnishings, Ma'am?" he said. "I don't see none."

"Why, the table, the icebox, the glass-cupboard, the range," said Aunt Louisa.

"I'm sorry they don't suit you," said the janitor, "but the landlord he can't tear the flat down. And really, Ma'am, unless you've got extra elegant stove and cupboard and washtubs I don't see why these won't do."

"Washtubs!" exclaimed Aunt Louisa.

Here I interposed to explain to my aunt that the supposed table was a number of washtubs, and then I shook my head at the janitor, who was about to call attention to a pulley line outside the kitchen window. I knew all about pulley lines from my English girl friend who had married the New Yorker, but I understood that to Aunt Louisa the idea of having washing "done in" would be so barbaric that she would immediately set sail for a city where one not only puts one's own laundry work out, but allows one's servants a "washing allowance."

"Very quaint!" remarked my aunt. "We can nail them up and use them for a table if the landlord will not remove them, but it is most peculiar that any one should have fastened them in."

When she was finally made to understand that the gas range, cupboard, and icebox were "fixtures" for which there was no extra charge, she exclaimed "Without precedent!" all the way back to the now detested boarding house.

By dint of much persuasion and a small extra added to the price of our board we have succeeded in securing a table to ourselves in a corner of the boarding house dining room, where nobody will be introduced to my poor Aunt Louisa, and here we eat and wait while we hunt furniture and prepare for our début as housekeepers in New York.

And we have advertised for a well-trained maidservant "to work for and wait on two ladies." Aunt Louisa was convinced that we must have two—a cook and a house-parlormaid, but I have gained her consent to try one maid, at least for a time. We want to engage the maid before we move into the flat. "After we have engaged her she will want to give her present mistress a month's notice," said Aunt Louisa.

"They only give a week here," I said unconcernedly.

"Shocking!" exclaimed the poor lady; "but I suppose when one is in Rome, and so forth!"

Having advertised, we wait for answers. Having offered what seems to us to be preposterous wages, we feel we have every reason to expect something rather fine in the way of a maidservant.

derive all our energy, heat, and light from radium."

The doctor draws an analogy between Atlantis, "which became submerged by the sea before the dawn of history," and the Garden of Eden, that symbolic place of harmony and unchallenged morals, which is the inspiration of a co-operative existence.

They proceed to the "Hall of Curiosities," where they find chests of books and other treasures belonging to Captain Kidd.

"I believe Captain Kidd must have been a great Socialist," says the doctor.

"Yes, I believe he was. He certainly entertained ideas of common ownership that would have done him credit in a pure social democracy," replies the hero.

"He must have been one of those great characters that live before their time," comments the doctor, to which the hero adds:

"I hope that the solution of the problem of social government will not always remain a secret of the ocean depths."

They see in the distance a great column of light, "which shone with the brilliancy of the sun."

"What is it?" asks the stranger.

"That," replied the guardian, "is a monument erected to the Federation of Labor of Atlantis. The Federation was one of the chief forces that brought about the Social Democracy, and it erected the monument in honor of itself."

Upon entering the capital of Atlantis, "the headquarters of the various departments of inspectorship," they were asked to show a citizen's card.

The doctor's card was as follows:

Social Citizen No. 311,897, M. N. P. Q.
Habitat, Dormitory for Young Men No. 457.
Occupation, Physician at Dormitory.

and the card was further stamped with the words "Issued 4-11, 2456, Department of Registration."

"You will note," said the doctor, "that this is a white card. That color indicates that as a citizen my record is good. Should I be convicted of a serious offense this card would be taken up and a green one substituted. If I should again be convicted of a flagrant infraction of law, I should receive a black card in place of the green one. The holder of a black card is the object of special surveillance, and, like the ex-convict of the old days, he is regarded as guilty of any charge filed against him until he produces indisputable evidence of innocence. But if his conduct for an entire year proves exemplary he may in most cases secure a pardon, when a white card is again exchanged for the black one."

The following signs were on the office doors in the Capitol that opened upon its huge corridors:

"Department of Sleep Inspectors, Department of Time Inspectors, Department of Highway Inspectors, Department of Bath Inspectors, Department of Laundry Inspectors, Department of Marriage Inspectors, Department of Vocation Inspectors, Department of Vital Statistics, Department of Dormitory Inspectors, Department of Cooking Inspectors, Department of Agriculture Inspectors, Department of Light Inspectors, Department of Heat Inspectors, Department of Sanitary Inspectors, Department of Medical Inspectors, Department of Speech Inspectors, Department of Fisheries Inspectors, Department of Etiquette Inspectors, Department of Eating Inspectors, Department of Inspectors of Inspectors, Department of Inspectors of Inspectors of Inspectors."

The Socialist from the upper world, knowing well the greed for fame and ambition, wondering how they managed to keep the entire population from becoming Inspectors, asked: "How about the glory of being a dictator?"

"Glory, did you say? There is no such thing in Atlantis," replied the doctor scornfully.

In the "Hall of Curiosities" lay all the diamonds, the gold, the crowns and sceptres, the jeweled antiquities of generations previous to the Social Democracy of the people of Atlantis.

In bin-like structures around the walls, and in rows across the centre was all the coin of the earth, "dumped into them like coal."

There were tons of it.

"Here is the entire monetary circulation of ancient days," said the doctor.

Seeing an Inspector lurking curiously about, the Socialist from the upper world dissembles, saying loudly: "These coins are interesting relics; they resemble old pieces of coin I have seen on earth. I could not decipher the inscription on them, but the heads stamped upon some fairly portray the countenance of the brutal savage."

"All these gewgaws over which you have been gloating are the property of the State, and, while no one owns them in particular, no one can wear them," says the doctor.

"Indeed, this is a virtuous realm," retorts the Socialist of the upper world. "Selfishness has been absolutely crushed for want of something to feed upon."

Before a card of citizenship is given the Socialist of the upper world he is duly measured on a principle similar to the Bertillon system for reference in the files of the Democracy.

In Atlantis there were two classes, the long-headed and the short-headed, these again were subdivided into narrow and wide headed classes.

In regard to marriage, so as to even up the general principles of personal equality, even to actual appearance, a sort of average was expected by compelling certain pre-natal conditions.

By following out certain policies for generations, the Democracy of Atlantis had accomplished some effective if uninteresting equalities.

One of these policies was a strict enforcement of the rule that "unlikes and not likes" should be married.

"No man can escape marriage in this country, and no man can do his own selecting. But it will only be for three years, when you will again be forced to marry, according to the order of the State," says the doctor, to which the Socialist from the upper world replies to the Socialist of the lower world:

"Your countrymen are a pack of driveling idiots."

Perhaps, though the doctor may not have known it, the citizens of the Social Democracy, when they prayed, really recited their catechism, which was as follows:

Question—What is the first and greatest requisite for citizenship?

Answer—Obedience to the State.

Question—Can the State ever be wrong?

Answer—It cannot.

Question—Why should the State be obeyed?

Answer—It gives the citizen his food, and his clothing; it supplies him with a place to sleep, and it keeps him from committing error. It is his mother and his guardian through life and is ever solicitous for his well-being.

Question—Should the citizen be dissatisfied or place his judgment against that of the State?

Answer—No, and for the reason that the judgment of the individual is often faulty, while the judgment of the State, being the composite judgment of all, is the highest attainable wisdom. The reasoning of the individual is colored by selfish considerations, while that of the State is purely impersonal and dictated by considerations for the common good. It is a grave crime to criticise the State, its laws, or its decisions, for in making such criticism the citizen declares himself the enemy of his brothers and must be punished accordingly.

The description of the prison where the Atavars are kept is highly imaginative, as are the later passages of this book.

Except for the lethe-weed, a sort of tobacco which the inhabitants of Atlantis were permitted to enjoy for a while at night, (known as the smoke hour,) Social Democracy would have tumbled.

This weed exhilarated and made men satisfied temporarily with their lot.

The "smoke hour" was the time of solemn recreation in Atlantis.

There was no other amusement, there was no laughter, their supreme excitement was a festival held in a huge arena, where the condemned atavars were given to a monstrous fish called a "kraken," to be devoured in the sea.

Otherwise, so profoundly lazy had labor for the equality of rights made the people, that they had to be driven with whips in the fields to plant them.

"You will now see Socialism in operation," says the doctor. "These men are planting."

A glimpse of the lawmakers of the Social Democracy is cleverly given, when the Socialist from the upper world is informed that he is appointed a member of the "Vorunk."

This body, analogous to the Senate, meets in a sort of crypt of the Capitol of Atlantis.

"I see you have hidden it away as far as possible," said the stranger to the Chairman. "That's a splendid idea. I have seen some other legislative bodies in my time that it would have been well to have buried like this one. You have no idea how insufferable are some of the legislators in my land—they are forever flaunting themselves before the people as possessors of supernatural wisdom—it is very disgusting, I assure you. Socialism, I see, has found the remedy. I don't suppose any one ever cares to come here to hear the silver-tongued oratory of the members, now, do they?"

"No. It is not a matter of common interest what the honorable members have to say. No one ever comes to hear them, and only their brother members are required to listen to their eloquence."

"This is very interesting, and incidentally just as it should be. But it seems to me you are failing to make use of a ready means of punishment if you do not provide that certain offenders should be sentenced to listen to the debates."

The visiting Socialist from the upper world proceeds at once, as a member of the "Vorunk," to pass the following useful measures for the government of the Socialists:

"A Bill to Regulate the Trimming of Finger Nails.

"A Bill Requiring the Use of the Left Arm as Much as the Right.

"A Bill Providing for the Equal Use of the Maxillary Muscles on Both Sides of the Mouth in the Act of Masticating Food.

"A Bill Requiring Every Individual to Laugh Aloud Once Every Hour, and Providing Inspectors for the Enforcement of the Act.

"A Bill to Abolish Snoring at Night in Dormitories.

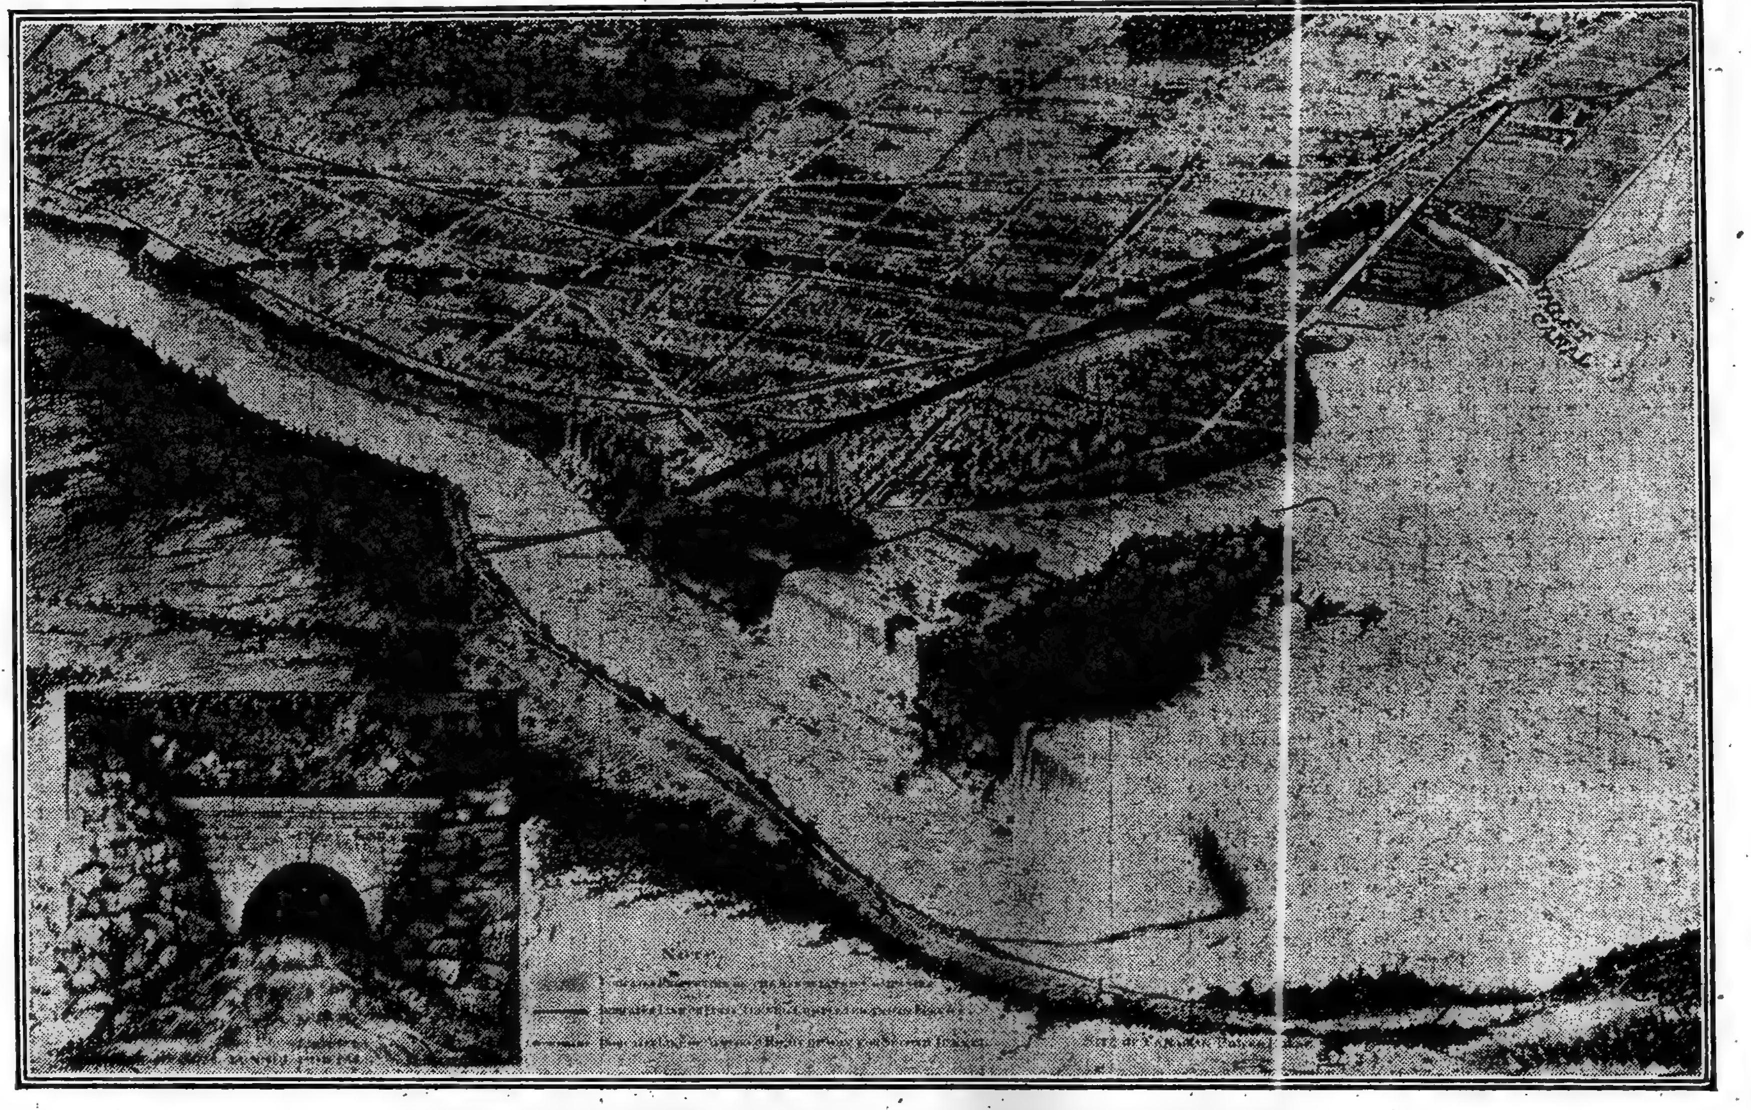
"A Bill Providing for the Removal of the Wealth of the Ancients Beyond the Temptation of Future Generations."

A love interest is woven into the story between the hero and the beautiful atavar, Astrae, and when the State orders her marriage to a dwarf and his to "Ugla," a toothless, yet withal amorous old maid, the individual in the Socialist of the upper world asserts itself, and he uses gunpowder and executive sense to blow up the monument of the Federation of Labor, scatters these lazy, lethargic people, and escapes in a submarine boat, that had sunk into one of the air-tight sea chambers, taking with him Astrae, the doctor, and the sea surgeon, to say nothing of several billions in coin, jewels, and other antiquities from the "Hall of Curiosities."

A single torpedo, fired from the submarine, pierces the seawall at the last, and the ocean once more engulfs Atlantis and all its commonwealth.

Shall Nature or Man Govern Niagara's Future?

Renewed Efforts Being Made to Save the Falls from the Encroachments of Commercialism---Plea of the Power Companies---Scenic Preservation Society's Answer.



PRESENT AND PROPOSED TUNNELS OF THE NIAGARA POWER COMPANY.

BEFORE Summer is here the fate of Niagara Falls will be decided. In Washington and in Albany, Congress and the State Legislature have before them various projects for preserving the Falls from the encroachments of the railroads and manufacturers. The President in his annual message proposes to turn the Niagara Reservation into a National instead of a State park, as it is at present, declaring that "nothing should be allowed to interfere with the preservation of Niagara Falls in all their beauty and majesty," while Gov. Higgins in his last message to the Legislature states that "the privileges granted to the power companies now constitute a real menace to Niagara," and urges the passage of protective legislation.

Following this initiative of the two Executives, both Legislatures are considering the best practical method to prevent the threatened destruction of the Falls. In Congress legislation on the subject is being directed to the enlargement of the powers and the membership of the international commission that held its first meeting last May to investigate the Niagara situation, it having become evident that without the co-operation of the Canadian Government all the efforts of this Government to maintain the Falls in their present condition are bound to be futile. At Albany the movement to protect the Falls as a great scenic feature was crystallized at the end of last month in the form of a proposed Constitutional amendment, introduced by Assemblyman Cox, withdrawing from the Legislature the right to grant further privileges to power companies to divert the waters of Niagara River from their natural channel.

The enactment of this proposed legislation is by no means certain, since there is a strong undercurrent of sympathy with the power companies among some legislators that may prove effective in obstructing the efforts to protect the Falls. "The utilization of natural water power," one Assemblyman, typical of this class, is quoted as saying, "for the production of electrical energy will continue all over the State and country, and in twenty-five years Niagara Falls will be as the Falls of the Mohawk at Cohoes, only to be seen as a waterfall on Sundays and holidays, when the power utilization plants are not running and the diverted water is allowed to follow its natural channel—and it certainly would be better to have the water thus used than forever running to waste." So it happens that the fight in the Legislatures for the preservation of Niagara Falls has assumed the somewhat academic aspect of a struggle between aesthetic as opposed to utilitarian sentiment.

"Ever since the location of the pioneer sawmill at Niagara in 1725," declares Francis Lynde Stetson, an official of one of the power companies, "the idea of subjecting to industrial uses some part of the enormour power of Niagara Falls has occupied the minds and stirred the inventive faculties of engineers, mechanics, and manufacturers. And why should it not be so? Nearly 6,000 cubic miles of water, pouring down from the upper lakes with 90,000 square miles of reservoir area, reach this gorge of the Niagara River at a point where its extreme width of one mile is, by islands, reduced to two channels of only 3,800 feet. Here, in less than half a mile of rapids, the Niagara River falls 55 feet, and then, with a depth of about 20 feet at the crest of the Horseshoe Falls, plunges 165 feet more into the lower river. The ordinary flow has been found to be about 275,000 cubic feet per second, and in its daily force equal to the latent power of all the coal mined in the world each day—something more than 200,000 tons.

"This natural comparison at once suggests, as through the century it has invited, an estimate of this power in terms of mechanics, and it has been computed by Prof. Unwin that these Falls represent theoretically 7,000,000 horse power, (others think more,) and for practical use, without appreciable diminution of the natural beauty, several hundreds of thousands of horse power."

The claim is made by the officers of the power companies using Niagara Falls that their operations have not in the slightest degree detracted from the picturesqueness of the great cataract, all their works being situated on the river a mile above the State Reservation, within the confines of which no manufacturing plant is admitted. It is also claimed that so far the volume of water pouring over the Falls has suffered no appreciable diminution, and hence that the latter has not been injured scenically by the use made of it by the power companies. On the other hand, these companies point to the great industrial development of the northern part of the State that their activities have produced. After an expenditure of something like $18,000,000 the Niagara Falls Power Company, for instance, shows a plant by means of which nearly 100,000 horse power is taken from the Falls and transmitted by wire to more than a hundred factories.

The officers of the company contend that the generation of such an enormous power in one place—an impossibility with the use of coal—has been of special advantage to the electro-chemical world, whose products, in consequence, are manufactured now on a scale never before attempted. Then, as to local improvements created by the presence of the company, Echota, called into existence by this gigantic industry, is shown as a model residential town for factory employes on the banks of Niagara River, while its neighbor, formerly the ramshackle village of Niagara Falls, through the magic wand of this industry, has become a city of handsome residences and streets, with a population of about 30,000. Edward A. Wickes, First Vice President of the company, makes the following statement for THE NEW YORK TIMES on the subject:

"In the discussions which are now taking place at Albany and Washington, and in the newspapers of the day, about the situation at Niagara Falls in respect of the use of the water of Niagara River for manufacturing purposes, it is interesting to inquire what has actually been done in the way of development since the Niagara Falls Power Company began its great work in 1890. In this connection you will notice from the list of thirty-five factories already situated at Niagara Falls that the latter has become the great centre of electro-chemical work, no other place being at all comparable to it. You will observe by a study of this list that the important electro-chemical industries are all represented, and most of them are original—that is to say, do not exist anywhere else in the country. Some of the names given do not explain the nature of the industry. For instance, the Pittsburg Reduction Company is the greatest producer in the world of aluminium, in fact, is the pioneer in this important work; the Niagara Electro-Chemical Company is the maker of cyanide of potassium on a very large scale; the Oldbury Electro-Chemical Company is the maker of phosphorus and chloride of potash—and the list might be further amplified.

"This development on the American side of Niagara Falls, interesting not only for its magnitude, but from the wide diversity of products, has been carried to its present state of perfection without visible effect on the Falls. The power houses of the company, situated about a mile and a quarter above the Falls, are objects of keen interest to all frequenters of the place, and are in themselves fine examples of industrial architecture, built of gray Queenston limestone, surrounded by large and well-kept lawns. These patent facts are not referred to in the general discussions now taking place in our Legislatures, although they are really of great importance."

As yet this company is using only a part of the water granted to it by charter from the State, its franchise allowing two tunnels for water, instead of the one to which it is at present confined. With both tunnels in use it would have the means at command for generating 200,000 horse power. When it will reach this limit is not yet ascertained, but, judging from the statement of H. W. Buck, the company's engineer, the time does not seem far distant.

"What the exact status of the Niagara power system will be ten years hence," declares Mr. Buck, "is difficult to state, but that it will be vastly increased seems a certainty. The economy in the use of water power for manufacturing and other purposes, and the fact that all the small water powers throughout the country are rapidly being taken up to their limit will of necessity turn the power user toward the Niagara frontier. Furthermore, the constantly increasing cost of coal tends to discredit the use of steam power for manufacturing."

Over eighty companies are now supplied in Buffalo with power generated by the Falls, and it is among the future plans of the Niagara Power Company to extend its operations over a radius of 400 miles, including within this circle about one-fifth of the population of the United States that would thus be enabled to utilize Niagara Falls for industrial purposes. With this widening of its activities Mr. Stetson contemplates the possibility of placing "100,000 horse power on a wire and sending 450 miles in one direction to New York, the metropolis of the East, and 500 miles in the other direction to Chicago, the metropolis of the West, thus serving the purposes and supplying the wants of these greatest urban communities."

From what has been done and what is in contemplation in the utilization of Niagara Falls for the generation of power, anxiety has been felt by those who are desirous to maintain at all costs this marvel of nature in its integrity. It is believed that the danger point has been reached as regards the existence of the Falls, hence the extraordinary efforts that are being made in Congress and the State Legislature at this session to pass laws that will protect the Falls from further attack on the part of the power companies.

In this campaign the Historic and Scenic Preservation Society is taking the leading part. Edward Hagaman Hall, Secretary of the society, makes the following statement on the subject for THE NEW YORK TIMES:

"Officials of the power companies may say what they choose as to no appreciable effect having been made as yet on the volume of water passing over the Falls by their operation; any schoolboy, however, can see that this volume of water is bound to be diminished by every gallon that is taken from it. The amount of water passing over Niagara Falls is a fixed quantity, variously estimated, and may be set down as having an average flow of 222,400 cubic feet per second, the estimate made by the United States Engineer Corps. This represents 3,800,000 horse power. From a careful computation it has been found that the subtraction of 80,000 cubic feet of water per second from the total amount passing over the Falls would completely dry up the American Falls, leaving only the Horseshoe Cataract, with a greatly reduced flow.

"At present the American and Canadian companies have the right to use 60,000 cubic feet of water in their power houses. The actual amount that they are using is fortunately considerably less than that granted them by charter. Using the full 60,000, you see, would bring the amount to within 20,000 cubic feet of the limit that means the total disappearance of the American Falls of Niagara. This is an extremely narrow margin, and will be more than wiped out if the effort that is now being made by manufacturers to increase the amount of water diverted from the Falls is successful. It is fortunate that of the 60,000 cubic feet of water authorized to be used there is probably not more than 15,000 cubic feet being actually taken out from the American side of the Falls, and as the Canadian companies take their water at a point below the head of the rapids this 15,000 cubic feet is the only portion of the total amount of water used by the manufacturers that can affect the American Falls. It is of importance to note, however, in any estimate of the possible future danger menacing the Falls, that the water taken from the American side, or on the Canadian side above the head of Goat Island, has a greater visible effect on the American than on the Horseshoe Fall, owing to the peculiar, inverted tunnel shape of the branch of the river feeding the former.

"It is not likely any company can take water within a distance of three miles above the Falls on the American side, except the Niagara Falls Power Company and the Niagara Falls Hydraulic Power and Manufacturing Company, for those two corporations and the State own or control almost the entire bank of the river for that distance. The danger is, however, that the companies which propose to operate above this three-mile limit, being unrestricted in the amount of water they may use, are liable to draw so largely as to seriously interrupt and lower the entire stream, especially when their use is added to that taken below them.

"National sentiment undoubtedly favors the preservation of Niagara Falls as a great scenic feature, but there are a number of factors in the problem that render it imperative to consider every plan for preservation from all sides. Thus President Roosevelt's suggestion that the Niagara Reservation be made a National instead of a State reservation would really not help matters in the least, if it were carried out. There is no possibility for vandalism of any kind under the present State management of the reservation, which is as effective as anything of that character can be. Niagara Falls belongs to the State of New York, and nothing would be gained by parting with this marvelous inheritance. As a State we can do our utmost to protect the Falls from destruction by keeping the manufacturers out of the reservation, as we have done, by granting no more franchises to power houses above the Falls and by restricting those already granted. It is to avert future inroads on the New York side of Niagara that we are interested in seeing the present Legislature pass Assemblyman Cox's resolution proposing the following amendment to the State Constitution:

"'No charter, license, or privilege to divert from their natural channel the waters of the Niagara River, or any portion thereof, above Niagara Falls shall be granted to any corporation, association, person, or persons, except for sanitary, domestic, or fire purposes, and such waters shall not be diverted for any purpose except as hereinafter expressed. This section shall not be construed to affirm or impair the existing charter of any corporation, association, or persons, or to affirm, impair, or deny any right to divert the water of said river existing prior to the adoption of this section.' his amendment, in order to become a law, must be passed by two Legislatures and then be submitted to a popular vote at a general election. With good fortune it could thus become a part of the Constitution in January, 1908.

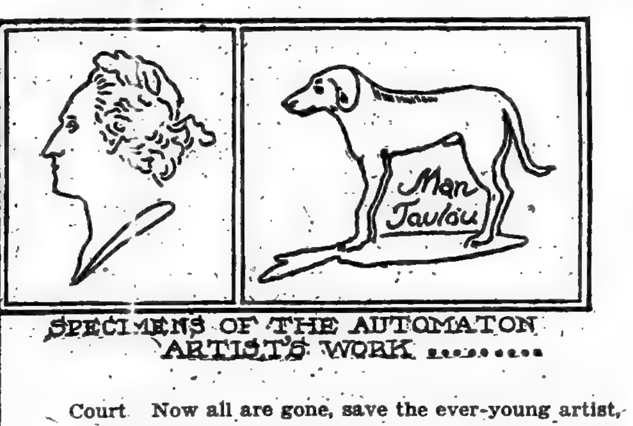
"With the enactment of this law the State of New York will have done the utmost in its power to protect Niagara Falls. The difficulty is, however, that the State can eliminate only a small part of the danger. The chief work for the preservation of Niagara comes within the domain of the National Government. In the first place, the United States should exercise its authority to prevent the lowering of the level of Niagara River on the plea that the latter is a navigable stream and an international boundary, and, most important of all, it should negotiate a treaty with Great Britain by which the latter would be bound to protect the Falls equally with the United States. That is where the real difficulty lies—the whole question is an international one. So long as Canada continues to grant charters to power companies permitting the latter to take water from Niagara the existence of the Falls is menaced, and neither New York nor Washington can do anything to save them. Hence the legislation pending in Congress looking to the co-operation of Great Britain with this Government in this matter is of the utmost importance. Canada derives a revenue from the franchises granted by it to the power companies, hence it may be a little more difficult to put a stop to further grants on the Canadian border. It is a singular comment on our own prodigality that we have parted with these inestimably valuable charters in this State without getting from the power companies a cent of revenue in return.

"A million people visited Niagara Falls last year on the American side, an increase of half a million during the last thirteen years, and the reservation was maintained by the State at a net cost of $11,475.69. There is no scenic feature on this continent, we may safely say on any continent, so universally known and admired as this, and, in spite of the arguments of industrialism to the contrary, it would be a National calamity should this greatest symbol of sublimity and power be destroyed in order that a few wealthy corporations might increase their earnings."

WONDERFUL AUTOMATA THAT HAVE SURVIVED MORE THAN A CENTURY

THE WONDERFUL DROZ AUTOMATA.



SPECIMENS OF THE AUTOMATON ARTIST'S WORK

IN the eighteenth century a Swiss watchmaker named Pierre Jaquet Droz brought to the Spanish Court a beautiful and ingeniously constructed clock, which so pleased the King, Ferdinand VI., that he not only purchased the timepiece but reimbursed Droz for the expense of his long journey.

The enterprise came near having a very different ending, however. The clock was adorned with the figure of a shepherd, who, when the hour struck, raised his pipe to his lips and played a tune, of which he had six in his répertoire. At the same time the shepherd's dog rubbed his pelt affectionately against his master's leg. At the shepherd's feet stood a basket of apples. Every time an apple was taken from the basket the dog barked so naturally that on one occasion a real dog, which happened to be present, barked in reply. These magical performances made everybody but the King flee in terror. The inventor, in fear of the Holy Inquisition, begged permission to exhibit and explain his masterpiece to the Grand Inquisitor, who, though the explanation was probably lost on him, deigned to issue a public announcement, in the name of the Church, to quell the growing belief that the clock was a work of the devil. And so Droz was allowed to return in peace to his native mountains, while his clock remains to this day in the Museo Arqueologico in Madrid.

Thereafter Droz, who was being educated for the Church, abandoned his theological studies and devoted himself entirely to mechanics, which had hitherto been merely a diversion. Among other thing he constructed a writing automaton, representing a child, which writes words and sentences, dips the pen in the ink, and carries it from the end of a line to the beginning of the next line in a very realistic manner. The complicated mechanism by which these motions are effected is entirely concealed in the wooden body of the figure. The alphabet of the automaton, being French, contains neither W nor w, and nearly half the capital letters are also omitted for the sake of simplicity. Hence circumlocutions are occasionally necessary. At the recent historical exhibition of clocks and watches at Nuremberg the apparently very young but really very old penman always substituted, for "Nuremberg," "the city of Albert Durer."

This figure was constructed about the year 1750. Like the other automata shown with it in the illustration, it has had a curious and eventful history. The other figures, the harmonium player and the draughtsman, are the work of Pierre's son, Henri Louis Jacquet Droz, who did not waste any time in theological studies, but devoted himself from the first to horology and science. Consequently his works, of which, unfortunately, only the harmonium player and the draughtsman are still in existence, are of far simpler and more practical construction than his father's. At Nuremberg the little draughtsman, which is similar in principle to the penman, gave two specimens of his skill with the pencil, which are herewith reproduced—a head of Louis XV., done in bold characteristic strokes, and a childishly naïve drawing of "Mon Toutou"—"My Bow-wow." Once this childlike figure drew this portrait, ostensibly from life, in the presence of Louis XV. and his gay Court. Now all are gone, save the ever-young artist, whose hand, unchangeable as that of Fate, still traces the features of the dead King exactly as it drew them more than a hundred years ago.

The younger Droz, encouraged by his father's success at the Spanish Court, sailed with the three automata for Madrid, but was shipwrecked on the French coast. The figures were badly injured, but Droz succeeded, after much labor, in repairing them and resumed his journey. In Madrid the English manager who had suggested the enterprise advertised the automata as veritable marvels. Perhaps he overdid the matter. At all events, the Holy Inquisition confiscated the figures and clapped Droz into prison. After enduring great suffering he was set at liberty, but the automata were not restored to him, and he returned in poverty to his home at La Chaux de Fonds, in Switzerland, where, in 1788, one year after the death of his father, he died at the age of 37.

Meanwhile the English manager had regained possession of the automata and sold them to a Frenchman, who, as he could find no one able to operate them, sent them to his château near Bayonne, where they remained, forgotten, for thirty-five years. After the death of the owner they were found in a garret by his son, who also failed to find a mechanic who could master their wonderful mechanism, and therefore sold them to a dealer.

After this they passed through many hands unused. The first who understood them was a mechanician named Bourquin, who in 1825 undertook to make several radical alterations in the apparatus. The figures were subsequently acquired by a Dresden mechanician named Martin, who, from 1873 to 1890, exhibited them throughout Germany. Martin understood the mechanism perfectly, but he died suddenly, before his son, who was then studying watchmaking, had become familiar with the apparatus. Though the younger Martin studied the automata for years he never succeeded in mastering them fully, and so these marvels of mechanism, which really seemed to be bewitched, as the Inquisition had asserted, came a year or two ago into the Marfel collection of watches and clocks in Berlin.

Here they found an expert mechanician, Emil Froelich, who possessed sufficient skill and patience to set them going once more. The restoration of the penman occupied "only" seven months, but the draughtsman and the harmonium player required more than a year's treatment.

Even in a technical journal it would be almost impossible to give an intelligible explanation of the action of the mechanism. It is no exaggeration to say that these three figures are the most ingenious, complicated, and realistic automata ever known to have been constructed. The present [illegible], with all its increased powers, has not made their like, nor will the future do so, as no one will devote the requisite time and money to such a purpose.

The natural character of the motions of all three figures is astonishing. For example, the draughtsman occasionally pauses, and, with a distinctly audible puff, blows the dust from his drawing. The writer appears to look attentively at every line that he makes. The répertoire of the harmonium player comprises five pieces, which include scales, trills, and a great variety of time. The musician's fingers follow everything exactly—or, rather, they do not follow, they precede, for it is no mere imitation of playing. The fingers actually depress the keys.

After their restoration the three automata were presented by a number of art lovers to the museum of La Chaux de Fonds, the home of their inventors, where, after more than a century of wandering and vicissitudes, they seem destined to rest in peace, to delight and amaze future generations.

Susan B. Anthony: Her Fight for Woman Suffrage

Remarkable Career of a Remarkable Woman, Whose Enthusiasm for the Cause to Which She Devoted Herself Was Unabated in Her Closing Hours.

> Susan B. Anthony's self-imposed task, for almost half a century, has been to secure equal rights for women—social, civil, and political. When she began her crusade woman in social life was "cabin'd, cribb'd, confined" to an extent which scarcely can be conceived by the present independent and self-reliant generation. In law she was but little better than a slave; in politics a mere cipher. To-day in society she has practically unlimited freedom; in the business world most of the obstacles have been removed; the laws, although still unjust in many respects, have been revolutionized in her favor; in four States women have the full franchise, in one the municipal ballot, in twenty-five a vote on school questions, and in four others some form of suffrage, while in each campaign their recognition as a political factor grows more marked. * * * She is the only woman who has given her whole time and effort to this end, with no diversion of interest in behalf of husband and children, no diversion of other public questions. Is there an example in all history of either man or woman who devoted half a century of the hardest, most persistent labor for one reform?
> "Life and Letters of Susan B. Anthony"—Ida Husted Harper.—Vol. II., Chap. L.

MY first glimpse of Susan B. Anthony has always been a pleasant memory. It was in 1898, the first of a brief residence in Rochester, N. Y., when a small and informal gathering one Saturday afternoon offered a good opportunity to see and hear the notable woman. There is no memory left now of the details of that meeting, only of the impression left by Susan B. and Mary Anthony, and the memory of the younger sister is the more vivid. Miss Anthony spoke, of course, on woman's suffrage, simply and well, as she always did. But it is of the expression on Mary Anthony's face that I always think in connection with Miss Anthony. That afternoon she sat on the platform with her sister, and during Susan B. Anthony's informal address and the demonstration that followed Mary watched her with an expression of absorbed and adoring love that can be compared only to a lover's. All who knew the sisters saw that look many times; and friends knew that Mary Anthony's life was one of daily and hourly devotion to her more famous sister, tender, absolute, beautiful beyond all words.

It is good to know that the elder sister realized and appreciated as they deserved this devotion and the unselfish thoughtfulness that attended her. "Without Mary," Susan said many times, "my work would have been impossible."

A little removed from the lower stretch of Rochester's main street, even its plain red brick exterior impressing the chance passer with a certain old-fashioned air of dignity, stands the Anthony homestead, built in 1845 by the father, Daniel Anthony, where Susan B. Anthony and her sister, Mary, passed happily together the tranquil twilight following lives of unusual devotion and toil. "Homey" best expresses the atmosphere that greeted friend or stranger entering the door. Perfect hospitality is the memory cherished by the man or woman fortunate enough to enter that home for an hour or for a day.

In the front of the two old-fashioned parlors stood the mahogany table upon which was written the call and resolutions for the first woman's rights convention ever held, the gift of Mrs. Stanton. The rear parlor was the library. Miss Mary Anthony's study opened from this, and the dining room adjoining was rich in handsome old furniture. Upstairs were the quaintly furnished guest chamber, the family sleeping rooms, and what was Miss Anthony's study, a big, sunshiny room, lined with books and pictures, and made cheery by a gas log. What stories those walls could tell of hours and hours of labor, of plans and prophecies, of happy, familiar chat, of campaigns fought out in advance, and of letters—thousands—dictated, typewritten, and signed.

When at home Miss Anthony's daily routine varied little. There was always the cold sponge bath, the simple breakfast soon after 7, and then to her study to work busily until the plain noonday dinner, oftener than not shared by one or more friends. After a little rest, more work, until the sunset hour brought a time when the two sisters might sit with hands and brains at rest, talking lovingly of the dear ones gone before, of life's compensations, or the reunion at most but a few years distant. Often the evening brought guests. Monday evening was the regular at home, when young and old of all beliefs were made welcome. If there were no guests Miss Anthony went back to her study again and wrote, wrote, until, at 10 o'clock, she gathered together the big package of mail, put on wraps, and went out for a brisk walk of several squares, for which the posting of the letters was only an excuse.

It was into a home of unusual comfort and liberality of thought for the times that Susan Brownell Anthony, named for an aunt, was born Feb. 15, 1820, at Adams, Mass., the second child of Daniel Anthony, a "Hicksite Friend," and Lucy Read, who turned from the gay life of a popular belle when she married, to the quiet customs of the Quakers, though she never became a member of that society. Susan was one of a family of eight children, of whom Mary is now the only survivor.

Susan early showed unusual vigor of intellect, phenomenal memory, and insatiable ambition. When she was 3 years old her grandmother taught her to spell and read, and at 12 she earned her first money, $3 for two weeks' work in her father's cotton factory, taking the place of a sick "spooler" by her own eager request. At the father's wish his children early in life were made members of the Quaker society. Daniel Anthony's means and ambitions enabled him to give his children the advantages of a private school in his big, handsome house at Battenville, Washington County, New York State, where the family had moved in 1826, and Susan was the star pupil. Though her father was one of the wealthy men of the county, the daughter began teaching at the age of 17, the first Winter for a dollar a week and board. The next year she was sent to Deborah Moulson's Seminary, near Philadelphia; but her father's business reverses called both Susan and Guelma home in the Spring of 1838.

A year at the home school followed, and then the family left the happy home at Battenville and moved to Hardscrabble, where Daniel Anthony started to build up his fortunes anew. Susan had no difficulty in securing a school at New Rochelle, and thus began the work which she carried on with gratifying success for fifteen years. Pay was small—she and Hannah taught from 1840 to 1845 for $2 and $2.50 a week and board—but the good daughters lived with rigid economy and gave their father every penny they could spare to help pay interest on the mortgage which rested on factory, mills, and home. In 1845 the family moved to Rochester, making the trip from Palatine Bridge by "line boat." Susan accompanied her parents, returning to Palatine Bridge in 1846 to teach in Canajoharie Academy, a position which she held three years. This was perhaps the gayest time of the Quaker lass's life, and her letters home show that she enjoyed pretty clothes, good times, and the attention of the beaus quite as much as any girl who has no mission.

It was in the Spring of 1853 that Miss Anthony, who for several years past had found the work growing irksome, gave up teaching. She was deeply interested in temperance and anti-slavery, and hers was a nature that could have no divided interests. At a State gathering of the Sons of Temperance in 1852 at Albany a decisive step was taken. Susan B. Anthony represented the Rochester Union, but when she rose to speak she was told by the presiding officer that the sisters were not invited there "to speak, but to listen and learn." With several other women she left the hall, and the rebels held a meeting of their own. The result, after weeks of hard work, was the first Woman's State Temperance Convention, at Corinthian Hall, Rochester, April 20, 1852. Five hundred women were in attendance.

In September of the same year Susan attended her first woman's rights convention at Syracuse and took an active part in its proceedings. The work begun then was carried on with single-hearted zeal and steadfast devotion almost unparalleled. Abuse from press and audience, rebuffs, and insults commenced with the withdrawal from the Albany temperance meeting.

The years from 1852 to 1856 were spent in addressing temperance and teachers' conventions, in attending and taking part in woman's rights conventions at Rochester, Albany, and Saratoga; in a canvass of New York State for funds, and in trips to Washington, Saratoga, Philadelphia, and Boston. What seemed a distinct advancement of woman's cause and a recognition of Miss Anthony's efforts and abilities came in 1856, an urgent request from the American Anti-Slavery Society that she become its agent and go on a lecture trip through Central and Western New York. The Winter and the next few years were full of great physical hardships, many discouragements, and much bitter trial. Anti-slavery meetings, attempted in 1861, were mobbed and broken up in every city from Buffalo to Albany. Then, Nov. 25, 1862, came the death of Daniel Anthony, his children's idol; Susan's support, strength, and sympathetic guide in all her work and ambitions.

Organization of the Woman's National Loyal League kept Miss Anthony busy in 1863 and 1864, and a strong endeavor to rouse public protest against the Fourteenth Amendment was the most important work of the women suffragists in 1865. The year 1867 brought a hard-fought campaign to secure a woman's suffrage amendment to the New York State Constitution, but the amendment was defeated. Generous financial aid enabled the starting of The Revolution, the first woman's suffrage paper, and gave the leaders of the movement fresh courage to face the future.

The year 1869 saw another encouraging advance in the organization, May 15, in New York City, of the National Woman Suffrage Association, with Elizabeth Cady Stanton as President. Its especial object was "a Sixteenth Amendment to the Constitution securing the ballot to the women of the Nation on equal terms with men." The second National Woman's Suffrage Convention, held in Lincoln Hall, Washington, January, 1870, just preceded Miss Anthony's fiftieth birthday.

The ten years preceding had given her some encouragement: there had always been hosts of loyal friends to stand by her; but the years had also been full of almost incredible hardship, work well-nigh superhuman in its untiring energy, and abuse hard to understand to-day. She had been insultingly attacked by almost every paper of almost every State, driven from convention halls, been the object of harsh, often abusive, words from notable public speakers, had her audiences broken up by mobs, seen trusted co-laborers fail her at the most important crises, lost loved ones, and through everything held with deathlike grip to one central and paramount idea, the securing of the ballot to women.

In 1871 Miss Anthony and Mrs. Stanton started on a lecturing trip to the Pacific Coast, stopping at Salt Lake City, visiting the Yosemite and encountering a strongly hostile spirit in Oregon and California. The National Republican Convention at Philadelphia, June 7, 1872, contained in its platform the following:

"The Republican Party is mindful of its obligations to the loyal women of America for their noble devotion to the cause of freedom; their admission to wider fields of usefulness is received with satisfaction, and the honest demand of any class of citizens for equal rights should be treated with respectful consideration."

It was not what the leaders of the National organization for woman's suffrage had hoped and asked for; but it was the first time any National platform had mentioned woman, and it kindled hopes of better things to come.

From the adoption of the Fourteenth Amendment, July 28, 1868, several leaders in the movement had claimed women's right to vote under its provisions. Spurred to action in 1872 by an especially stirring appeal to all voters to register and cast their ballot, in the editorial columns of a Rochester daily, Miss Anthony with her three sisters went to the registry office and registered, the Inspectors consenting after some objections. The example was followed by nearly fifty strong-minded Rochester women. Such criticism followed the announcement of this action that when Election Day came the Inspectors in several wards refused the votes of the women they had registered; but Miss Anthony and fourteen others were permitted to vote in her ward. Election Day was Nov. 5. Nov. 18 Miss Anthony was arrested and taken into court to answer the charge of illegal voting, together with the fourteen other offenders and the three Inspectors involved. She was indicted by the Grand Jury at its next sitting, and the trial was held in Canandaigua the following Summer.

The case was bitterly and skillfully fought on both sides, and at its conclusion Judge Hunt directed the jury to bring in a verdict of guilty. A fine of $100 and the costs of the prosecution was the sentence pronounced. Miss Anthony promptly declared that she would "never pay a dollar of your unjust penalty," and the Judge did not resort to an order of commitment to force the issue. The costs of the trial Miss Anthony paid, actuated by a sense of justice to those who stood by her in this time of trial.

The Spring of 1880 brought the peaceful passing away of the saintlike mother at the age of 87. Bravely putting aside her personal sorrow, Miss Anthony, with Mrs. Stanton's aid, plunged into the arduous work of writing the "History of Woman Suffrage," the first volume of which appeared in 1881. Feb. 23, 1883, saw Miss Anthony and Miss Rachel Foster sailing for England. The year of travel and comparative rest that followed was probably the easiest, most care-free year of this unselfish, hard-working woman's life. Her welcome home in November of 1883 was a royal one, and Miss Anthony immediately plunged again into the thick of the countless demands of her life work. The seven years following were crowded with lecture and campaign work from Washington to South Dakota, appeals to and strivings with Congress, high officials, and the political parties for recognition and support, and work on the second volume of the history. Her seventieth birthday was celebrated by a fine banquet at the Riggs House, Washington, and sweeter to her were the strong words of loving appreciation from friends and of honorable recognition of her efforts from many leading papers.

Seventy years old and over forty years of almost herculean labor for the cause so dear to her, the suffrage of woman, yet, with all the vigor of twenty-five she started out on a campaign in South Dakota, kept up her lecture and convention work, accepted the burdens of the Presidency of the National Convention in 1892, was an active figure at the World's Fair, and in 1894 conducted two vigorous campaigns—one to secure from the Constitutional Convention an amendment abolishing the word "male" from the new Constitution; the other, in Kansas, to secure a majority vote on an amendment giving women full suffrage.

Disappointed exceedingly by her defeat in these two hard-fought battles, but undaunted, Miss Anthony went on with her lecturing wherever there was a call, made a trip through the Southern States in 1895, and visited California again, where her reception was so cordial that she was called back again in 1896 to conduct another aggressive campaign.

This was almost the last of Miss Anthony's long journeys and long campaigns. Every spare moment of the year following was given to lending a helping hand on her biography, which appeared in 1898. The years since were filled with visits, short trips, and, in the intervals of two rather serious illnesses, with eager, enthusiastic work for the cause so near her heart; but most of the time was spent at the Anthony homestead in Rochester. Like the mellow, golden sunset of a day of storm and stress were the closing years of a life which in concentration, single-mindedness of purpose, and strenuous labor has rarely been equaled.

With the friends of Susan B. Anthony will linger longest now the memory of the tender, womanly loveliness of the great reformer rather than the work of her public life. The writer remembers seeing one day at the Anthony home a young woman—one of the thousands of strangers who touched Miss Anthony's life every year. The girl asked for and received a few moments' interview; then, as she rose to go, she found that she had lost her handkerchief. Quickly Miss Anthony pressed into her hands a fresh bit of linen.

"Take this, my dear," said this busy, burdened woman cordially, "I always keep one of these on hand for just such emergencies."

"That little act," said an old friend of Miss Anthony who had witnessed the incident, "is characteristic of her life; but how she can think of all the little things she does we all wonder."

Those who knew Miss Anthony best can tell you, with wet eyes and breaking voice, of thousands of similar incidents. And it is good to remember now of this woman who was a public character so many years that to her sister and life-long companion she was the dearest and noblest soul on earth—it is not granted to every human being to inspire such love and devotion as dwelt in Mary Anthony's heart and shone on Mary Anthony's face—tribute to Susan B. Anthony.

SPELLING REFORM—PROFESSOR STODDARD CITES SIX OBJECTIONS

THE enterprise and sagacity in Mr. Andrew Carnegie in giving a permanent endowment for the purpose of instituting a practical test of the possibility of reform in the spelling of the English language deserves high commendation. The comment of the foreigner who undertakes to learn the English language is condemnatory, if not derisive, in regard to its spelling and its pronunciation. The opinion of the boy in school is so adverse that it often colors his view of the value of any study whatever of the grammar or the usages of the English tongue. The boy and the teacher, the Principal and the School Superintendent alike grow hopeless in regard to systematic study, and often come to consider English a language to be perceived by intuition, to be stumbled into by good luck, or to be lived down by great abilities in other directions.

The spelling of English is neither naturally phonetic nor logically unphonetic. If it were naturally phonetic the student's ear would assist his eye; a word once heard and seen would thereafter be known without further effort. If the spelling were logically unphonetic a system of rules could be formulated by the aid of which the student could construct the spelling if he heard a word, or could at once work out the proper pronunciation if he saw the word in print. As it is, most boys and girls in school, and many men and women in mature life, guess at the pronunciation when a new written word is seen, or look up in some dictionary the spelling when a new spoken word is heard.

These evils would not be serious if the English language were a mere dialect, spoken only by a few millions of cultivated persons, to whom the customs and usages of its expression had come naturally in home life and early training. The evils have become great as the language has extended its influence. The English has now become a world language. The time has come, in the opinion of many scholars, when it must throw off its childish eccentricities and pleasant idiosyncrasies and make itself, at whatever cost, a practical and universal means of communication.

The proposal of work now indorsed and endowed by Mr. Carnegie seems on its face to be the most promising effort that has yet been made. It will make the investigation of the problems the professional work of a group of competent scholars instead of the sporadic efforts of men individually of high repute, but collectively forming an amateur and irresponsible association. We shall have the questions examined in a scientific manner. The proposals of such a committee will command attention, and for the first time the matters at issue will be intelligently and completely presented to the attention of the English-speaking world.

This is not the first effort that has been made in this direction. It is now more than fifty years since the suggestions of the early English phonetists—Pitman, Ellis, and Bell—were definitely formulated, and more than thirty years since the Philological Association appointed its committee, of which Prof. March of Lafayette—now venerable but still active—was Chairman, and of which Prof. Whitney of Yale and Prof. Child of Harvard were useful members. During these thirty years efforts, too many and various to be recounted here, have persistently been made. These efforts have encountered very strong opposition, based upon what seemed to be be well-grounded objections. These objections are so well grounded, in the view of many persons, that it is worth while here to consider them somewhat carefully.

The first of these objections is a formidable one to most persons, and is the one not usually argued, but taken for granted, and made the basis for ridicule and caricature of the entire scheme. It is the objection that the changes necessary would incidentally destroy things more valuable than they could by any possibility create. They would destroy all associations of words. So far as literature is concerned English has become through the universality of printing mainly an eye language. Changes in spelling would make our classics as antique to the eye as Anglo-Saxon and as unintelligible to the ear of the uneducated person as Chaucer. It is conceivable that in the process of time much of the literature could be rewritten in a modern form; but poetry, at least, does not lend itself readily to scientific reconstruction, and even prose becomes recalcitrant if overmuch entreated.

I suspect that this regret at the destruction of association is the most formidable objection. It certainly appeals to me most, and does not readily suggest its own answer. One may say that it is an objection applicable to all changes made by progress. The incidental losses of advancing civilization are almost equal to its gains. We live on the little margin of advance. The problem set before this organization will be to prove not that this destruction of old associations is unimportant, but that, important as it is, it is less to the world than the advantages to be gained. Of this the English-speaking peoples will have to be convinced, for it must be remembered that Mr. Carnegie does not own the English language, nor has this committe as yet secured an option upon it. They must obtain their franchise, if they get one, after many hearings, and must show cause conclusively.

The changes proposed would also, it is said, obscure and in many cases destroy the record of the historical development of the word form. Upon the face of it this seems a valid objection, for "Inglish" instead of "English," or "lite" instead of "light," suggest convenience of modern pronunciation rather than philological accuracy. I doubt, however, whether this objection is as important as it seems.

Modern spelling does not represent the philology of words very well, and modern pronunciation still less well. The English language up to the time of the invention of printing was, like all other languages, strictly phonetic, for the reason that communications were oral. Books existed as records, written by hand, upon parchment or vellum, expensive, limited in number. Literature was promulgated not through reading in a book, but through listening to a reader, a speaker, or a singer. For the great majority the spoken sound was the word. The scribe, when he wrote down a word, followed this spoken sound as closely as he could; so that in Chaucer's works, for example, the spoken sound was the guide, which the manuscripts follow as nearly as may be. The ear and not the eye recognized the word, so that an exact correspondence between the spoken sound and the written word became the rule.

With the invention of printing came a change. Books in printed form became cheaper than readers, or speakers, or singers, so that gradually the eye rather than the ear became the arbiter, and spelling became more important, because more uniform when fixed in type than pronunciation. A divergence between spelling and pronunciation then became possible. Had the English people been a homogeneous one, as were some of the Continental peoples, this divergence might never have occurred.

The English nation was, however, composed of many elements with differing speech habits and language traditions. The result we know well. Spelling followed, but with unequal steps, the older traditions; pronunciations shifted and are still shifting with the migrations of the peoples. It is quite likely that the thorough study which this committee and its successors will give to the whole subject will end in making spelling more truly representative of word history than it is now. That it can possibly make it less representative I cannot believe.

The second main objection is based upon the futility of all preceding efforts. True enough is it that in thirty years very little has been done, and true is it that the little that has been done has been more provocative of hilarity than of confidence. The rules that have been drawn up from time to time have seemed empirical and arbitrary; the choice of a dozen or twenty words for change out of the hundreds of thousands in the English language has seemed a petty outcome, and the apparently perverse determination to travel persistently along the lines of greatest rather than of least resistance has shaken faith in the sanity of some of the reformers. But the futility of amateur effort only emphasizes the need of organized professional effort. It is the recognition of their former mistakes, rather than the desire to recommit them, that has led to this present union. One may confidently predict far greater results from this than from all previous efforts combined.

The third objection is that reform is impossible, for the reason that the existing alphabet is inadequate. It is true that all of our present phonetic alphabets are comparative failures, and that a national, if not an international, alphabet for phonetic uses is necessary as a means, if spelling is to be simplified. Such an alphabet is, however, already almost in sight. Three or four of the learned societies of this country are now at work upon this problem, and will be most happy to co-operate with the proposed Carnegie organization for the furthering of what is really a common end.

The fourth objection is that the wrong end of the difficulty has been attacked. Reform, says the critics, should be in pronunciation instead of in spelling. If an academy or a Carnegie association could establish a uniform pronunciation of the vowels, the diphthongs, and the consonants, say these critics, the changes in spelling needed would be slight. I shall not discuss this in detail as an objection, for most of us will agree, I think, that our vagaries of pronunciation much need correction. It is also true, probably, that increased means of communication through travel, and increased habit of doing business of importance through telephones, has made oral communication more important, and has made uniformity of pronunciation very much to be desired. Indeed, some scholars think that literary English shows signs of becoming an ear-language again instead of an eye-language. Yet I think he is a carping critic who would stop a movement because his own special method of attack is not to be followed. The problem before the committee will be the unification of the spelling and of the pronunciation. I think they can safely be trusted to attack whichever evils of either element are most noxious, and to preserve as much of the integrity of both elements as can be maintained.

The fifth objection is that if any reform is made there will be a long, long time of transition through which weary people must pass before any good results come. I have no doubt that this objection is well taken, and I certainly trust it will be pondered deeply by committees before making their recommendations. Any change will unquestionably be, at the moment, an unmitigated nuisance. If the result is worth it—and that the committee must prove—we shall simply have to bear as best we may the evils of transition.

The final objection that I shall here present concerns the composition of the committee. It is suggested that it is self-appointed, and some go so far as to hint that its proffers of service are officious. It is hardly worth while to discuss this seriously. The character and past services as well as the record for conservatism established by the members of the committee leave no room for doubtful questionings. The Chairman of the Executive Committee, as announced, will be Brander Matthews, who is a critic and scholar of reputation, a student of words and their uses, and a writer of direct, graceful, and forcible English. On the committee are such students of Anglo-Saxon and Middle English as Prof. March of Lafayette, Prof. Lounsbury of Yale, Dr. Charles P. G. Scott, and Prof. Hempl of Michigan. Besides these and other specialists there is a long list of practical and learned men. I feel sure that the interests of the English language are entirely safe in such hands.

At Last a Use Has Been Found for the Zebra

Not Much Value Himself, but He Makes a Capital Father When the Mother Is a Kentucky Mare---The Zebrula, Their Offspring, Sold by Thousands to the German Government.

IN the days when we were young and were joyful participants in a visit to the circus, or the less exciting but equally entertaining Zoo, there was always one animal that particularly impressed the childish mind. Probably the similarity that the zebra bore to our old friend the horse caused paramount interest in "the little black-and-white-striped ponies." The zebra, too, had always the youthful charm, being the only animal whose title begins with the letter Z, and the illustrated animal alphabet books have accordingly made almost universal use of the zebra picture.

As days went on, no doubt many others have wondered how it is that an animal bearing so close a resemblance to that ever useful friend, the horse, should never have been similarly useful to mankind, except for exhibition purposes. Some few years ago that well known wild animal monopolist, Carl Hagenbeck, became considerably interested in the terrific loss of horseflesh suffered by the British Army during the late Boer war owing to the bite of the tsetse fly, whose sting, in nine cases out of ten, proves fatal. It was estimated that this little pest cost the British Government, that of necessity had to import 99 per cent. of its horses and mules, many hundreds of thousands of dollars during the South African campaign.

It was a fact that the zebra, an animal closely allied to the horse and the mule, was as yet immune to the bite of the fly, and it was wondered if by the cross-breeding of the two closely allied animals, a hybrid could not be procured that would also be immune to the much-feared fly, and at the same time prove to be an animal of intelligence and of use to humanity.

The first difficulty that presented itself in a series of experiments was the fact that the zebra is an animal whose very nature has always rebelled against domestication or even restriction. The zebra is the most obstreperous animal in the world. Hundreds have been the subject of vain endeavor to tame and subdue them. It is not that the zebra is of savage nature, or particularly vicious, but rather that the blood of generations of freedom seems to be so thick that the animal eventually balks at the attempts to train or develop it mentally. Weeks of hard labor, when it would seem as if the efforts of the trainer would be rewarded with some success, have suddenly been dissipated by an unconquerable desire on the part of the animal to resist the trainer and refuse to attempt the trick or obey the order.

Five years were spent in training a span of four zebras for Leopold Rothschild, whose ambition was to drive a four-in-hand of these interesting creatures through the streets of London. In due course the zebras were shipped to London. For some weeks the beasts behaved fairly well, until one day when they were being driven by Mr. Rothschild from his place at Gunnersbury to South Ealing, they became frightened at a passing automobile, bolted, and generally proved so untractable that for weeks it was impossible to do anything with them.

The first attempt at cross-breeding was made in Hamburg, and the foal proved a most interesting creature. The intelligence of the young zebrula—for that was the title given the new hybrid—was remarkable. It seemed to have lost the rattle-brained scaredness of the father and to have become imbued with the domesticity of the mare. In appearance it had the size of the zebra with the rich bay coat of the mare, ribbed by dark underlining stripes, making, indeed, a handsome and beautiful beast. As a curio such an animal was of great interest, but, in the mind of the breeders, it was purely a question of utility. Young zebrulas were soon shipped to the Cape and sent north. It did not take long to discover that the youngsters were also immune from the bite of the fly.

ZEBRAS AND ZEBRULAS

Zebras Driven by Lord Walter Rothschild

It is perhaps well to state that the zebra is found in large numbers in German East Africa. The German Emperor soon became considerably interested in this new animal, which in the future is unquestionably to prove of so great an assistance in the country where "salted" (animals immune from the tsetse fly are called "salted") draught animals are almost worth their weight in gold.

With the Emperor's approval about twice a year a zebra hunt is held in German East Africa. That one of these hunts is a great novelty and creates considerable excitement may be gathered from the fact that it is necessary to employ the services of thousands of natives and that though much big game and antelope and springbok may be shot, there is severe penalty against shooting a zebra. Results of the hunt will often show that many hundreds of wild animals have been encircled and entrapped of which the zebras only have been allowed to live to prove a future blessing to mankind.

The first step in the zebra hunt is to obtain the assistance of the natives, some of whom live in the territory that will be hunted, while others may be imported for the purpose. The natives include Kaffirs, Swazis, Matabele, Mashonas, Zulus, and other dependents of the native chiefs. The territory to be hunted is selected and a centre founded. From this centre a circle is described with a radius of from 100 to 150 miles, making a complete circle of some 500 miles. A given date is set, the various chiefs notified, and the various hunting parties, generally about twenty-five in all, and each under a separate guide and head hunter, set out to cover the territory assigned to them. Soon the various parties meet on the right and left, forming a chain of natives who gradually converge toward the given centre.

The zebras, being extremely nervous and of a wild disposition, are always found in herds. At the first sight of the enemy, man, the herd stampedes, only to be met by another approaching party and turned again toward the centre. Often as many as five or six herds will be rounded up in this manner, and as the hunters gradually converge, the zebras become surrounded by a wall of enemies which it is practically impossible to break through. Sometimes, however, the animals do break the line, and many days are lost until they are again surrounded. Eventually there comes the day when an immense kraal is sighted, and into it the animals are driven. The kraal used for this purpose is nothing more than an immense inclosure with barbed-wire fence and thatch-roofed sheds to give the animals shelter from the rays of the noon sun. Then the hunt may be said to be at an end. A general feast is held in which all the hunters take part, and at which the chiefs are rewarded for their labors and all return to their own kraals until the next hunt.

As soon as the hunt is ended there begins the long, arduous duty of transporting the zebras to the breeding farms at Loangula, where at the present time there are hundreds of Kentucky mares for breeding purposes. For this transportation American cowboys are employed. They treat the zebra as a broncho, and in bunches of twenty or thirty partly drive and partly haul them to the breeding farm.

At the present time thousands of young zebrulas are under contract to be supplied to the German Government, to be used in the place of imported mules and artillery horses. The British Government is also extremely anxious to become the owner of unlimited quantities of this new hybrid, and the work of regeneration is proceeding apace until in a few years there is but little question that the zebrula will be fast taking the place of the horse and mule in South Africa. That the zebrula is in every way superior has been proved beyond a doubt. The zebrula is quick, strong, tractable, and willing, and for the rough country and hot climate is bound to become indispensable.

An interesting fact in connection with the zebrula is that some of these clever animals are to be seen this year in this country in connection with Hagenbeck shows. The zebrula will be seen in chariot races against the horse, whom in many instances he is able to distance, as he still retains the great speed and agility of the father zebra.

A HOME WHERE THE DESPISED "YELLOW DOG" IS WELCOME

IN West Thirty-eighth Street, right near Broadway, at No. 145, there hangs a legend, all newly painted and conspicuous, which makes one wish that every wandering yellow dog could read and every persecuted Tom decipher it:

> BIDE-A-WEE HOME FOR ANIMALS.
> Supported by Voluntary Contributions.

One also hopes that the latter part of the sign, so broadly insinuating, may lead thitherward such stray pennies, nickels, dimes, and dollars as well-disposed humans may feel they can spare in these days of dissensions, nodding of plumed heads, and violent shakings of silk hats around at the Madison Avenue headquarters of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

To homeless dogs, lame of foot, tired of body, of restless eye; to gentle tabbies, bearing, perchance, with them the burden of motherhood; to wary Toms, dodging the slings and arrows of outraged would-be sleepers or the stones and tin cans of the cruel street boy, there stretches forth from No. 145 a beckoning hand and there is a gentle voice, saying: "Come, bide-a-wee!"

It was the sign that led me in; also a little fox terrier, who guarded, sentinel-like, the double doors. The fox terrier belonged to a lady who belonged to the smart carriage which was in charge of the trim coachman who sat on the box. Now, the lady, it seemed, was going to an afternoon "at home," and on the way she had noticed a tiny kitten crying in the mud. She had the carriage stopped, while she got out and picked up the kitten; then, hugging it tight to her velvet coat, all unmindful of its dirty paws, she gave to the coachman the address of Bide-a-Wee, while her pet fox terrier sat on the box with the coachman and looked jealously into the carriage window.

As the lady came out I went in, and found the kitten being warmed by the stove and milk being administered with an after-dinner coffee spoon, for the kitten was too weak to lap.

Distributed about in the most beautifully kept and delightfully airy wire houses were about twenty dogs. There came sounds of many other dogs and cats from adjoining rooms and upstairs apartments. It is really quite a spacious place, the Bide-a-Wee Home, though not so spacious as it will have to be if its fame keeps extending and its four-legged beneficiaries continue to increase. When the weather gets warmer and removals from the city begin by the fashionable set I am wondering what the Bide-a-Wee people are to do with all the cats that will be left locked up in cellars or wandering hungry through the streets of New York's stylish neighborhoods. Everybody knows that New York is a frightfully hot place in June, July, and August, and everybody knows that it is unhealthy for two-legged New Yorkers to stay here, especially when they have at their disposal roomy country houses, ten-dollar-a-day hotels at the seaside, or European trips on swift liners. Everybody, too, knows that many of these two-legged New Yorkers are prone to go away and leave here to shift for themselves the four-legged members of the household if they happen to be of the feline species. Somehow they forget, in their anxiety to remove themselves from the heat and turmoil, that these useful creatures have not only never done them any harm, but, like the famous cat drowned by the infamous little Johnnie Green, have been busy catching the mice in their father's barns as well as those which have infested the kitchen and the pantry.

Now, the officers of the Bide-a-Wee have served notice that they intend to take care of such abandoned cats, and what is to be done with them all gives cause to pause and wonder. The Bide-a-Wee people intend to look down into the cellar windows of shut-up houses, and they intend to inspect back fences. It is a trouble and an expense, but it has to be done—unless, happy thought! New Yorkers can be prevailed upon to look after their cats; unless, indeed; those who sit on velvet cushions and kneel on plush footstools these Lenten Sundays shall let the words of the Psalter sink deep into their hearts:

While I was visiting at the Bide-a-Wee a colored man brought in a box of four coal black kittens of blinking eye and tricky paw. Their mother, it seems, multiplied and increased too rapidly, and was in a fair way to replenish the earth for some miles around in her neighborhood with black kittens, so Bide-a-Wee was asksd to dispose of them. Four humane persons who happen to want black kittens with blue eyes overflowing with the spirit of investigation and curiosity may have those kittens by applying with credentials.

There are also some beautiful white puppies waiting for some delighted children who will be good to them. If it cannot be truthfully recorded that the puppies can trace back their lineage to prehistoric times without the sign of a bar sinister, it may be understood that these babies of "Nellie," who lies all gloriously happy beside them in a huge clothes basket, shielded carefully from draughts, are sure to turn out as bright and smart and as watchful as kindly reared crossbreeds usually do. It is not their fault, and perhaps not even their misfortune, that the name and pedigree of their father is shrouded in mystery.

If you have plenty of money and insist upon paying for dogs and cats, Bide-a-Wee is not an institution to look suspiciously at your money and turn away from it, but if you want free dogs and free cats you may have your pick of the very best there are there. You will be hampered only by the condition that you give evidence of a disposition to treat an animal kindly and properly, and that you are financially able to give it a comfortable home. You may live on Riverside Drive or you may live in a humble tenement, but you must allow one of the young women Inspectors to take a look at your home and report upon its fitness, and if you take the dog or cat let it be hoped that you will not object to an occasional call to see how it is getting on.

As a stranger, you cannot walk directly into the home, pay down your money, and take your choice, or take your choice without money, immediately away with you. You decide on your choice—and you would not find a better opportunity for picking and comparing "points" and dispositions at the best dog fancier's—and if you are a suitable person to have the animal you need have no fear of a refusal.

The society is well named the Bide-a-Wee. Dogs and cats bide there a while, for a short or a long time as circumstances permit. If they are sick they are put in the hospital with the care of a veterinary and a trained nurse. Those who have distemper are kept in a room together, and so good is the care given them that they usually recover.

There is a convalescent room and an inspection room. In this latter ward all new-comers are taken till it is found whether they are healthy. If they are dirty, they are washed; if tangled, combed. Often, when they arrive, dirt and bad treatment make them look like the commonest of curs, but after examination and a thorough cleaning, with good food, many of them suddenly show forth their good blood. Many a lost pet and show dog of the noblest type finds its way to Bide-a-Wee, and those who have lost their dogs might do well to pay the home a visit, where they may be vociferously welcomed and instantly forgiven by, perhaps, the best friends they have ever known. I say "forgiven," for surely a lost dog has often much to forgive. Carelessness of master or mistress or servant is generally at the bottom of investigated cases of dog-losing.

At Bide-a-Wee the dogs and cats fare sumptuously on Waldorf-Astoria diet. This statement is meant to be taken literally, not figuratively. Every morning a red cart, drawn by a Bide-a-Wee attendant in white overalls, stops at the back door of the Waldorf-Astoria for pails of bread, meat, and vegetables in bits which are left on the plates of the hotel guests. This is the Waldorf-Astoria contribution to the Bide-a-Wee fund, and a very valuable one it is, too. Sometimes the inhabitants of Bide-a-Wee sniff the scent of the cart when it is still some distance from the door, and as they wait, all attention, for the approaching cart they afford a delightful study in animal nature.

They have their prodigies at Bide-a-Wee. Perhaps the cleverest and best-beloved is Mascotte, a mild-eyed spaniel, who first made her appearance there some months ago suffering with distemper. For three months she was nursed and tended, and on Jan. 8 she was given to a family living at Home Crest. On Feb. 20 she returned. No one could tell how, and there had been water to cross. She was very tired and very dirty and very hungry when she whined at the big double doors. She is now a permanent inhabitant of the home.

There, too, is Rover, a black-and-tan, who came with crushed paw, which was bandaged and healed. Rover become very proud of his sore paw, and, having become accustomed to hold it up for the inspection of visitors, kept on exhibiting it when it got well. Let anybody walk by his cage and up he would stand on three legs, holding out his fourth with melancholy mien. When he became fat and healthy and strong of limb, one had only to say "Who's got the sorest paw in Bide-a-Wee?" to have the little black-and-tan limp to the front and stick his one-time injured paw through the bars. A good home was found for Rover in Twenty-second Street, but, unfortunately, the fact that he once had a sore paw was forgotten and considered as a matter of no importance. No mention was ever made of it, and Rover, accustomed to being starred, betook himself back to Bide-a-Wee at the end of a week, where he now proudly thrusts forth his paw on the least provocation.

"I've had to bring back the cat; my dog won't have it," announced a man who walked into the home the morning I was there. He carried a pretty Maltese under his arm. "They fought. I'm sorry, for the place is full of mice."

Five minutes afterward a woman brought in a dog. "We've had him four years," she said. "We are so fond of him, but now we've got a baby and he's jealous of the baby, so I want you to take him and find a home for him. We tried to lose him, but he always came back."

Oh, the stupidity as well as the cruelty of mankind, to say nothing of so-called gentle womankind! Does not every intelligent person know that cats and dogs become the greatest friends if they live in the same family? A little patience and teaching on the part of the man who took the Maltese from Bide-a-Wee and fighting would have ended and friendship begun between his dog and the cat.

As for the woman who turned off a faithful dog of four years because he was naturally jealous of what seemed to him a sudden rival in the affections of his mistress—well, let us hope that she will never find it convenient to abandon her baby! Let it also be hoped, for the baby's sake, that the time will never come when it will need the protection of the dear old bull terrier its mother first tried to lose and then gave away. In a month the terrier would have loved the baby. Every child brought up in the companionship of a dog is the better for it, and every dog will become the most painstaking of nurses and champions if properly taught and well treated. At first the baby may pull the dog's tail, but the baby can be readily taught not to do this by a method employed by one of the sweetest mothers of my acquaintance. When her baby was two years old she got him a St. Bernard puppy, and straightway the baby pulled the pup's tail.

"It hurts to pull the doggie's tail," said the mother gently, drawing the baby to her. "It hurts like this," whereupon she pulled the baby's hair, "and every time Baby pulls doggie's tail Mamma must pull Baby's hair to show him how it hurts poor doggie." She kissed away the baby's tears, and the pup's tail wagged on thereafter all unmolested.

If you find a lost dog or cat, take it to Bide-a-Wee, and don't forget the address. If for some absolutely humane or sensible reason you cannot longer keep your own dog or cat, take it to Bide-a-Wee. Don't under any consideration abandon to the streets or to cruel keepers these fellow-creatures which have been put in your care. The heart of Bide-a-Wee is large, even though its funds are in danger of running short, and Bide-a-Wee will take in your castaways. If for humane reasons you wish quietly to put your dog or cat to sleep, Bide-a-Wee will not do that, although there you may get some valuable advice concerning this subject.

If you are needing a nice dog or a cat, do go to Bide-a-Wee and get one. There are some such jolly dogs there, such playful pups, such good "mousers," such blue-eyed kittens, waiting for you.

"Tick, Tick" in Driving Wheel Told of Death

COOLING rapidly after her daily rush from New York to the distant shore, No. 1,029 stood alone in the dark roundhouse with her Irish hostler. The hiss and bubble of the falling steam had ceased, and the soft booming of the sea was only broken by the occasional snap or click of contracting joints as the firebox heat went down. Quietly the man worked by the light of a flaming oil torch, thinking, perhaps, as he wiped the giant steel limbs, of the day when he, too, might control that machine or one just like her, until as he passed the forward starboard driving wheel he heard "little men making nails."

The conceit amused him at first, but every time thereafter as he passed that part of the engine he heard, or thought he heard, the faint ticking of a watch.

Suddenly he recalled that he was wearing none, and paused startled at the trick he believed his nerves were playing. Then he stopped and listened. There was no mistake about it. Clear and distinct a watch was keeping time somewhere within that great hub.

Flare in hand the hostler dropped into the ash pit and climbed up between and behind the wheels. Wedged fast between the jaws of the engine frame and the chair carrying the journal was a gold watch bearing the company's private mark and number. The hostler's face showed chalky white beneath the grime as he bore it out.

Conductor John Connaughton, Local Train No. 642, north bound, had fallen upon melancholy days, and this was the saddest of them all for him. His wife was but a few weeks dead, his son crippled on the railroad, himself removed on a change of schedule from a proud flier which he had run for years to the slow accommodation, which, starting from nowhere, ended nowhere, serving simply as a feeder to certain fast trains running over the main line; and now his daughter had gone to the hospital for a serious operation.

To make matters worse Train No. 642 had done little business, and he had nothing to do but to brood over his troubles. His train, indeed, had run ahead of its schedule, and now at Whitson's there were two full minutes to wait. John Connaughton had many friends about the station, and they talked cheeringly to him on the platform. Just above lay the Peddler Freight going down the line, but run in on the siding to let the fastest afternoon express go through to the sea. The Peddler's engine was fuming and panting as her men joined the little group at the station. Two long and two short blasts of a clear, deep whistle came faintly down the wind. The block signal just below the station changed with a hiss from "Danger" to "Line Clear," and shone sickly white against the sunset glow. John Connaughton looked at his watch. Then he dropped his arm, and Train 642 began to move slowly up the track. He lingered for a few parting words until the last car came about opposite him.

"Good-bye!" he called, and ran across the tracks.

No. 1,029 shot out from between the Peddler locomotive and Train 642 with a cannonlike roar. The electric lights in the Pullmans danced and glimmered for a second or two, and the blood-red tail lamps, dwindling to sparks, made a long, graceful curve across the landscape and disappeared in the dark pine forest, above which the steam rose gray against the sky.

Valuables often disappear with startling suddenness in passenger wrecks, but it was doubly distressing to those who picked up the body of John Connaughton to note that his watch had gone when there were none but railroad men about. In the excitement some one threw the semaphores down the line against No. 1,029. One caught her nearly nine miles away. Neither the men upon her nor those who rode behind knew any more than she did until then that she had killed a man. The train crew ran quickly along the cars, but whatever they found, they found no watch, and the flier ended her run almost on time.

Much wonderment was expressed when the number of the watch found by the hostler flashed along the road, identifying it as Connaughton's, and rather more of awe that it should have lodged where it did and traveled nearly a hundred miles, but the explanation was somewhat simple. When the watch was found it was still clasped and held fast in the stiffening fingers of John Connaughton's severed left hand.

Balloon with Which Wellman Will Seek the Pole

Full Description of the Immense Dirigible Airship Which M. Godard Has Contracted to Build Within Four Months--Twice the Size of Any Successful Flying Machine.

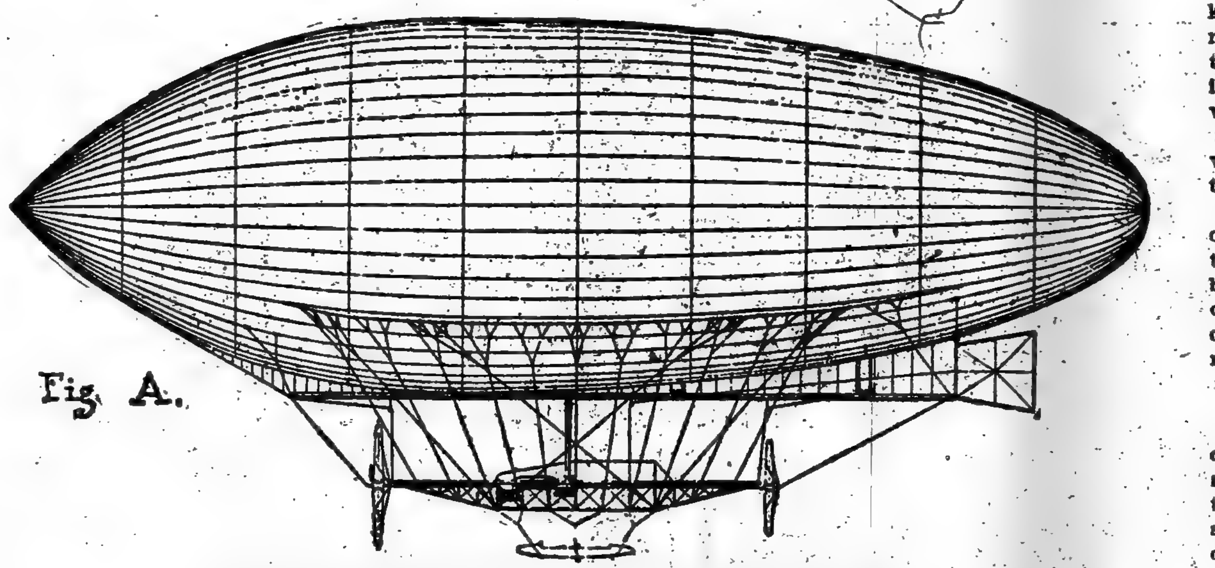

Fig. A.

GENERAL FEATURES OF THE POLAR AIRSHIP PLANS.

Engineer Louis Godard's plan, printed above, shows the proportions and in part the details of the greatest airship ever constructed. The dimensions of the huge balloon are as follows:

	Meters.	Feet.
Length	50	164.04
Greatest diameter	16	52.49
Surface	1,960 sq.	21,098 sq.
Volume	6,350 cube	224,244 cube
	Kilos.	Pounds.
Lifting power, (hydrogen at 1k., 110 per meter cube)	7,048	15,538
Lifting power, (hydrogen at 1k., 140 per meter cube)	7,240	16,000
Weight of airship, steel car, motors, and machinery complete	3,000	6,600
Weight of crew, instruments, wireless and other apparatus, gasoline	4,240	9,400

The motive power is composed of two motors, one of 50 and the other of 25 horse power, driving two screws, and giving speeds of from 12 to 19 statute miles per hour.

The length of the car, which is made entirely of steel tubing, is 16 meters, or 52.5 feet.

The engine room and cabin for the crew are inclosed. The steel boat is carried suspended below the car.

This steel boat serves as a working deck for the manipulation of the guide-rope equilibreur and retardateur, and also for storage of gasoline. In case any accident happens to the airship it is to be used by the members of the crew in sledging their way back to the headquarters.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 17.—Just before I left Paris to return to the United States, Engineer Godard placed in my hands the completed designs and studies of the huge airship he is building for the Wellman Chicago Record-Herald polar expedition. To finish a work of such magnitude and so complex and delicate in the short time at his command M. Godard was obliged to surround himself with a staff of engineers and experts, and to employ a force of twelve draughtsmen and mathematical computers. The results, I think, speak well for his energy and skill. Inasmuch as he had entered into a contract to build in four months an airship more than twice as large as any that had ever made successful flight above the earth, M. Godard found it necessary to prepare his working drawings at the same time he was assembling his material and starting the actual construction.

Accompanying this article the reader will find a reproduction of the designs for the dirigible, comprising views in elevation, in plan, and from one end, together with a drawing showing the method adopted for calculating the surface, the volume, the interior pressure of the gas, and the tensile strength required in the envelope of the balloon. Before quoting from the technical reports of M. Godard, which accompanied the designs, it may be well to give some explanation concerning the details of the drawings. Not many Americans are familiar with the methods of airship construction and operation. It is not an art which has made much progress in this country, although Knabenshue, Baldwin, and perhaps others have done interesting and valuable work on a small scale. In this country the prevailing conception of an airship is that of a gas bag of small size, relatively, covered with a netting of ropes or steel wires, and with sufficient lifting capacity, when inflated with hydrogen gas, to carry the balloon, a light framework of bamboo or wood, one or two men, and a small motor, with a sufficient supply of fuel to run it for a few hours.

The dirigible which M. Godard and his corps of experts have in hand is an entirely different sort of affair. Its great size enables it to lift not only the balloon, but the car of steel, the three motors, comprising a total of eighty horse power, two screws or propulseurs, a steel boat, moto-sledges, five men, food for them for seventy-five days, instruments, tools, repair materials, lubricating oils, and 5,500 pounds of gasoline for the motors. It will be seen that in its cargo capacity our ship of the air, with its eight tons of carrying power, much more resembles a vessel to navigate the water than the small contrivances used by Santos-Dumont, Knabenshue, and Baldwin in aerial experimentation.

In this article it is desired to consider only the balloon and its materials and construction, leaving the steel-framed car, the motors, the propulseurs, and other important features for future explanation.

The instructions given by me to M. Godard, and embodied in the contract, were to spare neither weight nor expense in his efforts to make a balloon that should give the maximum of security and endurance. It is commonly believed among the aeronautic experts of France that the unfortunate Andrée met his fate partly through faulty construction of his balloon; that it lacked the gas-tightness which should have enabled it to remain a long time in the air, and that the fabric of which it was composed did not possess sufficient tensile strength to enable it to resist the elements and give its navigators a fair chance for their lives. I pass no judgment as to this, because I believe the builder of Andrée's balloon, who is now dead, was a careful and conscientious man. But, at any rate, I was determined to avoid such mistakes if care and prudence and outlay could suffice to do it. For in one particular, and in one only, speaking broadly, is our enterprise comparable to that of Andrée—the solidity and endurance of the gasbag is as essential to us as it was to him, despite the fact that his aerial craft was a mere toy of the winds, without motive power or steerability, while ours is to have both.

In the past most balloons have been made of silk, varnished with from two to five coatings. But in recent constructions of important character cotton tissues have been employed, in one or more thicknesses, coated with a thin film of pure rubber applied by means of special machinery similar to the calenders of paper mills. The Lebaudy airship had two tissues of this cotton, both rubbered. After careful consideration and elaborate calculations of pressures and strains, three thicknesses of fabric were decided upon for our ship—two of cotton material and one of silk—with three coatings of rubber. All three are consolidated into one fabric, giving great tensile strength. Counting from the interior of the balloon, the envelope is made up as follows:

	Grams Per Square Meter.	Ounces Per Square Foot.
Strong silk	85	.278
Caoutchouc (Para pure)	105	.344
Cotton	105	.344
Caoutchouc	65	.213
Cotton	100	.328
Caoutchouc	45	.147
Total	505	1.654

In one of the plans printed herewith will be found an exposition of the method of computing the surfaces, volumes, and pressures. The body of the balloon is divided into zones lettered from "a" to "p," inclusive, and the surfaces, volumes, and pressure are calculated mathematically for each zone. For the purpose of adjusting the weight and tensile strength of the envelope to the work put upon it by the pressure of the gas within the balloon, five larger zones are employed, indicated by the heavy, arrow-pointed lines. Thus, in the central zone A, embracing the "maitre couple," or greatest diameter, the pressure of the gas rises to 466 kilos per square meter, equal to about 95 pounds per square foot. It is upon this central zone the envelope is applied, as outlined above—one strong silk and two thicknesses of cotton, with three coats of rubber. These three thicknesses of material, consolidated into one, give a total tensile strength of 2,800 kilos per square meter, or about 575 pounds per square foot. Hence we have this result: Maximum strain, 95 pounds per square foot; tensile strength, 575 pounds per square foot; coefficient of safety, 6 to 1.

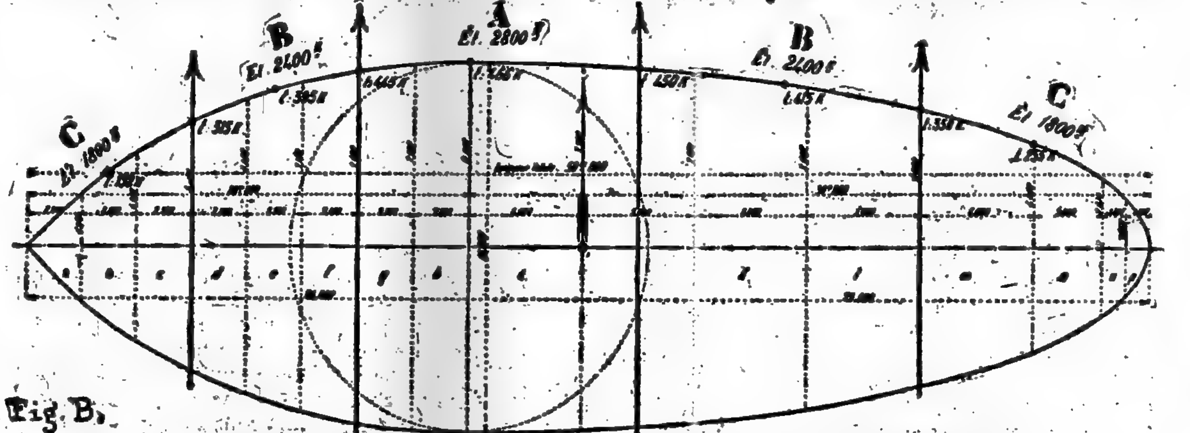

Fig. B.

The above is a technical study of the airship, giving the calculations of its surface, volume, pressure, &c. The figures immediately under the large letters, A, B, and C indicate the tensile strength of the fabric of the envelope for the zone below. The figures just within the top line of the figure of the balloon denote the maximum pressure of the gas and work upon the envelope. It will be noticed that the co-efficient of safety exceeds 5 to 1 in each of the zones.

In Sections B the pressure ranges from 314 to 450 kilos per square meter. With a maximum of 450 kilos to provide for, a lighter silk is used in these zones, reducing the weight of the envelope to 455 grammes per square meter, but retaining 2,400 kilos of tensile strength, which means a coefficient of more than 5 to 1.

In the Sections C the maximum pressure is 350 kilos, and here the envelope is composed of two thicknesses of cotton with three coatings of rubber, omitting the silk, and again saving in weight, but securing 1,800 kilos of strength per square meter—again with a coefficient of safety of more than 5 to 1.

In the Lebaudy airship the coefficient of safety was 3½ to 1. We have a coefficient of more than 5 to 1 throughout.

The tensile strength of the fabrics is not a matter of guesswork. Samples of each consignment from the manufacturer are submitted to the Paris Chamber of Commerce, tested by dynamometer, and officially stamped. These tests are under the regulations of the Chamber of Commerce, and the certificates are made the bases of contracts and their fulfillment.

In computing the work of the gas upon the fabric of the balloon M. Godard and his engineers have assumed that the interior pressure is equivalent to thirty millimeters of water, or about six pounds per square foot. This pressure is maintained by means of the ventilator or blower which inflates with air the balloonet or interior balloon, and which is operated by an independent motor of five horse power in the engine room. The use of the pressure is to maintain the rigidity of form of the great balloon, as there are no interior frames or other stiffening devices. The integrity of form is maintained solely by interior pressure and this pressure is usually at twenty to twenty-four millimeters. In taking thirty millimeters and adding it to the upward thrust or lifting force of the gas itself, (somewhat more than one ounce per cubic foot,) M. Godard has shown the conservatism which characterizes all his calculations and work. Though it is unlikely the interior pressure within our balloon will ever exceed twenty-five millimeters, the fabric of the envelope has strength sufficient to give a factor of safety of five to one at thirty millimeters.

In addition to the tensile strength of the envelope, every seam, whether circumferential or longitudinal, is reinforced. The material is lapped about twenty-five millimeters (one inch) and doubly sewn. Inasmuch as there is danger that the hydrogen may escape through the little holes made by the needle all the sewing lines are covered with bands of fabric cemented to the envelope—first a band covering the seam, and over that still another and wider one. The primary purpose of these interior bands is to make the envelope as nearly as possible gas-tight, but they also add greatly to the tensile strength of the skin.

The outer surface of the balloon is quite smooth. There is no netting of cordage or of wires to hold moisture, snow, or frost. Besides, the outer surface is a coating of rubber, which will serve to shed the rain and snow and prevent moisture entering the fabric. In effect the double reinforcing bands which cover the seams, circumferentially and longitudinally, act as an interior netting, consolidated with the envelope, and increasing materially its powers of resistance to all stresses. This added tensile strength is not computed in the coefficient of 5 to 1.

No means have as yet been found of making, with fabrics, an absolutely gas-tight reservoir. In varnished silk balloons, even when of two or three thicknesses of material, the loss ranges from 1½ to 3 per cent. daily. With fabrics coated with caoutchouc these losses are materially reduced; and with our three-fold material and three coatings of rubber we shall, according to the experts, approximate very closely to gas-tightness. M. Godard's contract calls for an envelope from which the loss by leakage shall not exceed 1½ per cent. in twenty-four hours, and he is convinced the loss will not be more than one-half of his maximum allowance. A loss of even 2 per cent. per day would not be great enough to interfere with the plans of the expedition.

The weights of the various materials entering into the construction of the huge balloons will be approximately as follows:

	Pounds.
Fabric of the envelope, and rubber coatings	2,200
Reinforcing bands	225
Etraves and relingues (for suspension of car)	100
Five valves	110
Balloonet of light varnished silk	225
Total	2,860

Allowing for the three thicknesses, for the laps, and for wastage in cutting, approximately 12,000 square yards of fabric will be required. The cost of material is about $1.50 per yard as it comes from the factory.

It is the judgment of all the aeronautic engineers whom I consulted in Paris that M. Godard is constructing for our expedition the strongest and most enduring gas envelope known to the history of the art.

French Marriage Reform.

EVER since the Code Napoleon was drafted, reform of French marriage laws has been demanded and sociologists have combined with lawyers and politicians to bring about the desired results. In an ill-advised moment, the Government instructed the venerable and sedate Commission of Reform of the Civil Code to pay attention to amateur opinion. Certain men of letters were called in—Marcel Prévost, the brothers Margueritte, Paul Hervieu, and others—who had written about the marriage laws, either in the form of fiction or fact.

These amateurs have now, after a three months' sitting, drawn up a report. In brief, the consent of parents would no longer be necessary when the bridegroom is twenty-one and the bride eighteen; no fee would be charged, and no useless papers demanded. The marriage would become a private and not a public function, and would no longer be performed at the town hall. Nothing would be wanted by law beyond the proof of identity, and, in case one or other of the couple is under age, the consent of the parents. The contract signed by the married couple would be legal when once it had been transcribed on the civil register.

Sir George Howard Darwin Coming: His Scientific Specialty.

IT has been a frequent occurrence in the past score of years that American scientists have been invited to send delegates to centenaries and jubilees of European great men. Now it is America's turn to receive delegates from Europe in honor of an American, and it is actually a bicentenary. In the middle of April the American Philosophical Society of Philadelphia will celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of Benjamin Franklin. Among the foreign visitors are such men as Sir George H. Darwin, son of the great naturalist, and whose name is inseparably associated with the mechanics of tides and the form of the earth; Hugo de Vries of Amsterdam, the famous plant physiologist, and H. A. Lorentz of Leyden, whose theories and researches into the dynamics of the electron and the great problem of the interconnection of matter and ether stand with the classics of mathematical physics.

Even the untutored savage dwelling upon the shores of the sea or its bays and inlets would be forced to notice the rise and fall of the water. He undoubtedly evolved theories of the tides as he did of other natural phenomena. An early myth declared the ocean to be the blood of the earth and the tides its pulse. Another very ingenious theory believed the tides due to the heating and consequent expansion of the waters, as it was observed that high tide occurred when the sun or moon shone upon the ocean.

The Romans had a very clear idea of a connection between the tides and the moon and sun. It was, however, Sir Isaac Newton, in his "Principia," who first set forth the true cause of these wonderful disturbances in the calm depths of the ocean. Men like Bernoulli and Laplace advanced the mathematical theory of the subject, but to-day the man who is entitled to the last word upon this most complex and important subject is Sir George Howard Darwin, K. C. B., F. R. S., Plumian Professor and Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, at present on the ocean, coming to America.

If one refers to Sir George's articles on the tides in the Encyclopedia Britannica or to his papers in the Proceedings of the Royal Philosophical Society the bristling array of the most complicated mathematical formulae make it seem easier to decipher the hieroglyphics of Egypt than to attempt to get any simple conception of this every-day phenomenon. And yet he has accomplished a most difficult task, which is, as he so aptly states it, "to shell away the apparatus of investigation and the technical mode of speech from the thing behind it." Those fortunate persons who heard his course of Lowell Lectures in 1897, or who have read his charming book on "The Tides," realize that in him are united those two abilities rarely found in one person—ability for the most recondite theoretical research and ability to make the results of such investigations not only clear but attractive to a general audience without special training.

Sir George is no stranger to the American public, much less to our men of science. He holds in grateful recollection the hospitalities shown him on his previous visit, and the American people may be trusted to repeat them, especially when their object is so thoroughly delightful and genial a gentleman.

Even in a seaport like New York it is safe to say that not one in a thousand realizes the importance of the tides, their causes and peculiarities. They go up hill on to a ferryboat this morning and down hill a few days later without thinking of it. Many and amusing theories have been devised to account for the tides, and although their apparent connection with the moon was recognized even by the Romans, nevertheless people have not yet ceased to evolve new theories as to the cause of this connection.

The Newtonian theory holds the field against all others. We have often seen two children taking hold of each other's hands swing round and round, neither going simply around the other, but both around an axis somewhere between them. If one child is larger than the other, then she moves around in a smaller circle, and if a grown man thus swings a small child by its hands he seems to move very little, compared with the movement of the child, and yet it is evident that he does swing a little to counterbalance the pull of the child.

If we imagine that M in Fig. 1 is a small ball, and that E is a large one, the two held upon a long, light, stiff bar FM, then it will be possible to find some point as H, such that, if a string is attached at that point, the two balls will balance with the connecting bar horizontal. If the balls were of equal weight this point of suspension would be in the middle of the bar. If we carefully begin twisting the supporting string the system will be set in rotation around the axis AB, passing through C the common centre of gravity. M will travel in a circle of radius CM and E in a circle of radius CE. The centrifugal force pulling out on M being just counterbalanced by the corresponding force on E directed in the opposite direction, such a system would resemble the case of the man and the child.

If we consider M to be the moon and E the earth and replace the connecting bar by the attraction of gravitation acting to hold them together, we have a diagram illustrating the conditions as they really exist in Nature. We always speak of the moon as revolving around the earth, when in reality they both revolve around a common centre of gravity. The earth is about eighty times as heavy as the moon, consequently CE is only one-eightieth of CM. The mutual attraction of the earth and moon holds them together, and they revolve at such a rate that the centrifugal force tending to throw them apart is just balanced by the force of gravity tending to make them fall together.

Let us analyze a little more in detail the effects of these forces upon the earth. It is the pull of the moon upon the earth as a whole which preserves the balance, and for purposes of discussing this balance of forces we could have assumed that all the mass of the earth were concentrated at its centre, C. Thus the mutual attraction just balances centrifugal force at C. Consequently a part of the earth situated at F^1 being further from M will be pulled less by gravitation, and the centrifugal force would overbalance, and any object at that point would tend to leave the earth. On the other hand, at F, being nearer to M than is E, the centrifugal force would be less and the attraction greater, hence the attraction will overbalance the centrifugal force, and an object at F would also tend to leave the earth. Thus if E were an elastic sphere it would bulge out at F^1 and F and be drawn in at D^1 and D in a plane at right angles to the direction EM. If E were a solid sphere with a thin coating of liquid, then the liquid would be piled up at L^1 and at F, while it would be drawn away from D and D^1. It would be high tide at L and L^1 and low tide at D and D^1.

The ellipse in Fig. 2 may serve to illustrate in a very much exaggerated way the shape of the surface of the liquid. Similarly our ocean is always tending to pile up at a point under the moon and at the antipodal point thereto. As the earth revolves upon its axis a point, as at O, Fig. 2, will pass in succession through points of high and low tides, having two high tides, at L and L^1, and two low tides, at D and D^1, in every complete revolution of the earth—that is, every twenty-four hours, or, to speak more correctly, every twenty-three hours, about, for the forward motion of the moon in its orbit is continually shifting the direction of the pull.

Such would be the simple case if the moon alone were concerned and the "tidal wave" had free sweep around the earth. All this beautiful simplicity vanishes when we pass to the actual conditions upon the earth. The tidal wave would lag a little behind, even if there were no continents; so that the motion of the earth on its axis would carry the high tides a little forward toward G and G^1; the moon, trying to hold back this wave to its ideal position, produces what is known as "tidal friction," which is tending to slow up the axial rotation of the earth and lengthen our day.

Of course, in reality these tidal waves never attain anything approximating ideal development. They may start their development and travel across the Atlantic, only to encounter the coast of America and be broken up and reflected back. They travel up the bays and rivers, producing the most interesting results. Between New York and Albany there are two whole tidal waves in the Hudson. In the Bay of Fundy the tidal wave is concentrated, like a sound wave in an ear trumpet, until it rises to great heights.

So far one might imagine that it would be a very simple affair to predict the tides. Not so very long ago it was a valuable family secret to be able to predict the tides. Notably the Liverpool tidal tables were a family monopoly for several generations. A rather careful analysis of a long series of observations enabled those initiated into the secret process to calculate for the future.

When it is remembered that the mutual attraction of the earth and the sun gives rise to a similar tidal wave the possibilities of complications become apparent. The solar tidal wave is smaller than the lunar wave, for the much greater distance between the sun and the earth makes the differential action on the two sides of the earth much less. At new moon, when the moon and sun are in the same direction from the earth, and when, at full moon, they are opposite, the solar and lunar tidal waves combine to make a "high run of tides," "Spring tides," but when, at first and third quarter, the sun is in the direction D D^1, then the two waves tend to neutralize each other. Bearing in mind the fact that the orbit of the moon is inclined to the orbit of the earth, and that the distances from the earth to the sun and to the moon vary at different seasons, it will be seen that the problem of prediction becomes no simple matter, and, further complicated by continents, it would seem well-nigh impossible. Nevertheless tidal tables are computed, and check with observation with remarkable accuracy.

These same tidal forces which deform the liquid envelope of the oceans act similarly upon the "solid" nucleus, and Lord Kelvin computed that the mass of the earth must be at least as rigid as ordinary steel to be able to resist these tidal strains. If the earth really possessed a semi-liquid centre, as was believed at one time, there would be a tidal wave in it, which would buckle up the surface of the earth twice a day. Now we know that the interior of the earth is kept solid by the enormous pressure of the strata themselves. Nevertheless these tidal strains are active, and may well be the last straw which breaks loose the forces evinced in many an earthquake.

A moment's reflection will bring out the enormous importance of the most exact knowledge of the tides and tidal currents. The mariner must calculate his position at sea in very many cases by "dead reckoning," from his speed, the time, &c., and many a vessel has gone to destruction because the "set of the tide" was not known or was temporarily changed by storms. We can almost imagine that old Ocean is taking particular pride in wafting to our shores upon its proud flood the man who has studied the beating of its heart most successfully.

Great honor has been done that unique French military corps which has figured so long in novels and on the stage as the Foreign Legion. Just before he retired from the Presidency, M. Loubet conferred the Cross of the Legion of Honor upon the regiment, which will now display the order on its colors. The Foreign Legion consists only of foreigners who, for criminal or other reasons, may wish to lose their identity. On enlistment, no questions are asked, and they enroll for life unless released by their own request following some act of signal bravery. The officers of the corps are the pick of the French Army.

Another Romance of the British Peerage---Sultan of Turkey Finds an Apologist---Alfred de Musset's Memory Honored---An Advocate of "Patriotic Socialism."

The Marchioness Townshend, Said to Be the Most Beautiful Woman in England.

Alfred de Musset Monument by Antonin Mercie Recently Unveiled in Front of the Theatre Francais, Paris.

Remarkable Case of the Marquis of Townshend.

LIFE among the younger peers of the British realm seems suddenly to have opened a vista of almost infinite romantic possibilities. Within the month two marriages between peers and commoners' daughters have been announced, and now comes the remarkable case of the senior Liberal peer, the Marquis of Townshend and the Marchioness, who, since she changed her name from Gladys Sutherst last August, has been known as the most beautiful woman in England. The Marquis has been declared to be of unsound mind, and is in the custody of his wife at his house in Brook Street, London, while his mother, the Dowager Marchioness, is trying to have him released. His father-in-law, T. Sutherst, barrister at law, is seeking to have the pecuniary obligations of the alliance settled, and, in the gloomy background lurks a mutual friend who claims £2,000 for having introduced the Marquis to the barrister, thereby making the match possible.

Twice before in recent years has the quiet unassuming Marquis, now in his fortieth year, been prominent in the public eye. In 1903 he made an application to the Court of Chancery for permission to dispose of certain heirlooms so that the proceeds might enable him to keep up a position commensurate with the dignity of his title. Permission was given, and a lot of the family silver and portraits knocked down at auction brought over £40,000. A year ago the Marquis was sued for breach of promise by Mrs. Evelyn Diana Turnour Sheffield. The case was ultimately withdrawn.

The founder of the family fortunes was Roger Townshend, a lawyer of great eminence in the reign of Edward IV. The present title dates from 1724, and the present Marquis is the sixth of his family to bear it. Ambassadors, Generals, and statesmen have figured in the annals of the family. Several have been extravagant, and about the middle of June last, Lord Townshend, feeling the burden of inherited debts, looked about for a matrimonial alliance which would do what the sale of the family heirlooms had apparently failed to do—"enable him to keep up a position commensurate with the dignity of his title."

A friend offered his assistance—for a consideration—a prospectus was drawn up, and, finally the Marquis was introduced to T. Sutherst, barrister at law, who, in turn, introduced the peer to his daughter. According to a letter preserved in the alleged handwriting of the Marquis, said Marquis, on condition that the marriage between himself and Miss Sutherst be brought about, promises to pay 10 per cent. of whatever sum of money he may receive from his then prospective father-in-law, or from any member of his family. And it is further set down that the 10 per cent. commission would be paid as soon as the moneys were handed to the Marquis, which would have to be paid before the actual marriage was effected. For, the letter naïvely continues, without such moneys, the Marquis could neither marry nor undertake to pay such a commission, neither to his friend nor to any one else. The wedding took place on Aug. 9 last, and the next day the Marquis and Marchioness of Townshend started for the Continent on their honeymoon. There seems, however, to have been a hitch somewhere in the question of settlements, for, in writing on Sept. 12, 1905, to the aforementioned intermediary, the Marquis says:

"The question of the money which is due to you, amounting to some £2,000, in consideration of the introduction you gave me to Mr. Sutherst, with a view to marrying his daughter, is a source of great worry and anxiety to me. As you are aware, it is dependent upon the completion of the contract between Mr. Sutherst and myself. * * * As soon as that is effected, I shall pay you, as I feel myself bound as a gentleman and man of honor to do so. It appears to me to be in the interest of every one concerned that this contract should be carried out as speedily as possible, as I am anxious about the settlement and the jointure for my wife."

The latest papers received from London show that all the parties in the case save the mysterious intermediary are being interviewed at great length. Mr. Sutherst, who called in the medical experts who decided that on account of hysteria the Marquis had best be placed in the custody of his wife, denies that he contracted to pay Lord Townshend any sum of money prior to the time of marriage, although he admits that there is a clause in the marriage agreement which reads as follows: "Upon the marriage taking place, a sum of money, to be mutually agreed upon, should be advanced by the first party to the second party, which is to be regarded as on account of the total sum to be advanced and charged as a loan." "But," continues the father-in-law, "in any case, the money to be advanced was incumbent upon certain terms concerning the Townshend estates which the Marquis has not carried out."

The Dowager Marchioness Townshend, who is bitterly opposing the detention of her son, demands a public inquiry into the question of sanity, and adds: "I do not say that the Marquis is shrewd enough to be capable of conducting his own business affairs, but it is preposterous to suggest that he is of unsound mind and ought to be put under restraint."

And now, what of the Marquis himself? He unhesitatingly received the crowd of reporters which invaded the house in Brook Street, and from their combined report the following picture is a paraphrase: The Marquis is a diminutive person under five feet high. A large head and face rests heavily on the thinnest and frailest of bodies, clothed in a precise suit of gray tweed. The forehead thrusts itself prominently forward over large, bulky eyes, illuminated by the lurid glow of pathetic languor. His upper lip is delicately cut, and forms a curious contrast with the heavy lower and rather massive chin. His hands are small and delicate. He speaks in a high-pitched voice and with a slight foreign accent. According to his story, the mysterious intermediary to whom he confesses owing some £2,000, lives at Brighton, and it was while on his way to meet this friend that he was detained by the medical emissaries of his father-in-law. Cut off from Brighton, he is quite content to remain in the charge of his wife, who, as has been said, is considered by certain judges to be the most beautiful woman in England.

All of which goes to show that romantic English novelists have by no means exhausted realistic material, as it may be found around them. The ancient adage applied in censure to British romantic fiction that peers rarely marry beneath them, has received several severe shocks of late, of which the Townshend affair is well-nigh overwhelming.

The younger a man is the more he thinks he knows about women.

Curious Episode in the Career of Alfred de Musset.

PROBABLY few of those present at the inauguration of Mercié's statue of Alfred de Musset, which took place the other day in front of the Théâtre Français, Paris, imagined that there was a certain link which bound de Musset to a celebrated English man of letters the exposition of which might prove a new bond for literary discussion between the two countries. Even the numerous editors of de Musset's works, to say nothing of his biographers, have never made note of the relation in question.

At the age of 18, de Musset, who had acquired some knowledge of English, thanks to the teaching of his governess, Mlle. Colin, who, by the way, was present at the inauguration of the statue (she is now in her 92nd year,) made a French translation of Thomas De Quincey's masterpiece, "The Confessions of an English Opium Eater."

The translation bore on the title page the legend "Le Mangeur d'Opium, par Alfred de Musset," and, aside from the copy preserved in the Bibliothèque Nationale, and one other in this country, has probably ceased to exist. The copy in Paris was unearthed at one of the bookstalls along the Seine by a M. Charles Soto, in 1868, and carefully treasured by him until the Commune burned his house two years later. The precious volume escaped the flames and later on found its way to the National Library.

Lovers of De Quincey may be curious to learn how their favorite fared at the hands of an imaginative young Frenchman who was later to become a great poet. De Musset proceeds swimmingly with his translation until he encounters the episode of Ann—the street girl, it may be recalled, who saved the lad De Quincey's life. De Musset evidently had no sympathy for the English writer's idealization of the Pariah-saint of Oxford Street, for he drags her down from the clouds and into the gutters of Paris; and romance he supplies in plenty. The way he polishes off "The English Opium Eater" may be briefly paraphrased from the French original as follows:

"One day, in the Winter of 1810, the author found himself once again on the never-ending terraces of the Rue d'Oxford. He encounters there one of his ancient friends, who says: 'This evening I take you to a ball—a French ball.'"

A few pages further on the reader is invited to witness a French dance in the heart of Old London. There he meets Ann again—De Quincey, it will be recalled, never did. "The Marquis de C. was announced. He entered, leading by the hand a lady who was presently surrounded by several young men.

"It is she!

"She was pale and covered with diamonds. In passing she saw him, but appeared neither to notice nor to recognize him. Presently he went out—desolated and without hope. Two men followed. One of them said: 'Is not your name M. De Quincey?' 'Yes,' he responded. 'What do you want of me?'

"'Ah, if you have any heart,' he continued, lowering his voice, 'find yourself to-morrow at precisely 10 o'clock, Rue Albemarle, No. 6.'

"The next day he was prompt at the rendezvous. She threw herself on his neck and related the story of her adventures, her tribulations at the hands of Lord C., and how she had always preserved her purity for him (M. De Quincey.) He formed the project to rescue her. But at that very moment a loud voice was heard on the other side of the door: 'Ann! Open, it is I. Open instantly!'

"Lord C. enters.

"Then begins a scene!

"At length the Marquis goes to a little closet and draws out a couple of swords and some pistols. Each takes a sword. They begin to fight. The Marquis is run through under the arm—he falls— . . ."

And the story goes on to say how De Quincey, enveloping the amorous, yet ever faithful Ann in his arms, bears her from the room and down the stairs where a "post coach and four" soon carry them beyond pursuit. De Quincey, however, as the French author paints him, is humane. "The coach stops once while 'the good author sends a surgeon to the wounded Marquis.'"

Anatole France on Socialistic Patriotism.

THE latest and most distinguished recruit to the ranks of French Socialism is M. Anatole France, who had written many books which appealed to a limited circle ere, ten years ago, he began to contribute a two-column "causerie" to the Saturday number of Le Temps. From that time he has been recognized as one of the most famous and brilliant lights of French culture and criticism. Incidentally, he is much interested in what he calls "the feverish age of transition in America." He has long desired to visit this country, and next year, he recently wrote to a friend, he believes that his affairs may be in such a condition that he will be able to make the long wished for voyage.

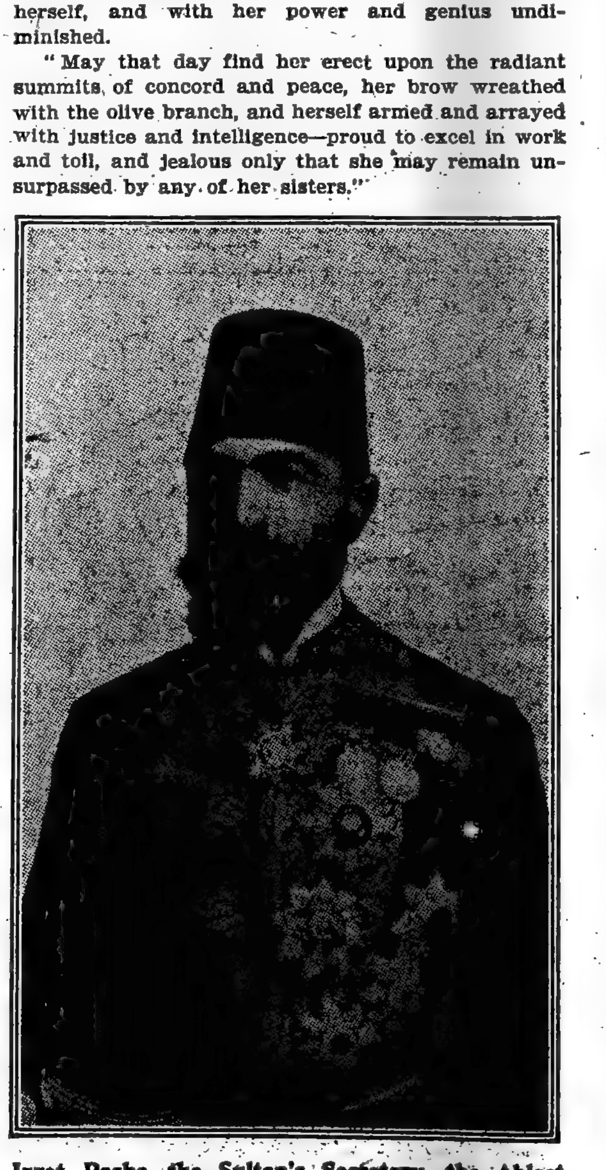
The other day in Paris he presided at a fête in honor of the Portuguese savant and poet, Theophilo Braga, and delivered an eloquent address, in which he pleaded for the maintenance of the Socialistic principle and the idea of patriotism. He said:

"Let us preserve, respect, and maintain 'les patries,' these national organizations which in the present condition of humanity are for us the necessary forms of social life. Let us reflect that the disintegration of the free peoples, the downfall of the intellectual nations, far from precluding the union of the races thus released, would soon lead to a régime of barbarous autocracy over Latin Europe. The various nations must take their places in the universal federation as living and not as dead entities.

"It is through the qualities of the nations which have been faithful to their genius, respecters of others, respecters of themselves, that the dream of the old prophet of Israel will one day be fulfilled, when he spoke of the time when the swords shall be beaten into plowshares, 'when the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and all nations shall flow unto it; and many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountains of the Lord. * * * and He will teach us of His ways and we will walk in His paths.'

"When that day comes may we find France still in the full possession of her name, still mindful of herself, and with her power and genius undiminished.

"May that day find her erect upon the radiant summits of concord and peace, her brow wreathed with the olive branch, and herself armed and arrayed with justice and intelligence—proud to excel in work and toil, and jealous only that she may remain unsurpassed by any of her sisters."



Izzet Pasha, the Sultan's Secretary, the Ablest Man in Turkey.

The Passing of a Great French Newspaper.

ALTHOUGH a weekly publication, L'Européen may truthfully be described as a great French newspaper, for it was about the only paper in France which attempted to keep its readers informed concerning the important news of the world. As everbody knows who reads the average French newspaper, the journals of France, strong in their literary and critical features, and also in those which pertain to internal politics—or to international politics where France is a party concerned—are deplorably weak in keeping their readers informed as to how history is being made outside of the republic. A brief note received from M. Pressensé, political editor in chief, announces that L'Européen has gone out of existence. It is implied that the affair was not a paying project.

L'Européen was established just six years ago with an editorial and corresponding staff which included some of the greatest names among European publicists—Georg Brandes, Bjoernstjerne Bjoernson, Charles Seignobos, Emile Vandervelde, and several others whose official positions in Berlin, St. Petersburg, and London did not permit their names to be revealed. Although advertised as "an international weekly concerning politics, international law, social, literary, and art topics," it had well-defined objects in view from which it has never deviated. In the darkest period of the Boer war, with the exception of the daily Le Siècle, then operated by M. Yves Guyot, it alone of French journals pleaded for a better understanding of the British cause. It was first to lay bare to the French public the true working of the Russian Institution, while from its columns other Continental papers have often drawn their news regarding the internal affairs of Russia—Jewish massacres, mutinies, and revolutionary outbreaks. Moreover, it attempted to establish a more wholesome and sympathetic attitude toward Germany. Not only Continental politics, but also the chief issues at stake in American politics have been accurately and intelligently laid before the readers of L'Européen.

But by far the most emphatic tone it maintained was against the Government of Russia—before, during, and since the Russo-Japanese war. It tried to show the French people that, by investing in Russian bonds, they were simply giving the Institution the means of continuing the oppression of the Russian people. One of the most recent and formidable articles contributed on this subject was by Bjoernson, the Norwegian novelist and publicist. He showed the disparity between Russian revenues and expenditures, the rapid augmentation of the public debt of $3,450,000,000, and emphasized the fact that over a quarter of it was placed abroad. The Russian Institution, he declared, having exhausted the last penny from its people, could not continue to maintain itself except through foreign aid; and he added, with prophetic emphasis:

"With the aid of the foreigner's gold, all the inflammable material of this formidable accumulation of injustice and distress has been able to subsist until it has become a danger to us all. Unless a war precipitates her upon her neighbors—a war which would be followed through long years by thunderings and tumults—she will continue to court them as of yore. On this point Russian and foreigner agree. But war will come. If up to the present time the all-powerful Russian Institution has not recoiled before any of the means taken to prolong its existence, why should it recoil before war? And whatever the results of this war, one thing is certain—payment of interest on the Russian debt will cease. Russia will thank with bankruptcy the aid given her.

"One does not have to be a prophet, I think, to predict that it will then be, before all and above all, the Jews who will be called to account. The furious are rarely just, and the Russian dupes will forget the banks, but not the Jews; in the fury of revenge, not only the guilty, but the most innocent will feel the blows. 'Thou art punished because thou hast betrayed the solidarity of thy people; they, too, must be made to suffer.' But the rest of us, we shall all cry to the excited dupes: 'See how thou art served thyself, because thou hast betrayed the solidarity which also should exist among nations. Thou shouldst have been the last to aid Russian tyranny."

The trust magnate believes in taking the world as he finds it, but the trouble is he doesn't want to leave any of it for the rest of us.

Is Europe's Sick Man Recovering His Health.

THE Ottoman Empire, as represented by the Porte, has long given the illusion to the world of being on the point of dissolution, postponed merely by the mutual jealousies of the great powers, not one of which cared to be the first to place it in the position of being the prey of the strongest force. The legal and financial disagreements that Turkey has had with foreign chancelleries have always apparently been settled to the disadvantage of the empire after a tactful but nevertheless suggestive naval demonstration. These numerous coercions, each time elaborated with stories of mutinies among the Sultan's ill-paid troops, have made it appear that there was absolutely no hope for Europe's notorious Sick Man—no remote possibility even of a convalescence.

Archibald J. Dunn has written a pamphlet to show that the conclusions drawn from the aforesaid Turk's reluctance to reform and pay what he owes, and from the foreign naval demonstrations are misleading. He would prove that the "Turk's manner," while not the manner of the world at large, should not be judged as if this "manner" were assumed by another nation. All these things, he says, form a veil behind which Turkey conceals her real progress and advancement from the eyes of the civilized world.

We are invited to believe that the Sultan is "an enlightened sovereign" who has granted "more freedom to his Christian subjects than Elizabeth ever granted to the Nonconformists or Catholics in her reign." He declares that the riches of Turkey are far greater than those of any other Mediterranean country—a revelation which Germany alone among foreigners has perceived—and are only waiting development. He enthusiastically advocates a treaty of industry formed among Turkey, France, and Great Britain, through which the latter countries might obtain easy access to the heart of Asia through the Levant, which Turkey would cheerfully throw open to friends who had proved themselves such.

As to the political integrity of the country, Mr. Dunn tells something about the statesmen who to-day are making a modern Turkey. First on the list comes Izzet Pasha, Secretary to the Sultan, who was first to advocate the railway from the coast to Mecca, and who, in spite of all difficulties, has by means of voluntary contributions from the people so far constructed 500 miles of the line. Izzet Pasha has recently been made President of a financial commission which, by means of tapping new sources of revenue, purposes to improve the financial condition of the empire.

A prominent member of this commission is Zia Bey, the new Minister of Finance, who, from a clerk in the department, has risen to be its chief. He is declared to be "a splendid scholar and a man of unblemished integrity." The late Finance Minister, Reschad Pasha, although obliged to resign his portfolio on account of ill-health, is also a member of the commission. Even foreigners know something of the statesmanship of this man, while visitors to Constantinople remember him as a genial, cultivated gentleman, an art connoisseur, and the possessor of a collection of old clocks and watches which is probably one of the finest in the world.

Nourri Bey, who presides over the foreign affairs of the empire, recently came into notoriety through the flight of his two daughters to Paris, where they wish to undertake an art career. At the time of the flight stories of the father's cruelty were published. But Mr. Dunn announces that the truth of the matter is that the young ladies had been educated by French governesses, had mixed a great deal in foreign society, and did not relish being secluded in the harem of a Turkish husband. Nourri Bey, whatever may be said of him by the yellow press of Paris, was instrumental last December in bringing about an agreement with the foreign Ambassadors, which, while assuring foreign financial interests better protection in Turkey for the future, also prevents foreigners from looking upon the ports of the empire as fields for questionable financial enterprises which will receive support from the governments to which the promoters belong.

In spite of stories of desertion, mutiny, and general disaffection among the Sultan's troops, Mr. Dunn declares that the Turkish army to-day never presented a finer career for officers of ability and knowledge. Promotion is rapid where a man has proved his capacity—especially if that capacity be confirmed by palace influence—thus Lieut. Gen. Chukri Pasha, with his brother, Sureya, has been promoted to high rank. They are the sons of the Minister of War, Field Marshal Riza Pasha, and are aged respectively 29 and 27. Riza Pasha is said to have the most complete data—books, pamphlets, and documents—on the Boer and Russo-Japanese wars of any military man in Europe.

How Alsace-Lorraine is Held by Germany.

HERR STEPHANY, the member of the German Imperial Police who was intrusted with the arrangement of the Kaiser's secret visit to the Paris Exposition in 1900, has written a book which is causing a great sensation and even a greater uneasiness in the Fatherland. It is entitled "The Germanization of Alsace-Lorraine and German Police Methods."

The ex-police official begins by stating that, in spite of every means of coercion, 90 per cent. of the natives of Alsace-Lorraine are at heart French still. Although the Berlin authorities may not be aware of this fact, the police of the two provinces are perfectly cognizant of it, and the result is a system of spying, perhaps, without a parallel in Europe.

Every man, woman, and child who crosses the frontier into France, whether bent on profit or pleasure, is in future a marked person; his (or her) name is put down in the black list as a suspect, and thenceforth every action of the person is watched and noted. Peasants, deputies, and wealthy business men appear on the list, and the author gives many well-known names.

"In the event of a general mobilization," he writes, "these 'suspects' would be promptly arrested, and either imprisoned or expelled from German territory."

The civil and the secret police on the Franco-German frontier are chosen from the brightest men in the service, and speak Parisian French or patois as required. They have examined the French fortresses closely, and know not only the strong and weak points of the French defense, but the number of guns, automobiles, and pigeons in them.

An American Actor in an Ambitious Project

* * * * * *

Richard Mansfield's Production of Schiller's "Don Carlos"—History and Story of the Play.

IN a dramatic season which has been characterized by a slow but gradual return to interests of a more substantial and ambitious character than have enlisted public sympathy and support for several years past, there has been no more interesting announcement than that involving Richard Mansfield's intention to present on the American stage the "Don Carlos" of Schiller.

So interesting was the announcement in itself that there does not appear to have been any necessity for a misstatement of facts. This is not, as has generally been stated, the first production of the play in English, though in effect it might justly be considered as amounting to that, since the only available record shows that it had but one performance when, on May 6, 1799, it was put on in New York with Cooper acting the part of the Prince.

The subject of Don Carlos was previously introduced to the English stage, however, as early as 1676 in Otway's tragedy, "Don Carlos, Prince of Spain."

Mr. Mansfield's version of the play, which had its first production at the Valentine Opera House, Toledo, Ohio, on Oct. 21, 1905, is, of necessity, a much abridged arrangement. In its original form "Don Carlos" occupies some 200 quarto pages and would require in the acting from seven to eight hours of time. But objections to the actor's method of dealing with the work are fairly met in the statement that Schiller himself, when the play was first produced in Hamburg, in 1781, agreed to the excision of such matter as seemed to impede the action. As a matter of fact, even in Germany the play is seldom acted in full, though at occasional festivals it is played in two parts, occupying in presentation an afternoon and evening.

This play was begun by Schiller when he was a dreamy youth of 24. Having thrown off the degrading patronage of the Duke of Würtemberg, he was in hiding under the assumed name of Dr. Ritter at Bauerbach from December, 1782, until July, 1783. During the Winter months he began his preliminary studies of Spanish Court life for his tragedy of "Don Carlos."

He worked intermittently on the play for four years, and it is an interesting fact that as time progressed the original design was largely altered, as a manifest result of the poet's own change in character. In the first three acts of the play the Marquis of Posa is a minor personage. But when, after an interval of several months, Schiller resumed work on the second part of the tragedy, the Marquis loomed large on his mental horizon. Of the change in his plan Schiller himself wrote:

"In composing the piece many interruptions occurred; so that a considerable time elapsed between beginning and concluding it, and in the meanwhile much within myself had changed. The various alterations which, during this period, my way of thinking and feeling underwent, naturally told upon the work I was engaged with. What parts of it had at first attracted me began to produce this effect in a weaker degree, and in the end scarcely at all. New ideas, springing up in the interim, displaced the former ones; Carlos himself had lost my favor, perhaps for no other reason than because I had become his senior, and, from the opposite cause, Posa had occupied his place. Thus I commenced the fourth and fifth acts with quite an altered heart. But the first three years were already in the hands of the public; the plan of the whole could not now be reformed; nothing therefore remained but to suppress the play entirely or to fit the second half of it to the first the best way I could."

As Mansfield produces it, Don Carlos is of course made the dominant figure throughout, more than one observer having already called attention to the fact that the part of Posa is cut to the bone. In the Mansfield version the play is unfolded in five acts and eight scenes. The first act shows the Queen's garden at Aranjuez; the first scene of the second act, the Presence Chamber in the Royal Palace of the Escurial at Madrid, and the second scene, the Princess Eboli's apartments; Act III. shows a hall in the royal palace outside the King's bed chamber; the second scene a gallery in the palace; the fourth act discloses a royal chamber on the courtyard of the palace; Act V. begins in a corridor within the Escurial, and the second scene is in the garden outside the Queen's apartment.

The play opens at Aranjuez, the Summer residence of King Philip. Don Carlos, sad of mien, is conversing with his father's confessor, who fails to worm from him a statement of the cause of his sorrow. As the priest leaves, the Marquis of Posa, a boyhood friend of Carlos, who has been long absent abroad, enters and is welcomed in a scene of passionate joy. They pledge anew a brotherly friendship, and it is then disclosed that love for the Queen is consuming the young Prince. He had been betrothed to her before her marriage to the King, but since then had been unable to see her alone. Posa promises to bring about the meeting.

Posa gains the consent of the Queen to see Carlos. The Prince comes and offers impassioned protestations of love. Elizabeth shows him the folly of his passion, but assures him of her friendship. On the departure of Carlos and Posa the King suddenly appears and, furious at finding the Queen alone, pronounces banishment on the mistress of ceremonies, who left her unguarded, and upbraids Elizabeth herself. The Queen defends herself with dignity. Later the King is besought by Carlos to give him the command of the troops who are to go to Flanders, the young man being ambitious to be the savior of the Netherlands. The King fears a conspiracy and dismisses the Prince in disgrace, giving the coveted position to Alva.

Carlos receives a note, which he supposes to be from the Queen, inviting him to her presence, and on his way meets Alva, who has come to triumph over him, though ostensibly to say farewell. The scene is one of such bitterness of speech that swords are drawn, and Carlos and Alva are fighting, when the Queen rushes from her apartments and, calling the Prince's name, causes him to drop his sword, seize Alva's hand and beg for forgiveness, and then, sinking for a moment on his knee before the Queen, to rush wildly away. The note which made the trouble was really written by the Princess Eboli, on whom the King has been casting eyes, but who is herself in love with Carlos. The Prince comes upon her, expecting to find the Queen. She tells him the state of affairs, without disclosing the object of her affections, which he does not suspect. Carlos promises to protect her and, in return for her confidence, attempts to tell her his own secret, but as soon as she learns that she is not the loved one she dismisses him in anger, and suddenly realizing that it was the Queen whom Carlos had expected to meet, she suspects the fidelity of Elizabeth, and, determined to seek vengeance, starts to find the King. During their interview she had given Carlos a letter from a man who was pursuing her. The Prince finds this to be from the King himself. He proposes to show it to the Queen, but is dissuaded by Posa, who reminds him of the suffering of the Netherlanders and begs him to think of them. The King is informed of the Queen's faithlessness, but doubts the truth of the accusation, though his confidence is somewhat shaken. He feels the need of a friend whom he can trust, and, looking over the list of his grandees, hits upon Posa, whom he gives full authority to spy upon the Queen and the Prince.

Posa, without disclosing his new rôle to the Queen, urges her to persuade Carlos to flee from Spain and place himself at the head of the Spanish troops in the Low Countries. The Queen enters into the plan, but Carlos becomes suspicious of Posa. Posa convinces him of his loyalty, and induces him to give him the pocketbook in which he carries his private letters. The Queen learns of the stealing of letters from her private desk, and goes to the King to demand justice. She finds that he has been a party to the theft. He accuses her of inconstancy, and she replies with a defiant threat of vengeance from across the Pyrenees. Among the letters which Posa delivers to the King from Carlos is the one from the Princess Eboli, which fact convinces the King that he has been deceived by the Princess and Alva. Posa says Carlos is about to flee from Madrid, and secures from the King a warrant for his arrest.

Carlos, not understanding the strategy, and fearing that the King and Queen have quarreled, begs Eboli to secure him an audience with the Queen. Posa, fearing that Carlos has confessed his love for Elizabeth and is, therefore, in real danger, has him led off to prison and decides to sacrifice himself in order to save Carlos and the Queen. He writes a letter, which he intends shall be intercepted by the King, declaring his own love for the Queen, who, however, he declares to be faithful to the King. This letter falls into the King's hands, and Posa is shot while he is bidding Carlos farewell. Philip frees Carlos, but still suspects him, and hearing that he is about to escape to Brussels, he surprises him in the apartment of Elizabeth, and he is led away to torture and death at the hands of the grand inquisitor.

THIS WEEK'S OFFERINGS

RICHARD MANSFIELD IN "DON CARLOS,"
a drama by Johann Christoph Friedrich von Schiller, at the New Amsterdam Theatre, to-morrow evening.

HOWARD KYLE IN "THE GREATER LOVE," a play by Ivy Ashton Root, at the Madison Square Theatre, to-morrow evening.

"HIS MAJESTY,"
a musical play by Shafter Howard, at the Majestic Theatre, to-morrow evening.

A REVIVAL OF "CHARLEY'S AUNT,"
at the Manhattan Theatre, to-morrow evening.

This is the order of plays for Mr. Mansfield's three weeks' season at the New Amsterdam: To-morrow night, Schiller's "Don Carlos," (first time;) Tuesday, March 20, "Beau Brummel"; Wednesday, March 21, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"; Thursday, March 22, "Don Carlos"; Friday, March 23, "The Merchant of Venice"; Saturday matinée, March 24, "Don Carlos"; Saturday night, "A Parisian Romance." Second week—Monday, March 26, "The Scarlet Letter"; Tuesday, March 27, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"; Wednesday, March 28, "Don Carlos"; Thursday, March 29, "Beau Brummel"; Friday, March 30, "King Richard III.," (only time;) Saturday matinée, March 31, "The Scarlet Letter"; Saturday night, "Don Carlos." Third week—Monday, April 2, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde"; Tuesday, April 3, "The Misanthrope," (only time;) Wednesday, April 4, "A Parisian Romance"; Thursday, April 5, "Ivan the Terrible," (only time;) Friday, April 6, "Don Carlos"; Saturday matinée, April 7, "Beau Brummel"; Saturday night, as Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice."

Mr. Mansfield will not act this season in either Brooklyn or Harlem. After his three weeks at the New Amsterdam he will rest a week and then begin a brief supplementary season of four weeks, of which Cincinnati has one, St. Louis one, and Chicago two, after which he will not act again until next November.

"The Greater Love" is the title of Ivy Ashton Root's four-act play, which Walter N. Lawrence will produce to-morrow evening at the Madison Square Theatre, with Howard Kyle as Mozart. The scenes are laid in Vienna and Prague, and the scenery and costumes will be characteristic of the latter part of the eighteenth century in Germany. They will show the garden of the Weber sisters in Vienna, Mozart's study at the home of Signor Bondini, adjoining the theatre at Prague; a room in the house of the Weber sisters, and at Mozart's home in Vienna.

Some of the characters introduced prominently in the play are Aloysia Weber, in whose voice Mozart was greatly interested; Constance Weber, who afterward became his wife; their sister Sophie; Herr Schikander, Mozart's enemy, the manager for whom he wrote "The Magic Flute," and who robbed him of his royalties; Signor Bondini, who retrieved his fortunes by producing "Don Giovanni"; Franz Sussmeyer, Mozart's friend and pupil, and Albert Lange, the actor who became the husband of Aloysia Weber.

In certain scenes vocal and instrumental music from Mozart's compositions will be interpreted by selected voices and with the assistance of an augmented orchestra, and the final scene of the play will present Mozart exhausted from his labors, surrounded by his wife and friends, the latter gathered about the harpsichord and singing the requiem; in effect, a reproduction of Munkacsy's famous painting "The Last Moments of Mozart," now on exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

The cast in support of Mr. Kyle includes Beverly Sitgreaves, Helen Ware, Frederick Webber, Earl Rider, Fred House, and Frank Kendrick.

"His Majesty," a new musical play with words and music by Shafter Howard, will open an engagement at the Majestic Theatre to-morrow night. Blanche Ring will be featured in the cast, which will also include Anna Laughlin, May Naudain, Margaret Malcolm, Van Rensselaer Wheeler, and Harry Kelly.

The story of "His Majesty" in outline is this: His satanic majesty has as added guests in his home regions the entire membership of a comic opera company that has been condemned to spend an endless time with him. He is in love with the prima donna of the comic opera company; but she spurns his love despite its heat, and there is on foot what he thinks is a plot to cause him trouble in his own territory. One of the characters among his regular boarders is said to have discovered a scientific secret that will enable him to quench the fires of the regions and make them as cold as a steam-heated flat in December. During a dinner given by his majesty to the prima donna, there is a terrific explosion and the entire party is blown up through the crust of the earth, landing badly jarred but much cooler on an island in the South Sea.

The change of locale shows his majesty in the disguise of a millionaire yachtsman visiting the island with his yacht and again making love to the prima donna. She accepts him and all ends happily.

At the Manhattan Theatre to-morrow evening, a revival of "Charley's Aunt" will be made. The farce is one of the funniest of its kind, and when originally produced in London had a run of over 1,000 performances. It was also a great success in this country when seen in 1893.

In the present revival Etienne Girardot will be seen in his original part of Lord Babberly. Other members of the company are Nina Herbert, Alma Mara, Helena Byrne, Frank Hollins, Sol. Aiken, Robert Peyton Carter, and William Elliott.

AT OTHER THEATRES.

"Across the Pacific" is the booking at the New Star.

At the American "Behind the Mask" will be presented.

Edward Harrigan, in "Old Lavender," comes to the Murray Hill.

"Bedford's Hope" will be the attraction at the Metropolis this week.

At the Third Avenue "Human Hearts" will be the offering.

"The Clansman" returns to the city at the Harlem Opera House to-morrow evening.

The attraction this week for the West End will be "York State Folks."

William J. Kelly and his stock company will appear in "Romeo and Juliet" at the Yorkville.

At Proctor's 125th Street Theatre the stock company will revive "Rupert of Hentzau."

The offering this week at the Fifth Avenue Theatre will be a revival of "Mlle. Marin." Amelia Bingham will appear in her original rôle.

PLAYS THAT HOLD.

The plays that remain indefinitely are Maude Adams in "Peter Pan" at the Empire, Blanche Bates in "The Girl of the Golden West" at the Belasco, David Warfield in "The Music Master" at the Bijou, William Faversham in "The Squaw Man" at Wallack's, Lawrence D'Orsay in "The Embassy Ball" at Daly's, Francis Wilson in "The Mountain Climber" at the Criterion, Otis Skinner in "The Duel" at the Hudson, Raymond Hitchcock in "The Galloper" at the Garden, Henry Woodruff in "Brown of Harvard" at the Princess, "Mr. Hopkinson" at the Savoy, "The Lion and the Mouse" at the Lyceum, "Gallops" at the Garrick.

This is the last week of "The Redskin" at the Liberty and of "The Heart of Maryland" at the Academy of Music. The engagement of Louis Mann and Clara Lipman in "Julie Bon Bon" at the Fields is nearing its termination.

MUSICAL ATTRACTIONS.

Fritzi Scheff in "Mlle. Modiste" at the Knickerbocker, Elsie Janis in "The Vanderbilt Cup" at the Broadway, George M. Cohan in "George Washington, Jr.," at the Herald Square, "Twiddle-Twaddle" and "The Squaw Man's Girl of the Golden West" at the Weber Music Hall, and "Mexicana" at the Lyric are the permanent musical attractions. This is the second week of "Happyland" at the Casino and of "Humpty Dumpty" at the New York.

The bill of last week's attractions will be given at the Alhambra, Colonial, Eden Musée, Hurtig & Seamon's, Proctor's Twenty-third Street and Fifty-eighth Street Theatres, and the Victoria.

Where One and One Make One

Lawrance D'Orsay's Stage Englishman as He Looks to His Other Self.

LAWRANCE D'ORSAY across the footlights and Lawrance D'Orsay over a cup of coffee and a cigar are startlingly alike.

Yet the one talks about the doings of the other in a tone as pleasantly and unconsciously impersonal as if the two were not so obviously one.

Stage make-up of any sort is the last thing one thinks of in watching Mr. D'Orsay, and when, after the matinée, the actor strolls over to a near-by hotel for a bit of dinner before the evening performance, his guest has a curious feeling of being entertained by the Earl of Pawtucket and Capt. Hawarden-Kellie, who have walked off the stage with no greater change than the laying aside of monocle and scarlet coat. Carriage, manner, and speech, lacking the emphasis and exaggeration needed to project any personality successfully over the footlights, are exactly the same. As Mr. D'Orsay enters a café with his rather pronounced air of knowing exactly what he is about, chooses his quiet table by the window, and lays aside his coat and stick, he is as sure of being marked by the rest of the diners as the Earl or the Captain in full uniform—perhaps because military erectness, defined manners, and deliberate speech are still notable even in Broadway restaurants.

"I'll just keep the stick by me, old chap," says the actor, as the waiter is bearing everything away to the coatroom. "You see," with an explanatory smile to his guest, "I have a foolish notion that I could never pass a stage door again if anything happened to that stick. I've carried it more than twelve years on the street, and in all my parts. It was given me by George Edwardes while I was doing one of the old D'Orsay rôles in 'The Artist's Model,' and I have never had a part since in which I couldn't manage to carry it."

The stick itself is merely a hard bamboo with curved handle bound with irregular bands of silver, unlike a hundred others only in being unusually long, and giving, according to its owner, "the best kind of a grip and support for a real walk." He carries it every night in the first and second acts of "The Embassy Ball."

"That, my eyeglass, and my mustache are my indispensables," laughs Mr. D'Orsay, while the menu is being sought. "I have had the eyeglass almost as long as the stick, and I have fallen into a silly habit of wrapping the thing up and treasuring it about with me as if it were a talisman. The associations of little things I have used in all sorts of times and places grow very strong with me. The little red memorandum book in which the Captain writes Senator Bender's name is the same one in which the Earl of Pawtucket used to record his American idioms, and folded away in this book I keep always the original telegram, 'Sara's better.' Sentimental, you see," he added, as he set about ordering his dinner.

Mr. D'Orsay has, to a marked degree the habit of knowing exactly what he wants and of stating his needs with a careful precision and fullness that leave the average waiter agape with astonishment. The poor fellow in his zeal to carry out all and more than his instructions, usually manages to cut the baked potato or stumble into some other faux pas, whereat the host's rebuke is brief, well-considered, leaving nothing to be said.

"Yes," agreed Mr. D'Orsay, "the mustache is much easier to keep track of, and I fancy I have had it even longer than the other two accessories. You see," he goes on quite simply, "for the kind of part I have always played, it has proved one of the best possible features.

"I began in London doing Dundreary types, and later heavy dragoon 'silly-ass' characters, until presently managers began to speak of certain kinds of rôles as D'Orsay parts. As a matter of fact, I never sang, but George Edwardes had special parts written into 'The Gaiety Girl' and 'The Artist's Model' for me, and these were, of course, what had come to be recognized as the characteristic D'Orsay kind of thing.

"It seemed to be felt that I had a particular knack for getting values out of monosyllables—the sort of expressive 'Oh!' for example, that Mr. Thomas has given me in both his plays. I rather liked these quiet acting rôles, and I remember saying once to a manager who was regretting that he had no very good part for me: 'Then, my dear fellow, give me a neat monosyllabic rôle, let me stand in a corner, and see what I can make of it.'

"Every now and then it bothers me not a little to have some one point out the effectiveness of certain of my methods and mannerisms, such as poises of the head or lifts of the eyebrow. You see the moment you get to have a well-defined knowledge of a personal peculiarity that happens to be useful it becomes a source of danger. Having learned these things are valuable, if you remember them too complacently you find yourself sooner or later overworking them, and before long your public finds them a bore.

"Although the strain of a first night often betrays me to over-emphasis, I try in general to be on the stage as closely as possible my real self—plus, of course, the inevitable exaggeration that any stage part demands. I believe thoroughly that one must be unconscious of one's own personality, whatever one's consciousness of one's art. You can easily be too naïve; but I should rather err on that side than on the side of over-acting. Nevertheless, the real-tears-every-night claims of certain actresses and actors always strike me as buncombe. No man playing Othello night after night could conjure up the real feelings every night he played the part; but to me the unconsciousness of my personal peculiarities is just as necessary as general artistic consciousness of what I am doing.

"I really can't imagine myself playing any rôle save this type of Englishman that seems to be as natural to me as my own skin. Yet there are elements in the type that are even dearer to me than the comedy surface. I remember saying to Mr. Pinero once, as he congratulated me on one of those old D'Orsay parts, 'I hope some day some one will write me a piece in which the fundamental manliness of the English guardsman may show pleasantly through the absurd stupidities of his exterior.'

"It was not many seasons later when I came to this country to play the King in 'The Royal Family,' and later another of the heavy dragoon parts in Esmond's 'The Wilderness.' It was during the latter engagement that I met Augustus Thomas at the Lambs one night. And the first thing he said to me was, 'I went first to see "The Wilderness," and then four times to see you. The next day I said to my wife and friends, "I will write a play for that man, because he has individuality." What do you say?'

"I was delighted, and as I explained from the stage the other night, I begged only not to be made the old silly-ass sort of fellow. 'Not a bit of it,' said Thomas. 'I know exactly what you want, and you shall have character and soul in due measure.'

"The result was these two parts, in which, while I have thoroughly enjoyed their fun, I have sought to suggest the underlying healthy strength and reliability of the best type of Englishman. The Captain, for example, is to me the kind of fellow who, while he is full of delicious stupidities and absurdities in the smaller relations of life, proves himself, in big crises of war or danger, the man who quietly does the right thing at the right moment, to whom people instinctively turn for help or advice.

"And then, when it's all over, he becomes his absent-minded self again, forgetting names, looking blank at the plainest jokes, and taking himself nervously out of the way the moment any one begins to talk about his deeds.

"I remember a lad at home. At 25, when he entered the army, he was a young giant 6 feet 4 inches in his sandals, hard as a dozen years of fast riding and polo could make him, but with a cheek like a girl's, and the manners of a bread-and-butter miss at 18. He used to spend two hours and ten minutes in dressing every morning, and his hands would have done credit to an actress. When he crossed the room it was like the march of a regiment. His conversation was infrequent but elaborate, and his drawl was the delight of three counties. He liked to be among his friends, and his friends were immensely fond of him. But he invariably overdid the simplest monosyllable. Even his own people used to smile at him a little, and in America you would have put him into the comic papers. He died on a bare hillside in the blazing sun during an Indian campaign, while searching for a party of men his commander had sent out at his advice—successfully, as it proved afterward.

"To me, he is rather a big sort—this type of chap. I should be glad to think Capt. Hawarden Kellie approached him. One of his qualities which the Captain has, is his absolute honesty. When anybody questions his word, even innocently, he hasn't a thought of reply. He simply stares. His quiet 'But my dear fellow I said it was thus and so' is the simple, final criterion of truth. It takes quicker wits than his to manage the easiest falsehood.

"The Captain has changed a trifle with the second version of 'The Embassy Ball.' As Mr. Thomas first wrote the play the Englishman had moments of something approaching melodrama, when he defied people in all directions. Then he was only engaged to one girl instead of, as now, to the whole shoot. We found the politics and the Panama interest rather too heavy for the piece. After it was taken off and Mr. Thomas had cut out the politics and made the bicycle incident the main element of the plot, the Captain quieted down into a straight comedy figure of the drawing room.

"I don't mind how much fun the audience get out of him. I shall always be glad to help make the fellow as funny as ever he can be; but I hope no one will ever miss the big inner core of sound, sweet virility of which all his ridiculousness is merely a kind of delightful bloom; in short, I hope audiences may always be conscious of laughing with him rather than at him. The laugh of sympathy is better than the laugh of bald amusement. A comedian can always get the latter by falling down or catching flies on a curtain; but it takes a different kind of fun to be sure of the former.

"With all his stiffness the Captain has a good bit of sentiment of his own sort. To me one of the most delightful lines in the piece is the passage in the last act when the Captain compares the finding of his sweetheart to the coming upon a "well of sweet water" after a long, weary march in India. That well of sweet water is a soldier's simile drawn from a soldier's experience; but it tells a deal of the Captain's slow-minded but sterling sweetness of mind. To me it is manly and beautiful, and I think very nearly the sort of thing one might speak even every night from one's soul.

"I shall probably never do anything but this kind of Englishman," said Mr. D'Orsay, as he walked back to the theatre. "It suits me perfectly. In fact, I suppose it is me. I haven't the faintest ambition, you know, to play Hamlet. I have too much respect for the part. In my hands I am sure it would get more laughs than the author intended.

"But if in this Englishman of ours, Mr. Thomas and I have managed to suggest ever so little that a man may be funnily fastidious and ponderous in thought and manner and still be a pleasantly sound and steady sort of chap, we shall perhaps have done a little more than merely to add to the gayety of nations. For people who run riot in manners and who are apt to distrust most masculine refinement as deplorable effeminacy, this stage type may bring a new point of view. By emphasizing his foppishness we make him palatable for stage purposes; but I should like to feel sure that a little of his sane, gentle manliness goes down, too."

CIRCUS RING HEROINES.

A Matter-of-Fact View of an Alleged Juggle With Death.

THE automobile is supreme—even at the circus. A few years ago coasting a bicycle down an inclined plane with a couple of somersaults in the air at the end, or snubbing the law of gravity by riding horizontally around the inner surface of a revolving drum, were the acme of "thrillers." This year "The Greatest Show on Earth," when it comes to Madison Square Garden next Thursday, will bring two intrepid young women who do these aerial somersaults and double twists in full-sized motor cars.

The Dip of Death, which was seen last year, is performed this season by a young American girl of no particular acrobatic experience, Isabelle Butler, who takes the place of Mlle. Mauricia de Tiers, the former heroine of the act. The performance consists of looping the loop in an automobile through a space of fifty feet in midair, the machine being mostly upside-down during the transit.

Miss Butler is a rather noticeably uncircuslike girl, who has been living in New York, although her parents' home is in Holyoke. She has been known for several years as a professional skater, seen now and then at the St. Nicholas Rink. Her present occupation came quite by chance as a result of her volunteering to take Mlle. de Tiers's place during the latter's illness toward the close of last season.

The very latest act, however, Le Tourbillon de la Mort, which consists of turning a somersault in midair in an 1,800-pound auto car, is performed by a French girl, Mlle. Octavie La Tour, who, unlike Miss Butler, has spent her life in European hippodromes and circus halls. She is 20 years old and is said to weigh only 82 pounds. Her attitude toward her nightly juggle with death is as matter of fact as it could well be.

"The sensation is not so bad as you might think," she is credited with saying. "The ride down the 90-foot runway is rather exhilarating, and even when the machine strikes the spring at the end of the incline before it leaps into the air I feel no particular shock. My critical moment is when the automobile seems to stop in midair and then, quick as lightning, turns a complete forward somersault. The sensation at that moment is decidedly queer. And I always have an almost uncontrollable impulse to shriek. The whole thing is over so quickly, however, that I hardly realize that the machine has actually turned completely over with me, and when it lands on the cushioned runway at the opposite end of the arena my only unpleasant sensation is a slight headache caused by the rush of blood to my head and a tingling sensation in the muscles of my neck. Naturally I do not suffer from the latter as much as I should if I were not an acrobat."

DOMESTICITY AND THE STAGE.

How One Woman is Seeking to Combine the Two.

MRS. IVY ASHTON ROOT, author of "The Greater Love," the four-act play founded on the life of Mozart, which opens at the Madison Square Theatre this week, modestly announces her piece as "the first work of a quiet home woman who has all her life loved the theatre."

Mrs. Root lives in New York with her husband, who is a nephew of the Secretary of State.

"We believe, my husband and I," says Mrs. Root, "that the most domestic of women may rightly follow her ambitions in public directions if she has time and strength. Thanks to a lifelong love for the stage and to much interest and encouragement from Mr. Mansfield and Herr Conried, I have written and seen produced this Mozart play without losing any of my illusions—which all too often never survive rehearsals.

"The idea of the piece came to me five or six years ago in reading a life of Mozart. Without holding too closely to the recorded facts, I have tried to show the human side of the composer, and have thus made the main motive of my play the struggle between the musician's devotion to his art as he writes the mysterious final Requiem, and his passion for the Roman opera singer, Mandini."

Although she has never been on the stage, Mrs. Root laughs at her early amateur efforts in San Francisco, when she used to play in theatricals with Blanche Bates. "'Withered Leaves' was our favorite, I remember.

"My love for the theatre is almost an instinct. I remember as a little girl I used to notice a curious odor in the San Francisco playhouse where I went oftenest, and little by little that odor came to be deliciously suggestive of the footlights, the scenery, the stage figures, and all the rest of it. I used to sniff eagerly for that smell the moment I entered the theatre. I later discovered it was nothing more subtle than escaping gas, but to this day a faint smell of gas will conjure up a delightful jumble of old scenery and old plays."

A JAUNTY NEW HAT

And Its Disturbing Effect on the Stage.

TO illustrate the curiously disturbing effect that unaccustomed objects unexpectedly introduced into a scene may have on the players, Grace Elliston, who plays Shirley Rossmore in "The Lion and the Mouse," was relating the other night a little experience she has had within the last week with a stage hat. The hat which Miss Elliston wears when she comes to call on the money magnate, after her father's reverses, was chosen with a view to having it look at once attractive and modest, as might befit a poor man's daughter. Last week she thought the hat deserved renewing. Accordingly she took it to a milliner's and directed them to take the feathers off and replace them on a new model of as nearly as possible the same shape as the old.

"The hat came back to my dressing room next evening," said Miss Elliston, "too late to think of attempting any change in it. But they had given me a jaunty shape which gave the whole thing a fast, expensive look, which was just what I had tried to avoid.

May Naudain.

"As I entered the door in the library scene, Mr. Breese, as he caught sight of me, fairly started in his chair, so that I almost laughed. When I came to the line about my beggared father, I felt that anybody might properly say, 'Well, dear me, why doesn't she sell something?' But what is more to the point, I learned afterward that the hat had made all the rest of the company uncomfortable. They couldn't keep their eyes away from it, and altogether it was a most uneasy evening. I restored the old one next day."

Francis Wilson tells a story of Joseph Jefferson in almost exactly the same vein. One night on the stage Mr. Wilson saw Mr. Jefferson rather pointedly pick up a paper knife which had fallen to the floor at the beginning of an act. "He did it so deliberately," said Mr. Wilson, "that I asked him afterward why. 'The simple fact is,' replied Mr. Jefferson, 'that I knew from experience my eye would irresistibly be drawn to an unusual object on the stage and the scene very likely spoiled. Our senses work automatically at such times, and one is no more to be blamed for not controlling them than for winking one's eye when something approaches too near.'"

Nat Goodwin, who has been playing in London, was to sail for home yesterday. He opens in Pittsburg April 2, after which he will go on a short tour to the Pacific Coast.

PLAYER PERSONALITIES

With Bits of Casual Gossip About Stage People.

WHEN Henry Woodruff was a freshman at Harvard he was made President of the Cambridge Dramatic Society. The membership of this little play-producing club of amateurs included many professors and teachers about Cambridge, and it was often embarrassing to Mr. Woodruff to have to play stage manager to his elders. The actor tells a story of how one afternoon at rehearsal, just after he had assumed his office and before he had met many of the society, Prof. Hopkinson of the Hopkinson Preparatory School came forward on the stage to read his lines. When he came to the word "raillery" he pronounced it "rale-ery."

"Isn't that pronounced 'rallery'?" suggested Mr. Woodruff with a good deal of boyish diffidence. Prof. Hopkinson glared at the young stage manager over his glasses during a moment of awkward silence.

"Sir," he pronounced finally, "I have taught school for forty years. I said 'rale-ery.'"

And "rale-ery" it continued to be.

"It always reminds me," says Mr. Woodruff, "of a rehearsal I once saw when Carrie Turner was going through a scene under the eye of John B. Stetson. When she reached the word 'exemplary,' Stetson sang out testily, 'Why, that's exem-plary.'

"'I think not,' replied Miss Turner, calmly.

"'Well, anyway, hereafter,' said Mr. Stetson, waxing wroth, 'please pronounce your words just as they are written in the manuscript.'

"I believe," added Mr. Woodruff, "that he afterward went to Italy to have a bust made of his daughter's hand."

May Naudain, who is to play Stella Bright in "His Majesty," has for several seasons past sung almost nothing but Victor Herbert's music. She played Peter Pumpkin and Bopeep in "Babes in Toyland," and was later the Ambassador in "It Happened in Nordland." During the run of the latter piece, it was Miss Naudain who saved a performance by playing Kate Peepvogel at a few minutes' notice, on the occasion of Marie Cahill's withdrawal. In the burlesque of "The Music Master" Miss Naudain had the part of the landlady, Mrs. Kruger. During the last two seasons she has been the soloist at Mr. Herbert's concerts at the Majestic Theatre.

Sir Lionel Lambart, whose engagement to Miss Randolph, the daughter of Mrs. William C. Whitney, was recently announced in London, has a first cousin in this city in Ernest Lambart, who plays the rôle of Algernon Fitshaggis in Joe Weber's "Twiddle-Twaddle" company. Ernest Lambart and Sir Lionel were brought up together on the Cavan estate, in County Meath, Ireland. The present Earl of Cavan has no children. Next in line for the title and estates is Sir Lionel Lambart, and next to him comes Ernest Lambart, who is now playing in an American music hall a character whose mission in life is to introduce the untitled rich of America to the titled paupers of Europe—for a consideration.

Frances Starr, who plays the dainty heroine in "Gallops," began her "schooling," as she calls it, with the Murray Hill Stock Company, and later spent successive seasons with Fred Belasco's company in San Francisco, the Castle Square Company in Boston, and Proctor's Fifth Avenue Company, in New York.

"I have lived the scheduled life," laments Miss Starr. "A career of 9 to 12:30, 2 to 5, 7 till 11 days, as regular as term-time in a seminary. But I don't regret an hour of it. After you've played about every ingénue rôle ever heard of, you come to have a pleasant feeling of confidence about handling the new ones you hope somebody may write for you.

"Then, too, it is something to realize exactly where you stand, even if it is only in the modest matter of size. A small woman may feel just as tragic as a big one, but she can't make an audience think so, and until she realizes the fact she is likely to be very unhappy. I know perfectly well that my dressing-room mirror will never reflect Lady Macbeths or Desdemonas; but I am none the less content. There are still plenty of capital emotional parts for an ingénue who happens to weigh less than 200 pounds. If stock company training teaches anything, it teaches you how to do what you are fitted to do without sighing because it isn't something else."

A miracle play in modern garb is to grow out of the one-act piece in the manner of "Everyman," which Edwin Milton Royle wrote for a Lambs' "Gambol" early this season. Under the title of "The Struggle Everlasting" Mr. Royle purposes to portray in four acts conflicting human traits and passions bearing their old names of Hate, Avarice, Friendship, and the like, but walking about in the frock coats and silk hats of modern life.

"I am trying," says Mr. Royle, who is now in the midst of the play, "to make these personifications subtle enough to satisfy the mystics and yet so simple and of the flesh that every one can understand them."

Mr. Royle expects to have the play ready early next season. It will be remembered that "The Squaw Man" also developed from a one-act playlet which the same author put together for the Lambs.

Close of Another Year of Opera.

Wagner Again Heads the List of Composers Represented--"Haensel und Gretel" Most Frequently Performed---Prospects for Next Season.

THE season of opera at the Metropolitan Opera House closed last evening after seventeen weeks of strenuous activity, with fewer leave-takings and final appearances and supplementary performances than usual at such a time. It has been a much discussed season; and although the public resorted in great crowds to the performances, it grumbled as it came. For the first time since the old German opera days, the management at the Opera House has felt impelled to publish its accounts—some of them—in order to combat the idea that had gained wide acceptance, that the three seasons of Mr. Conried's control had "cheapened" the opera. His report of his expenditures, compared with those of Mr. Grau's last season, was an elaborate defense of his business and artistic policy; an attempt to prove by figures the opposite of what the public had concluded from the evidence of its ears and eyes.

However this may be, the operatic list and the number of representations of the season are about at the average of seasons of recent years. The season of seventeen weeks that opened on Nov. 20 comprised sixty-eight subscription performances. There were seventeen popular Saturday night representations, eight in the two cycles of "Der Ring des Nibelungen" outside the subscription, four of "Parsifal," and seven other performances on holidays or for special benefits, including that of "Der Zigeunerbaron" for the manager. These make in all 104 operatic entertainments for which the Opera House opened its doors. In all thirty-one operas were given, and there were 109 representations. This is to be compared with thirty operas given in the sixteen weeks of last season, twenty-six in the fifteen weeks of Mr. Conried's first season, and thirty-two in the last year of Mr. Grau's incumbency, who also had seventeen weeks.

Although Mr. Conried has published the details of his expenses for the season, he has not announced the sum of his receipts. That they have been great is plain to any frequenter of the Opera House. The subscription in advance was very large—the impression was allowed to go forth that it was larger than ever before; there have been very few small audiences, many that have filled the house, seats, and standing room, sometimes to suffocation. The public has contributed an enormous amount—far beyond what any other opera house can rely upon for an equal length of time.

By the recent action of the Directors of the corporation owning the Opera House a new lease has been signed with Mr. Conried by which he is continued as director of the opera for five years. This indicates satisfaction with his management on the part of those to whom he is directly responsible.

Of the thirty-one operas that were given, fifteen were German, of which nine were Wagner's; and, as has been the case for many years now, Wagner heads the list of composers represented, and comes first in the number of performances that were given of his works, thirty-one. Verdi and Donizetti come next with four operas each, of which Verdi's had fourteen performances and Donizetti's thirteen. Six other Italian operas were given nineteen performances. Only two French operas were produced, "Faust" and "Carmen"; and these two were heard seven times. The work that led in the number of performances was "Hänsel und Gretel," whose record of eleven representations gives a reminder of the days when the public, in its ecstasy over Mme. Calvé's first disclosure of her Carmen, insisted on having a dozen performances of it in the season; and those other days when Jean de Reszke imposed his Faust upon the season for an almost equal number of representations. There was no such public furor over "Hänsel und Gretel," of course; but it did credit to the sensibilities and understanding of the frequenters of the Opera House that the charming work, so sound and robust in its musical substance, exercised so great a power.

It was evidently the intention to make "Die Königin von Saba" the most notable production of the season; but it missed fire sadly. Much money had been spent on it, and the resources of the establishment were taxed to give it an outward and dazzling splendor. It was indeed extended over the five performances to which, under present arrangements, any one work is usually limited; but it was not received with enthusiasm.

No new operas were produced. The promised performances of Puccini's "Manon Lescaut" and Wagner's "Fliegender Holländer" were not reached. The additions to the repertory recently current, besides "Hänsel und Gretel" and "Die Königin von Saba," were "La Favorita," "La Sonnambula," "Marta," and "Il Trovatore." There was no further effort on the part of the management to popularize the ballet as an independent feature of the operatic repertory.

The following table shows the operas that were presented, the date of the first performance of each, and the number of times each was given:

Date of First Performance.	Operas.	Number of Performances.
Nov. 20—	"La Gioconda"	4
Nov. 22—	"Die Königin von Saba"	5

Number of operas, 31.

The additions to the list of older Italian operas (except "Il Trovatore") were, of course, made for the purpose of increasing the number of works in which Mr. Caruso could sing; and to them must be joined "Marta," which, for his purposes, is practically an Italian opera. To what an extent the management has been leaning on Mr. Caruso this season is indicated by the number of his appearances, which is 45. Miss Alten had 44, and Mme. Homer 42; but of those upon whom reliance was placed as an "attraction" the next were Mme. Sembrich with 34, Mme. Nordica with 21, Miss Fremstad with 24, and Messrs. Scotti and Plançon with 37 and 34 each. The engagement of Mr. Caruso was one of the most valuable of all the assets inherited by Mr. Conried from the previous régime, which had prepared the path in many ways for the success of the present one. The question of a tenor is troublesome as well as momentous for the success of operatic management, and its solution through the presence of Mr. Caruso has been a wonderful piece of luck. His value has been exploited to the utmost. The tenor is more firmly intrenched in the public admiration than ever. Caruso's name swells the subscription list at the beginning of the season and fills the house when it has a place in the evening's cast, no matter what the opera may be. On Jean de Reszke's retirement from the Metropolitan Opera House the great question was who should take his place; and over it there were no doubt sleepless managerial nights. Mr. Caruso, of course, fills it in no respect whatever except that of being a popular idol; and, being such, for him the operatic repertory must be in large part arranged. The fact has contributed to a lowering of public taste from the point to which the finer art, the higher ideals, and the superior intelligence of Mr. de Reszke had lifted it. But it has all been profitable.

Mr. Caruso has endured the rigors of the New York climate with a fortitude that has been positively providential for the management. Mr. Conried has had no other tenor for the works of the Italian school except Mr. Dippel, (and for the single opera of "Il Trovatore" Mr. Knote,) and has had nobody else for the French operas. The occasions when Mr. Dippel has been put into these performances have given rise to loud dissatisfaction. There has been, indeed, too much difference between the best and the next best singers all through; and a disposition that seemed eager on the part of the management to substitute inferior singers for better ones whenever occasion arose. The process is an economical one. Strangely enough, the reverse of this has very seldom been noted.

The lack of careful and sufficient preparation for some of the operas produced has been one of the causes of complaint this season. Mr. Conried has put in an elaborate defense on this score; or rather a confession and avoidance. The pleas he sets forth may all be accepted; the brief time that is available for the staging of "between thirty and forty works"—thirty-one is certainly between thirty and forty—the often late arrival in this country of the principal artists; the system of guaranteeing them so many appearances a week; the lack of space in the Opera House. They are all real difficulties, and they have always existed. That they fully account for all the deficiencies of the season cannot really be maintained. There was time enough for repeated rehearsals of "Der Zigeunerbaron," even if there was not for "Don Giovanni" and "Marta." And no satisfying account has been given of the often incompetent stage management. We do not speak of scenes which fall down and narrowly escape the destruction of a prima donna; but of such negligent and unskillful work as was seen in the earlier performances of some of the "Nibelung" dramas, and of the first cycle. This was not due to anything but negligence or lack of skill; for when, in the last cycle, Mr. Hertz took upon himself a supervision of the stage management, which did not belong to him, in addition to conducting the works, an immediate and marked improvement was to be observed. It would not have been impossible for such an improvement to come earlier, and to be more general.

What Mr. Conried had to say about the difficulty of securing a noted conductor is true—though it might have been expressed in a way to give more recognition to what Mr. Hertz has done. But it is with a great conductor at the opera as it is at the Philharmonic Society. A great conductor can justify his presence here only if he is given [illegible], the resources, the opportunities to work out the results he wants. The conducting at the Opera House in respects that have been repeatedly pointed out in this journal through the season is not what it ought to be. The most lamentable feature of it has been the addition of an almost totally inexperienced young man to the staff, and the assignment to him of such masterworks as "Don Giovanni," "Faust," and, after the first few performances, "Hänsel und Gretel." All of these performances suffered from being thus treated. With every desire to favor a young American, it must be said that Mr. Franko has not shown either the talent or the temperament or the authority to conduct operas; and that even if he had, the Metropolitan Opera House ought not to be turned into a training school again for the young and inexperienced.

There were no new singers of high rank added to the opera company this season; and the achievements of the elder members of it have been in ways familiar to this public. Mme. Rappold, "discovered" and exploited this season, made a pleasing impression by her performance in "Die Königin von Saba," which she did not altogether maintain in her later attempts in other works. But her talent was evident even through her inexperience. Mme. Jomelli, another new-comer, showed herself a "useful" member, with routine, and was sometimes effective, without being distinguished.

The prospects of the next season of opera in New York are enlivened by the possibility of a serious rivalry, to be furnished by Mr. Hammerstein. If he really makes a serious attempt at it, and is shrewd enough to let competent people do it for him, and if he succeeds in securing any substantial public support, the rivalry ought to have some wholesome results upon the operatic situation in New York.

THE NEW MUSIC SOCIETY.

The New Music Society of America will give several interesting novelties at its second concert of orchestral music by American composers at Carnegie Hall on the evening of Monday, April 2.

Miss Maud Powell will play a violin concerto by Henry Holden Huss, which has not yet been performed in public. The concerto, which has three movements, is in the key of D minor, and it was finished in 1897. The late Anton Seidl was interested in it, and he made valuable suggestions to the composer. Since then Mr. Huss has made several alterations.

Another novelty will be Frederick S. Converse's orchestral fantasy, "The Mystic Trumpeter," Opus. 19, suggested by Walt Whitman's poem, beginning:

> Hark, some wild trumpeter, some strange musician,
> Hovering unseen in air, vibrates capricious tunes to-night.

This is Mr. Converse's latest orchestral work, immediately preceding his opera, "The Pipe of Desire," recently performed in Boston. The composer, who is assistant professor in the department of music at Harvard, took honors in music there, and afterward at Munich under Rheinberger. His orchestral works include an overture, a symphony, two romances, two poems, and others.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Thomas Tapper of Boston, writer and lecturer on educational and musical subjects, will give six lectures at the Institute of Musical Art, New York, on Monday mornings at 11 o'clock, beginning March 19. The topic of the first lecture will be "Music as a Culture Study," and among the others will be "What the Public School Needs in Music" and "Music as a Municipal Investment." Another course of lectures announced by the institute is on acoustics. These will be given by Prof. Morris Loeb, beginning March 21 at 11 o'clock. They will be illustrated by experiments and stereopticon views. They will be eight in number.

Charles Martin Loeffler's symphonic poem, "La Mort de Tintagiles," was played in Berlin for the first time recently by the Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Arthur Nikisch. The reception of the work was apparently not favorable. Otto Lessmann says in the Allgemeine Musikzeitung that a strong opposition made itself plain. This seemed to him unjust, since the same public had applauded works of at least an equal poverty of thought, much more confused structure, and coarser instrumentation because of a familiar name attached to it. He adds Loeffler's work is made with a skillful, certain hand, but the thematic content consists mostly of short fragments or trivial phrases, which have not enough in them for the great length of the work. Especially the close is drawn out beyond all due, and even the attentive listener will find it hard to discover the connection between Maeterlinck's poem and Loeffler's music.

At this concert Mme. Schumann-Heink sang among other things Schubert's song, "Die Allmacht," with the accompaniment orchestrated by Louis V. Saar of this city. The same critic found no loss of brilliancy in Mme. Schumann-Heink's voice, but detected that her style had become "Americanized"; that is, she treated the songs "in a cool and business-like fashion."

Mr. Philip Hale has seen evil tendencies in the musical life of Boston. The success of public concerts is undermined by the private musicales and the musical clubs. He says in The Boston Herald:

"The habit of concert-going was much more fashionable in Boston a few years ago than it is to-day. We well remember when Steinert Hall was crowded with carefully dressed, delicately scented and palpitating women, young and old, when a pianist or violinist announced a recital. It was so in the old Chickering Hall. The merits of a singer or a fiddler were discussed at afternoon teas and at formal dinners.

"To-day it is still considered the thing for women of long-established and secure social position, for women who are climbing industriously and painfully the social ladder, to attend the Friday afternoon concerts of the symphony orchestras. Some among them go to hear the music; many go to see the others present and to be seen. But it is no longer the thing to attend other concerts as fashionable diversions.

"The earnest student of sociology looking over the audience this season at a recital given by a visitor sees a few inveterate concertgoers, some music students and professional musicians, and a few who have been thoughtfully provided with free tickets by the agent of the piano played on the occasion, and go to the concert as they would to a free lecture with stereopticon, or into any public place where there are seats and a heating apparatus. He notes the rudeness of some in the audience, a misbehavior unknown in our concert halls even a year or two ago; tardy arrivals, taking of seats while the pianist or violinist is playing, leaving abruptly and inconsequentially, sometimes during a performance, general restlessness or gaping indifference.

Ossif Gabrilowitsch, the Russian pianist, has recently appeared in Paris in the threefold capacity of composer, conductor, and pianist. He was found most satisfactory in the last-named capacity.

"St. Paul," Mendelssohn's oratorio, is again to be brought out, and by Mr. Damrosch's People's Choral Union, on April 16. This great body of singers comes but once or twice before the public each year and the eagerness and enthusiasm with which its members go into the work set before them make their efforts all the more interesting. While they may not be classed as a professional chorus, their work has won much praise from the critical press. Mr. Cecil James, tenor, and Mr. Frank Croxton, baritone, will assist.

"Samson and Delilah," by Camille Saint-Saëns, which the Oratorio Society will revive at Carnegie Hall on Tuesday evening, April 3, under Frank Damrosch's direction, is the only important musical treatment of the famous Old Testament episode, except Handel's "Samson." The latter, indeed, makes Delilah merely an incidental character, since the whole oratorio deals only with the blind and captive Samson, using as text fragments of Milton's "Samson Agonistes."

Saint-Saëns saw in the story mainly a chance for fervid love-music and a picturesque Oriental operatic setting. His librettist, Ferdinand Lemaire, expanded the Biblical narrative to meet dramatic requirements. In the Book of Judges, four chapters are devoted to Samson, but only the last deals with Delilah, the woman of Sorek. From this source, and from the frequent allusions in rabbinical literature, it was not hard to deduce the definite portrait of a hero whose strength, valor, and amorous susceptibility could scarcely be overdrawn, even in transferring him from the Scriptural text to the footlights. Delilah's beauty and her wanton treachery also invited translation into emotional music.

The fifth concert of the Kneisel Quartet will be given on Tuesday, March 27. The programme will include the first movement of Schubert's G major quartet, a movement of a quartet by Frederick A. Stock, conductor of the Theodore Thomas Orchestra in Chicago; Beethoven's quartet in B flat, Op. 130, and Schumann's piano quintet, in which Mr. Reisenauer will assist the quartet.

After his concert at Carnegie Hall to-day Jean Gérardy will set out on the longest tour of the season for him. He will leave in the evening for Buffalo, and from there will go out to San Francisco, and will not return until May 11, when he will sail for Europe. The 'cellist will leave New York with great regret. He has come to be very fond of the American metropolis, where he has many friends, and this Winter has been made particularly pleasant for him.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

Fritz Steinbach to Conduct the Last Concerts This Week.

Fritz Steinbach, who is to make his first appearance in this city at the last concerts of the Philharmonic Society this season on Friday and Saturday next at Carnegie Hall, is one of the most noted conductors in Europe, and has this year appeared as a star with local orchestras in London, Brussels, and Berlin with success. He arrived in Boston last week from London, where he met with an enthusiastic reception from the public at the concerts he conducted.

Steinbach bears a cumbersome title, which was given to him by the Grand Duke of Saxe-Meiningen when he was in his service, so as to enable him to amass and command all the available musical forces in the grand duchy on festival occasions. He is a grand ducal general musik director, and was Dr. Hans von Bülow's successor as Court conductor at Meiningen in 1886. There he remained until 1903, when he was called to Cologne as municipal conductor and head of the Cologne Conservatory of Music, succeeding Franz Wüllner. Steinbach is a native of the Duchy of Baden, and was born in 1855. He studied at the Leipsic Conservatory, and carried off the Mozart prize. Thence he went to Vienna, and was a pupil of Nottebohm. He is not a champion of the modern tendencies in music so much as he is a classicist, with peculiarly strong leanings toward Beethoven and Brahms.

When young, Steinbach displayed unmistakable talent for composition, but soon abandoned creative for interpretative art. In 1880 he was appointed conductor of the Municipal Theater at Mayence, and he held the post until called to Meiningen to be von Bülow's successor. It was in this capacity that he laid the foundation of his fame as a conductor of the works of the classics, and more especially of Brahms. He had made the acquaintance of Brahms some time previously, for it was he who had recommended Steinbach. The close friendship between the great master and the young conductor continued till the end of Brahms's life. Harold Bauer, pianist, will be the soloist, and the programme will be as follows:

Symphony No. 2, D major............Brahms
Concerto for Piano No. 5, E flat major..Beethoven
Harold Bauer.
Variations on an original theme........Edward Elgar
Overture, "Leonore," No. 3........Beethoven

The special committee appointed to negotiate with Wassili Safonoff, the Russian conductor, has engaged him as director of the Philharmonic Society for three years. His salary will be $20,000 a year, and the necessary funds have been subscribed. It is also arranged that Mr. Safonoff will be director of the National Conservatory of Music.

Opera Director Has Troubles

Criticism of the Planning of the Opera House---Desperate Repertoire Task.

The matter of rehearsals, about which much has been heard this season because of defects noticed in various productions at the Metropolitan, was touched upon at some length in the report of the Director of the Metropolitan Opera House last week. He wished to give an idea of difficulties which it was admitted "at times mar the production of certain works." In his comments the Director sharply criticised the whole plan of the building in the matter of stage accommodations.

"Perhaps no opera house in the world," he said, "has been built on more impractical plans than the Metropolitan Opera House. The auditorium and foyers have been greatly improved upon through repeated alterations. The stage also has been modernized as far as possible, although certain faults of original construction cannot be overcome.

"However, of auxiliary rooms, so necessary for the proper working of so complicated an organization as ours, there are practically none. Incredible as it may seem, there are absolutely no rehearsal rooms, no magazines for the storage of sceneries and properties, no offices that deserve the name of such.

"The rehearsals of single artists have to take place in the dressing rooms, which in themselves are inadequately equipped. It may seem laughable, but it is a fact, that the rehearsals of the chorus must be held in the outer lobby on the Thirty-ninth Street side. The ballet has to rehearse in the upper foyer, where often ensemble rehearsals of the artists are held when the stage is not free.

"The lack of storage room for scenery and properties, which should have been provided on either side of the stage, requires the occupation of two large storehouses and the removal after each performance of all the sceneries and accessories employed therein, and the transfer from the storehouse to the Opera House of all sceneries and accessories to be used the following day.

"To render this possible, a night shift and a day shift of stagehands has to be employed, the one working from 12 o'clock midnight to 8 A. M., the other from 8 A. M. to 5 P. M. Aside from the enormous cost of such an arrangement, it involves the inconvenience of the handling of the productions by stagehands other than those who during the night prepared the production.

"If only seven performances a week are given the season is bound to result in financial loss. Experience shows that it is the eighth performance per week that balances the budget and yields a profit. However, eight and even seven performances per week reduce the opportunities for proper ensemble rehearsals to a minimum, for it is well-nigh impossible to get the chief artists together frequently during daytime for rehearsal, when some of them invariably sing on the same evening or evening before and after the rehearsals."

Some other difficulties the Director has found are indicated in these passages from the report:

"Owing to the comparative shortness of our operatic season, which, even including a troublesome Spring tour, cannot last longer than five months, we have been compelled to grant to the principal artists a larger number of appearances than they would demand for a longer engagement.

"This makes the arrangement of the repertoire, already difficult enough owing to the rendering of opera in three different languages, an almost desperate task, and, in spite of all possible combinations, it is at times unavoidable to pay certain artists for performances which they have not actually earned.

"The arrangement of the repertoire has been rendered even more difficult than it formerly was by my adoption of the plan of giving each opera during the season once in each of the four weekly subscription performances. Here it should be mentioned that during three seasons there have been but one or two changes of performances through illness of artists, owing to the careful precautions taken in the double, and even triple, distribution of parts among the artists."

THE PHILHARMONIC'S PLAYING.

A Contribution of $1,000 Offered for a Fund for Better Rehearsing.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your Sunday's comment on the Philharmonic Society's proposal to engage Mr. Safonoff as its conductor for a year or more "hits the nail on the head." You say:

> An expensive conductor will be of little use to the Philharmonic Society or its audiences unless he is given absolute authority at least in the matter of obtaining all the rehearsals and the kind of rehearsals he needs. If, as the Philharmonic players are at present situated, they cannot afford the time and attention that are necessary, this would be quite as worthy an object as a conductor's salary for the wealthy music lovers to contribute another large sum for.

Such a statement ought to be handed to every prospective subscriber to the guarantee fund for Mr. Safonoff. If the Philharmonic Society is going to ask the public for special favors, the least it can do is to agree to give the best in its power in the way of artistic production. Such is notoriously not the case at present. Even admitting that the constitutional defects from which the society suffers are incurable for the moment, yet the same orchestra, under stricter discipline and more frequent rehearsals, could accomplish much better results.

The Philharmonic Society proposes to give $5,000 toward the $20,000 to be raised. It would be much wiser to ask the music lovers of the city to subscribe the whole of such an amount (large as it is) and for the society to agree in return to hold as many rehearsals as are necessary for it to furnish the best quality of artistic goods in its possession, and not some inferior or faded article it has somewhere on a back shelf.

If Mr. Safonoff is a conscientious artist, he will not accept a large sum for his services unless he feels he can do himself and the public full justice.

The writer of this letter incloses herewith a check for $1,000, which he desires you, Mr. Editor, to give to any fund likely to force the Philharmonic Society to deliver the best quality of goods in its possession.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

Josef Lhévinne's second piano recital will be given in Carnegie Hall to-morrow evening. He will play Beethoven's sonata, Op. 106; Chopin's F minor ballade and pieces by Gluck, Schumann, Rubinstein, Scriabine, Schulz-Eveler, and Moszkowski.

The Marum Quartet will give its fourth concert next Thursday evening at Cooper Union. Eugene Bernstein, who is to be the assisting artist, will play, with Modest Altschuler, Beethoven's sonata in A major for piano and 'cello, Mozart's Quartet in D major, and Schubert's Quartet in A minor will complete the programme. The quartet consists of Ludwig Marum, the well-known violinist; Michel Bernstein, and Jacob and Modest Altschuler.

Victor Beigel's second and last concert will be given on Wednesday evening at Mendelssohn Hall. Miss Susan Metcalfe, Miss Frances Ives, Miss Nevada Vanderveer, and Mr. William Raymond will sing. Miss Olive Mead will play the viola obligatos to two songs of Brahms's. Mr. Beigel's fromer programme having been devoted largely to old songs, this will be devoted to modern ones, from Schubert, Brahms, Franck, and Rubinstein to Wolf, Reger, Bungert, Duparc, Fauré, Debussy, Elgar, Roger Quilter, and Mr. Beigel.

Rudolph Ganz will give a piano recital in Mendelssohn Hall on Wednesday afternoon. He will play Beethoven's Appassionata sonata, Brahms's Handel variations, and pieces by Alkan, Ravel, Debussy, Grieg, and Liszt.

For his concert to-night at the Hippodrome Victor Herbert has arranged a popular programme of numbers from his most successful operas. They will be sung and played, the singers being Miss May Bradley, soprano, and J. Humbird Duffy, baritone. The vocal selections will comprise the principal arias for the soprano from "The Wizard of the Nile" and "The Serenade," and the baritone solos from "The Fortune Teller" and "Prince Ananias." The Herbert numbers for the orchestra will be the intermezzo from "Mlle. Modiste," the ensemble from "Dolly Dollars," the toy soldiers' march from "Babes in Toyland," and the march finale from "Wonderland," in addition to his Irish Rhapsody. These will make up the whole second part of the programme, the first section being made up from the works of Mendelssohn, Brahms, Tschaikowsky, and Lalo.

Manfred Malkin will give a piano recital on Friday evening at Mendelssohn Hall. He will play Beethoven's sonata, Op. 27, No. 2; groups of pieces by Chopin and Mendelssohn, and others by Bach, de Beriot, Schubert, Schumann, and Liszt.

The Leo Schulz Quartet will give its second subscription concert in Knabe Hall to-morrow evening, with the assistance of Mrs. Sang-Collins, pianist. They will play Paul Juon's string quartet, Op. 29, A minor; F. Schubert's string trio in B flat, and Josef Suk's piano quartet, Op. 1.

Miss Julia O'Connor, contralto, will give a song recital in Mendelssohn Hall on Thursday evening. She will be assisted by Emilio Agramonte, accompanist; Joseph Poznanski, organist, and Miss Lillian Littlehales, 'cellist.

The ridiculous first announcement of the programme of Messrs. Marteau and Gérardy's concert this afternoon in Carnegie Hall has been changed. As it now stands Mr. Marteau will play Schumann's fantasie, Op. 131, and Vieuxtemps's fifth concerto for violin and orchestra. Mr. Gérardy will play Saint-Saëns's concerto in A and Boellmann's symphonic variations for 'cello and orchestra. Anna Schelke, soprano, will sing. The New York Symphony Orchestra, under Walter Damrosch, will play.

RICHARD STRAUSS MAY COME.

Plan to Produce His Operas at the Metropolitan Next Season.

It is probable that arrangements will be concluded in the next two weeks whereby Richard Strauss will come to America next season for another tour.

Should he do so, he will give his chief attention while here to the supervision of the production at the Metropolitan Opera House of his operas "Salome" and "Fuersnoth." A proposal has been made by the Director of the Metropolitan to Henry Wolfsohn, who has the negotiations with Mr. Strauss under way, that these two operas shall be given as a double bill for four performances next season. Mr. Strauss is greatly in favor of the plan and would like to come to Amer[illegible] only for the purpose of seeing the [illegible] put on.

He wishes, however, to combine with that work, if he comes, a tour of America, and his manager is now in negotiation with various orchestras for special concerts to be directed by the composer. It is not entirely certain, however, that he could get leave of absence from the Emperor of Austria for this tour the coming season, but if it should be a case of combining the operatic production and a much wider acquaintance with the American people, it is believed that the sovereign would not withhold his consent.

IN THE ORGAN LOFT.

Mrs. Mary Hissem De Moss, who has the reputation of being one of if not the highest paid choir singers in the city, is to continue in her present church positions this coming year. Mrs. De Moss sings at the morning and afternoon services at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, and in the evenings at the Calvary Methodist Episcopal Church, in East Orange. The other members of the Presbyterian Church Choir have been re-engaged for the coming year. Mrs. De Moss is to be the soloist at the concert of the New York Liederkranz Society on March 24.

The contract for the organ of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine has been given to Skinner & Hopewell-Jones of Boston. No specifications for the organ have been decided upon, or will be for some time.

Nicanor Greevsky, musical director of the Russian Cathedral, at 15 East Ninety-seventh Street, gave a special musical service last Sunday on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the Very Rev. Fr. A. A. Hotovitsky, Dean of the church. The music of the cathedral is always interesting, given by a chorus unaccompanied, the cathedral being a church without an organ. One of the features of the musical part of the service was the Te Deum by D. Bortniansky, which is the same that was sung for Count Witte in Portsmouth.

Will C. Macfarlane, organist of St. Thomas's Church, will give the organ recital at the Broadway Tabernacle Church (Broadway, corner Fifty-sixth Street) at 4 o'clock on Tuesday of this week. Following is the programme:

1. Prelude and Fugue, in E flat, "St. Ann's" ....J. S. Bach
2. Romanza, in A major } Will C. Macfarlane
   Scherzo, in G minor }
3. Symphony, No. 6..............C. M. Widor
   I.—Allegro. II.—Adagio. III.—Intermezzo.
4. Offertoire..................Th. C. Salome
5. Prayer, in G flat............Ed. Lemaigre
6. Cantilena......................Jules Grison
7. Concert Overture, in C......Alfred Hollins

At St. Bartholomew's, (Madison Avenue and Forty-fourth Street,) Leo Stokovski will give for a prelude at the morning service something of Elgar perhaps not heard in a church here before, the "Funeral March" from "Granja and Diarmid." The offertory anthem will be Mendelssohn's "Oh, for the Wings of a Dove," soprano solo, sung by Miss Helen McGrew with chorus. The prelude for the 4 o'clock evening prayer will be the "Morganstimmung" and "Ase's Tod," music written by Grieg for Ibsen's "Peer Gynt." The anthem "Here by Babylon's Wave" is by many considered one of Gounod's finest, and is less marred by mannerisms than his other works. An old Italian anthem, "Give Ear Unto My Prayer," by Arcadelt, will be sung unaccompanied at the offertory. Weber's "Softly Now the Light of Day" will be the vesper hymn, which is sung kneeling.

Following is the programme of the organ recital to be given at St. Bartholomew's on Wednesday evening of this week at 8:30 o'clock.

Overture, "Rosamunde"..............Schubert
Salut d'Amour..............................Elgar
Toccata and Fugue in D minor...........Bach
Baritone Solo, "There Is a Green Hill Far Away"..............................Gounod
Mr. Frederick Wheeler.
Vorspiel, "Parsifal"......................Wagner
Baritone Solo, "Lord, Preserve Me Uncomplaining"..............................Rossini
Mr. Frederick Wheeler.
(a) Early Morning..........................Grieg
(b) Lamentation..............................Grieg
(From the "Peer Gynt" music.)
Festal March................................Smart

At the Church of the Incarnation, (Madison Avenue and Thirty-fifth Street,) W. R. Hedden, organist and choirmaster of the parish, will give for the prelude at the morning service "Priere," by Lucas. The offertorium will be the "De Profundis," by Gounod, and the organ postlude "Fugue in D Minor, (Giant,)" by Bach. The "Good Friday Music" or "Parsifal" will be the organ prelude at the 4 o'clock service, and the "Prelude" to "Parsifal" the postlude. The offertorium will be "Zion's Ways Do Languish," (Gallia,) by Gounod. Sullivan's "Prodigal Son" will be given at the musical service of the 25th.

An interesting series of musical addresses is being given at the Old First Presbyterian Church, (Fifth Avenue, Eleventh to Twelfth Street,) by the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, the pastor. These are Lenten services, and began March 4. On that Sunday the subject was "The Old Hebrew Psalm Book." Last Sunday "The Anthems of the Apostles" was given; to-day there will be "The Hymns of the Early Church," and on following Sundays will be "The Canticles of the Monks," "The Battle Cries of the Reformation," and "The Praise Songs of the Church Militant." There is appropriate music. The organ recitals of the church, which were announced to begin on Tuesday of this week, have been postponed until later in the month.

The Madison Avenue Baptist Church is to have a new choir this coming year, but the new singers have not yet been engaged.

A series of interesting organ recitals is being given on Wednesday afternoons in Lent at 4:15 at the Church of the Holy Trinity, Brooklyn, by Samuel A. Baldwin, organist and choirmaster. The choir of the church has been re-engaged for the coming year. It is a choir of fifty mixed voices with soloists. Miss Grace J. Davis, soprano; Miss Mary C. Heath, contralto, and Charles Stuart Phillips, tenor. Stainer's "Crucifixion" is to be sung at Holy Trinity Sunday evening, April 1.

J. Warren Andrews of the Church of the Divine Paternity will give on Thursday, at 4 o'clock, the third in his series of organ recitals at the church, (Central Park West and Seventy-sixth Street.) Following is the programme, at which one of his pupils will be at the organ:

Organ—Pastorale-Sonate, Op. 88...Rheinberger
Pastorale; Intermezzo; Fugue.
Pastorale..................................A. Foote
Miss Hampson.
Contralto Solo—"The Pilgrim"...Tschaikowski
Miss Marvin.
Organ—March of the Magi..............Dubois
Miss Hampson.
Tenor Solo—"Sound an Alarm," ("Judas Maccabaeus")..............................Handel
Mr. Quesnel.
Organ—Toccata in F, Book 8, No. 2..J. S. Bach
Miss Hampson.
Contralto Solo—"O Rest in the Lord"....Mendelssohn
Miss Marvin.
Organ—Sonata No. 5, Op. 118....Gustav Merkel
Gavotte—Mignon..........................Thomas
Miss Hampson.
Tenor Solo—"Waft Her, Angels, Through the Skies," ("Jeptha")..................Handel
Mr. Quesnel.
Organ—Cantabile and Toccata, Fifth Symphony..Widor
Miss Hampson.

At the service this evening Gounod's "Day of Penitence" will be given.

At the Madison Square Presbyterian Church there is to be a change in the choir this year, and the soprano and contralto soloists, Miss Effie Stuart and Miss Maude Smith, are not to be re-engaged. Following is the musical programme to be given with the assistance of the new chorus:

Organ prelude..................................Higgs
Magnificat......................................Tours
Lord, Unto Thee Will I Cry, (Elijah).....Mendelssohn
"Crossing the Bar"..........................Barnby
Organ prelude, andante..............Mendelssohn
"While All Things Were in Quiet Silence"..Woodman
"Again As Evening Shadows Fall"..Carter
103d Psalm, (antiphonal)..............Parkhurst
"We Stand in Deep Repentance"......Mendelssohn
"Now the Day Is Over"....................Barnby

MME. NORDICA OUT OF OPERA.

To Begin Her Tour To-morrow—May Sing in Concert All Next Season.

When the opera songbirds begin their flight to the Pacific Coast this week, Mme. Nordica will not be among them. She has ended her limited engagement for the season with the Metropolitan Company, in fact, severed her connection with the troupe, and will devote the rest of the Spring to a concert tour. She will do more traveling than the opera people, and will have to live for most of the next two months in a car.

She will start out on Monday morning for Jacksonville, Fla., and after a quick trip will open her engagements there. Then she will visit several other Florida cities and come back up through the South, reaching Atlantic City before Easter. Thence she will go to Chicago, up through the Northwest, down into Indian Territory, and back through the Middle States, and up into Canada.

It can be said that Mme. Nordica, in addition to the offers from the Metropolitan management and Oscar Hammerstein for operatic engagements for next season, is considering a plan to spend all that season in America in concert. It is very doubtful whether she will be with the Metropolitan forces, and she has not decided to throw in her lot with Mr. Hammerstein. Her manager, R. E. Johnston, has offered her a tour of seventy-five concerts that would begin in November and continue to the next Spring. In this she would cover the entire country. It is not improbable that the prima donna will undertake to show the opera management that she can be independent.

NOTES OF THE STUDIOS.

Miss Emma Thursby is to give a musicale and reception in honor of Harold Bauer at her studio, 34 Gramercy Park, next Friday afternoon. The musical entertainment will be furnished by the following artists: Mme. Delly Friedlander, soprano; Miss Reba Cornett, soprano; Miss Martha Wittkowski, contralto; Mr. Bell-Resky, baritone, and Hans Kronold, 'cellist, assisted by Robert Gaylor and Miss Yeaton, accompanists.

Hans Kronold is to give a course of five lecture-musicales on Thursday mornings and Wednesday afternoons during Lent. The Thursday lectures will take place at the house of Mrs. G. V. Schiapp, 48 East Seventy-eighth Street, and those on Wednesday afternoons at Mrs. E. A. Northrup's, 57 East Seventy-ninth Street. There will be musical interpretations by Miss Bianca Holly, soprano; Miss Leonora Dally, piano; Michael Banner, violin, and Hans Kronold, 'cellist.

Miss Margaret Goetz announces the fourth season of her Historic Song Recitals, to be given in her Carnegie Hall studio on March 18 and 29 and April 11. Miss Goetz will be assisted by the following: Mrs. Theodore Van Yorx, soprano; Dr. Carl E. Dufft, basso; Theodore Van Yorx, tenor; Walter L. Bogart, baritone, and Mrs. Katherine Wyman and Miss Ruth Savage, accompanists.

A studio musicale was given in the art department of Carnegie Hall on Thursday afternoon. Those who took part in the programme were Miss Florence W. Hinkle, soprano, and the Hoffman Quartet, composed of Jacques Hoffman, Adolf Bak, Karl Rissland, and Carl Barth.

ORATORIO BY CATHOLICS.

"St. Ursula" Will Be Produced by Mme. Kronold's Society.

Arrangements have been almost completed for the production of the oratorio "St. Ursula" by the Catholic Dramatic Oratorio Society in Madison Square Garden concert hall shortly after Easter. Under the direction of Alexander McGuirk, the organist of St. James's Church, and of Mme. Selma Kronold, formerly of the Metropolitan Opera Company, but now manager of the society, a chorus of more than eighty voices has been gathered from various choirs in this city, and Mrs. Margaret Keys, contralto, and Edward Barrow, tenor, have been engaged for solo parts. Mme. Kronold will be the soprano. Sixty members of the Philharmonic Society will form the orchestra.

"St. Ursula" is an English work by F. H. Cowan. Its music is not so heavy as that of other oratorios heard in New York this season.

Many prominent Catholics in New York are interested in the work of this society, which Mme. Kronold gave up her operatic career to found. Among those who are aiding it are Archbishop Farley, Vicar General Lavelle, the Rev. John Talbot Smith, and Miss Annie Leary.

LIGHTS DOWN FOR MR. SCOTTI.

How His Mustache Caused Unusual Gloom at a Performance.

It was at the last performance of "La Tosca" at the Metropolitan. In the second act the people out in front wondered why the lights were turned so low. Much of artistic merit depends upon the pantomime in this act, but apparently those who had charge of the stage did not realize the fact, and had thought it necessary to hide everything in gloom. People strained their eyes trying to see Mme. Eames while she was portraying her emotions, but while they could hear her they could see little of her face. As for Mr. Scotti, he was almost lost in the gloom. It was a matter of comment in the foyer afterward, and many wondered whether this was a new feature in the performance of "La Tosca."

Only a few persons behind the stage knew what the real reason was. They have since told some others, and for two weeks it has been the joke of the Opera House.

It appears that when Signor Scotti made up for his rôle that evening he was not so careful as usual. It is necessary for this rôle that Mr. Scotti shall appear as a man cleanly shaved. He objects to the reality. He is very fond of his short, dark moustache, and even the demands of his art have not sufficed to make him sacrifice this adornment.

Consequently for the "Tosca" rôle it was necessary for him to make up a lip over the moustache. This he did with the puttylike substance that stage people use for making false noses, cheek bones, and such things. It is hard to put on properly and harder to take off in the case of a moustache, but Signor Scotti does not mind such things.

He had made his putty lip and had painted it over so as to make it hide the moustache completely, and when he went on it seemed to be a perfect piece of make-up. Just after his entrance for the second act, however, he made a startling discovery. The make-up was cracking. A few hairs of the moustache were straggling out, and in a little while it might be evident to the keen-eyed persons out front, and that would have ruined everything.

There was no time to go to his dressing room. So he did something that was not on the books for his rôle—slipping over to a place where he could communicate with the electrician and informing him in a stage whisper of the trouble.

So the lights were turned down, and the audience out in front sat and wondered about the new feature in the opera. A gentle hint was afterward conveyed to Mr. Scotti that an artist should not let mere adornment interfere with his art.

BAER TO GO TO ASIA.

Will Invade Japan and China, Despite Uncertainty and Difficulty.

Harold Bauer is planning to take his music into the Orient next season, to see what a Western pianist can do among Asiatics. A tour is being arranged for him that will take him to the chief cities of Japan, China, Java, and India, as well as Australia. It will be a venture that will be watched with much interest by other musicians, not only because of the curiosity to know how the Western music will appeal to the Oriental understanding, but because a new and great field would be opened to artists if it should be found possible for one to gain such appreciation and profits as would make such a tour worth while. India and Australia, of course, have been known as good fields, but China and Japan are uncertain quantities.

In undertaking this tour Mr. Bauer would have to overcome many difficulties. It is hard enough for a pianist to cross America and give concerts, as the number of concert pianos to be found is not large. In the case of Paderewski it was necessary to have several of these big instruments constantly on the move about the West to keep him supplied. Whenever a piano institution sends out a new artist it has to distribute from ten to a score of instruments along the route to make certain that a proper vehicle for his art will be provided.

On his Oriental tour Mr. Bauer would be compelled to take his own instrument, and perhaps will be compelled to provide more than one in order to meet emergencies. As a concert piano is a bulky piece of baggage, and can easily be set out of action by rough handling, the artist will provide for himself and his managers a fine lot of trouble in this respect alone. He has a great desire to see the Orient and try his art there, however, and will not be deterred.

ART OF THE FISHMONGER.

"DID yes iver see the loikes o' that?" exclaimed the man putting in coal as, grimy and black, he leaned upon his shovel and for a moment forgot his work while gazing admiringly into the show window of an uptown fish market, which in this Lenten season was rendered more attractive than that of either florist or fruiterer in its vicinity.

One would hardly have thought that fish could lend themselves to decorative art or color schemes, but that which called forth the coal heaver's admiration was truly an artistic display.

The window was banked high with bright green moss and sea weed, upon which fresh shad were laid, their iridescent scales in fine contrast to the red snapper beside them.

The aqua marine blue of crabs' claws rested upon the crimson back of their neighbor, a boiled lobster.

Sheepshead and the spotted Spanish mackerel were adorned with fern leaves laid diagonally across their gleaming sides, and platters trimmed with ferns and holding pink shrimps and glistening white bait flanked the window on either side, while an eel tied in a true lover's knot reposed in the centre of all.

NOVELISTS AND THE STAGE.

SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE, who is now attending the rehearsals of his new play, "Brigadier Gerard," which Mr. Lewis Waller will produce at the Imperial Theatre, is very enthusiastic about the stage, but nothing in the world, he said to a London interviewer, would induce him to take an author's call, no matter how flattering it might be.

"I am only speaking for myself," he said; "and then, after all, my experience as a dramatist is not a big one. In fact it is a very small one, as 'Brigadier Gerard' is the first whole-evening play for which I am entirely responsible.

"This play is not taken from my published stories. Some of the smaller incidents are, but the main plot is entirely new."

Sir Conan Doyle is not inclined to think that the entrance of the novelist into the theatre interferes with the dramatist pure and simple. "A stage taken by a dramatist novel leaves one less for the purely original—that is obvious, but whether a play that is dug out of the entrails of a novel is as good or better than the other sort depends on many things.

"If a novel is not dramatic it will not make a good play. There have been many instances of hugely successful plays taken from novels. I may mention, for instance, 'Under the Red Robe,' 'The Little Minister,' 'Monsieur Beaucaire,' and 'Trilby.' A play, however, carries with it a big responsibility. The man who writes a novel does not bring down a whole company with him if the public won't have his work."

Annual Spring Opening of The Regular Circus and Hippodrome SEASON, INAUGURATING the FIFTY-THIRD CONSECUTIVE YEAR of

THE BARNUM AND BAILEY GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH

During which period of time its treasures have been exhibited before 250,000,000 people.

THIS YEAR BIGGER AND BETTER THAN EVER And the Most Glorious in Its Long Unparalleled History.

A wondrous exhibition magnificently presenting the whole world's greatest triumphs in the line of startling and sensational acts and marvelous feats and exploits, together with all the wonderful things invented, suggested, or devised during the past year in any part of the globe, as well as all the rarest, costliest, and most curious animals captured. PERFORMANCES AND ATTRACTIONS CHANGED EVERY YEAR. See what THIS YEAR produces. An entirely new show throughout, differing from last year and filled to overflowing with novelties.

Hippodrome, Circus, Menageries, Museum, Aviary, Aquarium.

A combination and presentation of all the earth's wonders of land, water and air, in Fur, Fin, Feather, and Fang.
Monopolizing and appropriating the greatest acts, artists, and attractions of every nation, and presenting all in comprehensive form and intelligent arrangement for the edification, delectation, gratification, transportation, satisfaction, and fascination of

ALL THE PEOPLE ON THE AMERICAN CONTINENT.
THE ONLY REAL CIRCUS AND REAL HIPPODROME EVER EXHIBITING IN NEW YORK, and the only amusement enterprise in the world justifying and meriting the proud distinction of

THE ONE, SOLE, AND ONLY GRAND POPULAR NATIONAL AMUSEMENT INSTITUTION.

Where disappointment never comes. Where learning wears a most attractive face. Where grave and gay alike are satisfied. Where all visitors are supersaturated with pleasure. Where children revel to their hearts' content absorbing valuable information. Where childhood's dreams are realized and pleasure reigns supreme. Where the noblest and most exalted ideas are conspicuous and produce a world of wonder and delight.

THE MIND DISTRACTED WITH CONFLICTING ATTRACTIONS.

Heed the teachings of Time, Truth, and Intelligence and you will surely realize and know for a certainty there is but one greatest show, that it has existed for over fifty years, and that it is the

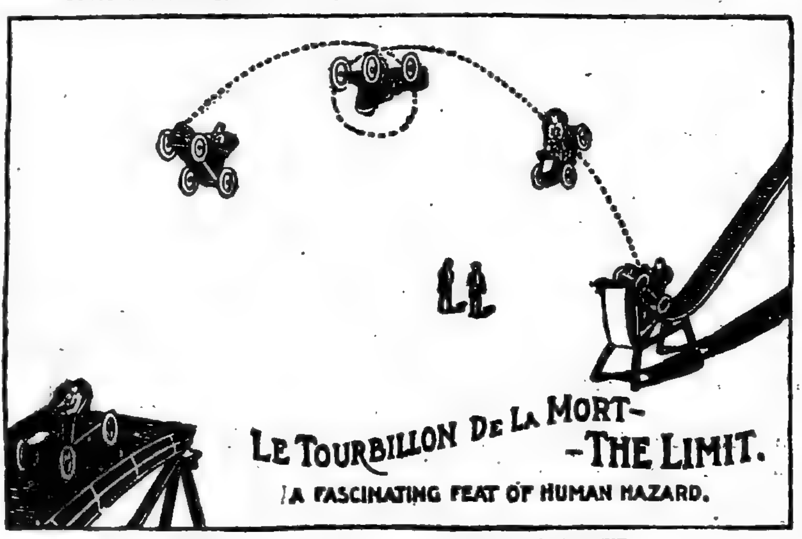
BARNUM & BAILEY GREATEST SHOW ON EARTH.

Scores upon scores of prominent champions in every branch of aerial, arenic and comic art, where others depend upon the commonplace.

LEAVING NOTHING WORTH EXHIBITING FOR OTHERS TO OBTAIN.
WHERE FORMERLY SINGLE ACTORS APPEARED NOW WHOLE ENTIRE TROUPES PERFORM.

With magnificent, potential, picturesque, and fascinating spectacles, with gorgeous pageants, tableaux, processions, and displays, exhausting art and invention. With countless features and attractions never seen before.

THIS YEAR PRESENTING FOR THE FIRST TIME IN AMERICA



LE TOURBILLON DE LA MORT—
—THE LIMIT.
A FASCINATING FEAT OF HUMAN HAZARD.

THE LIMIT
LeTourbillonDeLaMort

Where Chuckling and Expectant Death meets Disappointment and Chagrin.
Another awful, appalling, aerial automobile somersaulting act.
An amazing descent, ascent, flight, somersault, impact, and ride
By a Young and Fearless French Lady.
A Turning, Twisting, Twirling, Tossing, Tilting, Transposition; the thrilling, terrifying, tremendous, tumbling, tantalizing Triumph of all Time.
Absolutely the Extreme Limit to Human Daring and Intrepidity.
The veritable cap-sheaf of the incredible, closely approaching a marvelous, maddening, mechanical mystery and miracle.

THE TWO TWIRLS OF TERROR.

Two Desperate, Dual, Double Death Defying Deeds, Deftly and Delightfully Done exactly as they were produced in Paris before delighted thousands.

THE AERIAL TREMPLIN.

Another Parisian sensational exploit performed by a troupe of seven famous male and female artists.

THE DIP OF DEATH.

Still another French device for cheating death of his expected prey. A fearful, fascinating, fleeting, fugacious frolic with fate. A young American lady's wild, reckless topsy turvy ride and aerial somersault in an automobile for which is paid nearly $5,000 cash, or $100 every clock tick during its performance.
Also presenting for the first time the magnificent, and glorious spectacular entree and Pretty, Prime, Prink, Picturesque Poetic Prelude to the Prodigal Presentation of Perplexing Performances.

PEACE.
America's Immortal Triumph.

A sumptuous, substantial, superb, satisfying, and surprising allegory, symbolizing the conclusion of the war between Russia and Japan, presenting numberless, new, radiant costumes of the finest fabrics, huge floats and triumphal cars, elephants, horses, infantry, cavalry, and marines, with living representatives of all nations. And in addition thereto all the myriad features, acts, and attractions comprised in an immense, imposing, and

PRODIGIOUS PROGRAMME OF PERFECT PERFORMANCES BY PRE-EMINENTLY POPULAR PERFORMERS.
100 STARTLING, SENSATIONAL, AND HIGH-PRICED ACTS,

Embracing every kind of feat, trick, exploit, or endeavor, capable of execution by man or bird, beast or reptile, whether comic, daring, bold, reckless, or that evidence the height of practice, skill, and perfection.

ALL TO BE SEEN AND ENJOYED FOR THE USUAL SMALL PRICE OF ADMISSION.
THE GREATEST AMOUNT OF AMUSEMENT FOR THE SMALLEST PRICE.
TWO PERFORMANCES DAILY AT 2 AND 8 P. M.

First Performance on Thursday Afternoon next at 2 o'clock P. M.

'OPPER IN 'APPYLAND A 'IT.

This is the way a Cockney might describe the performance of HAPPYLAND given by De Wolf Hopper with Marguerite Clark and his company at the CASINO THEATRE. The newspapers describe it differently. Louis De Foe in The World said: "It is an encouraging sign that so clean and decent a comic opera can come back to Broadway twice in a season and meet the cordial reception given last night." Glenmore Davis in The Globe remarked: "The best comic opera and the best singing we have had in many seasons." You can't afford to miss

DE WOLF HOPPER IN HAPPYLAND.

The Casino is at 39th St. and Broadway. The telephone number is 1646-Bryant. Evening performances at 8:15. Best Seats $1.00 at Thursday and Saturday Matinees.

IS A LAUGH WORTH A CENT?

You can get 200 of them at a penny each if you buy orchestra chairs to see

MEXICANA AT THE LYRIC.

The management generously throws in twenty of the prettiest songs imaginable. Maybe you have heard some of them whistled. Wouldn't you enjoy hearing a fine singing company of 100 performers render "Supposing" or "United We Stand"? It's a moral certainty that you will like Thomas Q. Seabrooke, Christie MacDonald, and Joseph Herbert. The Lyric is on 42d St., west of Broadway. The telephone is 1646-Bryant. Evening performances are given at 8:15. Best seats Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, $1.00.

EVER COLLECT SOFA PILLOWS?

Of course you did, if you went to college. You decorated your room with theatrical posters, too, and placed about a lot of other things which you wouldn't have in the house now. Nevertheless, you remember your college days with keen pleasure, and will find a delightful reminder of them in which Henry Woodruff is now presenting at the PRINCESS THEATRE. The play is fairly saturated with the spirit of youth and happiness. The Princess is at Broadway and 29th St.; the telephone is 2848-Madison. Evening performances occur at 8:15, and best seats at Tuesday and Thursday Matinees are $1.00. Saturday Matinees are given at the regular prices.

HUNGRY IN HUNGARY?

If it's Little Hungary, the restaurant, you can soon cure this disease. If you are merely hungry for a good laugh, see the representation of Little Hungary in at Fields' Theatre. The act in which this reproduction is shown is one of the most realistic and amusing to be seen in New York. Fields' Theatre is on 42d St., west of Broadway. The telephone number is 44-Bryant. Evening performances at 8:15. Best seats $1.00 at Wednesday and Saturday Matinees. Engagement ends next Saturday, March 24th.

Frocks ❧ Seen ❧ at ❧ the ❧ Opera

THE passing of the opera season means the passing also of the greatest sartorial pageant of the Winter for the general public, for while the crowds at the Metropolitan Opera House were drawn thither for the music, many women have frankly admitted that the spectacle of the parterre boxes filled with gorgeously gowned and jeweled women afforded them no small amount of enjoyment and proved a great attraction.

One of the women most often seen in the parterre boxes and who was always well gowned, although by no means always gayly, was Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, who has spent the Winter in New York, but who will soon return to London, as Mr. Townsend has held for several years a diplomatic position abroad.

Mrs. Henry Clews is another of the women who are always tastefully costumed. Mrs. Pembroke Jones and Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish have appeared in some superb creations, the former once in a princess robe of gold brocade, of unusual richness yet simplicity of line.

Mrs. John Jacob Astor's evening frocks are beautiful. She looks especially well in black velvet and in pale gray tulle. Now and then, in fact nearly every evening, some one or two of the young girls or matrons would brighten the parterre boxes with a scarlet, turquois, or vivid green robe. Mrs. James W. Gerard wore one of the latter shade in velvet that was exquisite. Miss Elizabeth Cutting and Miss Anita Peabody were among those in scarlet, while the brilliant blues were worn by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Miss Mills, Miss Trevor, and others. This list is most incomplete and merely includes the names that occur at the moment. A number of the débutantes were faithful to pure white, and Miss Sadie Jones was one of these, her frocks and hairdressing being one of the best possible examples of what the French deem appropriate to the jeune fille.

Miss Anna Leary, who was given the title of Countess by the Pope, in recognition of her work among the poor, was seen at a recent evening function in white satin. The sleeves of the gown were arranged in three full puffs that stood out quite stiffly from the arms, and which were rather flat, measured lengthwise from shoulder to arm. The bodice had a lace stock and a waistcoat effect of point lace laid in surplice effect. A coronet of white roses with stiff ends of white satin rising from the centre and slanting out toward the back was the headdress.

* * *

Mrs. Henry Clews has several times worn a hair coiffure decoration that has been variously and always inaccurately described. The effect is of a tiny coronet bow of black velvet, from which a long white aigrette starts a little to the right of the centre of the head and curves around to the left, following the outline of its shape to the back. This plume lies quite near the coiffure, and while odd, and perhaps not as admirable as some of the coiffure ornaments Mrs. Clews wears, is still attractive and in no way outré. One of her evening robes is of velvet in a pure light purple, sometimes termed heliotrope, and with no hint of pink, mauve, or violet. Indeed, its shade is quite unusual and decidedly beautiful. The top is cut square and fluffs of tulle are placed around the top. The sleeves are slightly pointed, the points falling below the elbows, and are of filmy chiffon. Under them, a little above the elbows, and with the effect of an upward turned point on each arm, is a ruching of chiffon. In order to obtain this effect there is probably an almost tight-shaped arm or shoulder cap of tulle or chiffon to which this ruching is attached, and the upper sleeves fall over it. At a distance the skirt seemed to be perfectly plain. There is a princess effect to the gown.

Mrs. Arthur Iselin, who was Miss Eleanor Jay, a descendant in a straight line from the famous John Jay, wore at one of the latest operatic performances at the Metropolitan a fetching frock in pale blue.

The material was some sort of glistening silk, probably liberty satin. The sleeves were a series of Elizabethan puffs, three to each sleeve between shoulder curve and elbow, and these stood out from the arm with distinct spaces between them, and frills of lace or chiffon falling over the elbows. These sleeves, to keep the shape and stiffness of their puffs, must either be wired or stiffened, otherwise they would be ridiculously limp.

The bodice had a bolero effect in chiffon and lace coming from the under-arm seams and running up to the top of the corsage in its centre, the parting between the bolero sides in the centre being an inverted or upward turning point that showed the corsage proper of tight fitting satin that described a deep point on the full skirt. The outline around the neck was a rounded square. In her coiffure was a wreath of ivy-shaped metal and jeweled leaves in green and silver. Mrs. Iselin has gained in beauty since her marriage.

A handsome evening gown made by a New York modiste for Palm Beach dinners and dances is an apricot-colored chiffon cloth embroidered in faded green leaves and in flowers of different shades of apricot. The corsage is cut square and not very low. It is outlined by three cord shirrings, the cords being quite large and an inch and a quarter apart. The material of the shirred top is cream net with lace flouncing, the top part being plain net and the lower two-thirds of lace forming a bertha flounce that falls straight across the top to the top of the girdle, and goes over the shoulders, forming caps to the chiffon sleeves. The nét of the sleeves has two cords running through it just above the heavy part of the lace, and this latter forms the sleeve flounces to the elbows. The undersleeves are simple puffs of the chiffon cloth that fill out the net puff.

The bodice proper is shirred at the top under the lace, and again at the girdle line to a tight-fitting lining. The girdle is a moderately deep-shaped affair of the chiffon cloth, embroidered in the dull green leaf design mentioned, the leaves rising to the top and descending to the lower edge on the deep point of the front.

The skirt has a petticoat effect in front, where the full length flounce of the lace, having a net top as far as the knees and the lower half in lace pattern, forms a wide panel or petticoat. This section is twelve inches wide at the top and widens to twenty at the bottom. It is shirred in fine shirs a half inch apart for some seven or eight inches below the waist line. The lace and leaves of the lower half are brought out in the greens and apricot shades already mentioned, and under the lace is a plain panel of white silk with an accordion plaited chiffon ruffle at the bottom. The sides of the overdress or jupe extend over this panel and are fastened to it six inches back from the extreme edges of the overlapping sides. This jupe is of apricot chiffon, shirred several times at the top and having around its lower and outer edge a seven-inch flounce of the lace headed by a box ruching of apricot pink liberty satin ribbon. The sides overlapping the panel are embroidered on the outside in green leaves and are faced with pale apricot colored liberty satin matching the plaiting on the skirt. This could be easily carried out in chiffon cloth or figured organdie and Lierre lace with plain satin accessories.

An attractive evening gown, also for a famous Southern resort, has just been completed for a young widow. It is of spangled black net over pearl-gray chiffon. The bodice, sleeves, and skirt of the under slip are sunray plaited chiffon, with such extremely full rose ruchings of chiffon set on around the bottom of the round length skirt that thew suggest great gray roses tumbling to pieces. The bodice has V-shaped top, not at all low, yet not high enough for the Dutch neck effect. The sleeves end about two inches below the elbows. There is a deep pointed girdle of dull cloth of silver that holds the plaitings in to the figure for several inches above as well as below the waist line. The heavy black net overdress is spangled in very fine jets that form outlines of large leaves arranged in clusters, like small branches covered with foliage. The top covers the body of the corsage and ends at the opening just below the ruches of white tulle that border it. There are small sleeve caps, not over seven inches deep, that extend over the tops of the arms, and up into which the plaited chiffon is pushed to form small upstanding puffs. The lower edge of these puffs, like all the other edges of the net, are finished by three fine lines of jets. The net overdress of the skirt extends in the back and sides to the tops of the voluminous ruchings, but opens up the front as over a petticoat to a point perhaps twelve inches below the point of the silver girdle. The overdress is cut or built to open up that way and is bordered by a ruffle of the net embroidered in outline with small leaves. This flounce goes all the way around the overdress, and being cut to form a circular section of net has sufficient fullness at its lower edge to be graceful and not cumbersome. In the back the girdle has a chou of the silver gauze and two short pointed ends, one twelve and the other ten inches long; the girdle closes under this, but the bodice closes in the front en surplice, the embroidered net giving the surplice effect, as the plaiting, of course, is invisibly joined straight down the plaits. To wear with this there is a necklace of cut jet balls and coiffure combs to match.

Mrs. James Speyer was at an afternoon function in one of the new triple-flounce skirt effects in a rich shade of sapphire blue chiffon taffeta, brocaded in border effects in small blue velvet roses and foliage, with lover's knots scattered here and there among the roses. The costume was topped by one of the French coats, with skirts in the back only, and these really draped sash ends.

The coat had a surplice effect in the back and wide revers in the front, and all the revers and flounces were bordered at their outer edges with plain blue velvet, probably ribbon set in under the brocaded roses, forming the edges of the chiffon silk.

The skirt had three deep box-plaited flounces, the top of the skirt being close fitting through shirring; the flounces overlapping each other, the lowest of course being the widest. The tops of these flounces were of plain chiffon silk, and the lower two-thirds were heavily brocaded with the tiny blue roses and knots, and under the lower edge of each was laid plain blue velvet some three inches wide.

The coat had a lace stock edged with a fold of blue velvet and the pattern of the lace was outlined very delicately with gold thread and embroidered in tiny, shaded forget-me-nots. The coat fronts had wide, pointed revers, the tops of which extended almost to the sleeves. There was a lace jabot down the centre front of the lace waistcoat or vest, with forget-me-nots embroidered at the sides. From a little below the bust line to the waist in the centre there was a flat section of the lace, a velvet band went straight across the top of this and was caught with rhinestone cabochons. The sides of the coat extended over at the sides, of course, and at the waist line blue velvet ribbon formed a girdle finish to the waistcoat, ending at each side of the exact centre line in points under cabochons.

The back showed a small V at the top, the folds of brocaded silk crossing in surplice style and forming large revers edged at the outside with plain velvet, like those of the front. A few inches above the straight girdle of velvet a band of blue velvet ribbon was fastened on each side, the ends fastened under the revers being curved so that the ribbon slanted down, passed under the arms, and came around to the fronts, ending on each side a little above the girdle under cabochons. The straight band girdle went straight across the back with cabochons, or buckle, in the centre back.

The skirt back was formed of two ends of silk, perhaps sixteen inches long, having plain silk centres, deep borders of brocade roses, these ends being finished at their inner edges and bottoms only with an underlying border of blue velvet. These two ends were draped in plaits at the top, parted a bit in the centre, and were graceful in effect. The sleeves ended just below the elbows, and terminated in lace cuffs edged with plain blue velvet and embroidered at the lower edges with forget-me-nots. The tops of the sleeves were draped, the upper part of each being made up of two draped points, having plain centres, edged with blue velvet. These were draped to show between them at the outside and centre of the arms upward turning, V-shaped sections of the silk, and below these were lace frills and bands of blue velvet, and then the lace cuffs already mentioned.

The hat topping this costume was a large brown velvet chapeau, with a straight brim and moderately high, round crown. A fold of blue silk went around the crown, and two pale-blue ostrich tips were at the left, falling over the side and back, and the bandeau and suggestion of cachepeigne were of pale-brown tulle.

An evening coat Mrs. Speyer wore to the opera on several occasions was a coral red velvet lined with plaited white chiffon over plain satin, and trimmed with Venetian point lace scarfs and sable.

The side fronts were faced with rich yellowish Venetian lace, which showed at the neck, and the deep Capuchin hood was lined with the lace, bordered with sable, and in the back, near the top of the hood, were too small, flat black velvet bows, each held in place by a buckle set with brilliants.

The coat was, of course, one of the huge, full affairs, with enormous sleeves, the sleeves being laid in crosswise in plaits at the inside of the arms above the wrists to give the necessary fullness and pouching to the outside. These were finished with sable bands and deep flounces of Venetian point. In addition passementerie in coral red was used on the sleeves, around the shoulders, and fronts of the wrap.

Mme. Rappold, who sang at the afternoon concert for the benefit of the Seamen's Benefit Society, was in rose pink topped by a black hat. This hat had the high crown and narrow, round brim effect, with black ostrich plumes falling off the back, and black aigrettes rising at the left side. The ostrich plumes went from the left side across the back and drooped at the right. The gown was apparently chiffon cloth, a bright pink, and was princess in outlines, with a short train. It had a stock and shallow V of white lace finished with a narrow puff of rose color, and then an insertion of white lace between it and the body of the robe. The robe was shirred and plaited closely to the figure. The sleeves, formed of scant puffs, ended at the elbows.

Miss Catherine Leverich, who was largely interested in arranging the concert, she being the President of one of the auxiliaries of the society, wore a coat and skirt of green velvet, trimmed with black silk braid and gun-metal buttons. The skirt trailed a little all around, and was trimmed with black silk braid going around the bottom and up the sides and back, and a half-length, half-fitting, single-breasted coat. A single line of the braid went up the centre of the back. Other strips went up and down several seams. There was a row of braid on each side of the front, with a row on each side of crosswise-running ovals of the braid, ending in gun-metal buttons.

The braid was not straight, but formed of long, small ovals. The sleeves were long, trimmed with braid, and her hat was a rather large one in green, trimmed with black ostrich plumes.

Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, one of the patronesses, was present in a black broadcloth skirt, of walking length, and a half-length coat. It was trimmed with straight bands of black silk braid.

At the benefit performance by amateurs at the Berkeley Lyceum, Mrs. Edward Prime wore a black cloth skirt that touched all around. It had plaits and an accordion plaited white chiffon blouse under a little black net coatee spangled with jet. The coat's sleeves came to about the elbow, ending in scallop effect. The top was cut away from the top of the chiffon blouse, and the sections forming the body ran down in tapering panels to the waist line, with no under arm pieces, and below the waist band, and in the back only, were two short, scalloped sections like sash ends, forming the coat's skirts.

Mrs. William Massena Benjamin, who was Miss Charlotte Prime, a daughter of Mrs. Prime by her first husband, and niece of her second husband, was in a really charming costume of pompadour white silk, figured, and with black satin strips, so cut as to form downward turning Vs on the bodice and upward turned Vs on the centre front, back, and sides of the skirt. It was in a one piece effect with elbow sleeves, and was trimmed with six-inch lace ruffles galore. Mrs. Benjamin, who is big and blonde, looked extremely well in it.

Miss Jessica Thompson, who took the part of the Chicago niece in the little playlet, "Six to One; or, The Scapegrace," at this amateur performance, wore one of the most effective frocks. It was scarlet chiffon cloth, with the bodice cut with a Dutch neck, outlined with white lace, the material being shirred around the square neck opening; large puffs formed the elbow sleeves. The skirt was a round length, and made up of three deep flounces, the top one being tucked or plaited in to the figure. The girdle was also scarlet.

Miss Henrietta King, who was the French niece, wore a pale organdy with blue figures in dull shades, the general tone being a faded or Watteau blue. Miss King is exceedingly slim, and the very full skirt was gathered once only at the top, the bottom being tucked. There was a deep girdle of blue silk ribbon with its width all above the waist line, and the bodice itself was gathered very full with a lace stock and yoke, loose V-shaped tab extensions of the yoke hanging over the bodice nearly to the top of the girdle. The sleeves were full, crisp puffs of the organdy, finished with lace bands and ruffles over long white gloves.

The hats and costumes worn by the Misses Virginia Duane and Alice Fellowes in Dobson's "Secrets of the Heart," one of his "Proverbs in Porcelain," were charming. They were of course old-time effects with short skirts, panniers, and wide-brimmed hats with strings. One had a bodice, sleeves, and jupe of mauve silk over a petticoat and V under-bodice of white, and the other was in blue and pink. The large flat hats were pushed back from their foreheads; the mauve chapeau had pinkish mauve roses under the right brim, and long mauve strings hung loose at the sides, the ends being brought carelessly across the front of the robe. The other hat, not so wide at the sides and therefore projecting further over the front, was in pale blue chip with pink roses under the brim and its ends were brought around under the chin and loosely knotted. MARIE WELDON.

Personal and Otherwise.

MRS. NANNIE LANGHORNE SHAW, whose picture appears in the pictorial section, is one of the famous Langhorne sisters, daughters of Chiswell Dabney Langhorne of Mirador, Virginia. About seven years ago she married Robert Gould Shaw, second, of Boston, by whom she had one child—now in her custody—and from whom she procured a divorce about three years ago. Three days later Mr. Shaw married Mrs. Mary Converse of Newton, Mass.

Soon after the divorce Mrs. Shaw went abroad and has since spent most of her time in England, where the outdoor life and sports of her British cousins appealed to her. She is a daring cross country rider, in which sport her fiancé, Mr. Astor, also excels. Mrs. Shaw was the matron of honor at the wedding of Miss Alice Babcock to Henry Rogers Winthrop a few months ago. When Mrs. John Jacob Astor took a house in London for the last season there, Mrs. Shaw spent most of her time with her, she herself having a country cottage for the hunting season.

It is said that Mr. Astor first met his fiancée on shipboard. There were reports of her engagement to Lord Revelstoke, which were denied, and the announcement of her engagement to an American came by cable about three weeks ago, being received by her father, Mr. Langhorne, who, with his youngest daughter, Miss Nora Langhorne, had just returned from a visit to her in England.

Mr. Astor is younger than his fiancée, and will celebrate his twenty-seventh birthday on May 19. His mother, who was Miss Mary Dahlgren Paul of Philadelphia, was a noted beauty of her day. Much notoriety was given an incident occurring at Newport, and the ensuing dispute as to whether Mrs. William Astor, or Mrs. William Waldorf Astor, was the Mrs. Astor, the victory going to Mrs. William Astor. Mrs. William Waldorf Astor did not care in the least to claim the title as Mrs. Astor without the prefix of the Christian name, and William Waldorf was credited with the claim made for his wife. Soon after this the William Waldorf Astors went to London to live; this was in 1890. The four children, Waldorf, Pauline, now Mrs. Spender Clay; John Jacob, and Gwendolyn, were then very young; Gwendolyn died two or three years ago. Mrs. Astor died at Cliveden-on-the-Thames in 1894, and her remains were brought to this country and buried in Trinity Cemetery at Washington Heights in the Astor plot.

Six years ago, and some time after his father had become a British subject, Waldorf Astor formally acknowledged his American citizenship. He is very tall and thin, democratic in his manners, and fond of walking. When over here last November he took pedestrian trips all over the city and thought nothing of walking from the Hotel Netherland, where he had rooms, to the Battery and back.

As it is the custom in the Astor family to leave the bulk of the fortune to the elder son, Waldorf Astor promises to be one of the richest Americans of his time. His father's fortune is estimated at $200,000,000. His brother, John Jacob, named after his grandfather, the uncle of Col. John Jacob Astor, has, like his father, become a British subject, and recently secured a probationary commission in the First Life Guards as Second Lieutenant.

Mrs. Reginald Brooks of this city, who was Miss Phyllis Langhorne, and Mrs. T. Moncure Perkins of Richmond, another of the sisters, were booked to sail yesterday from this port to attend Mrs. Shaw's wedding in April. Mr. Langhorne and other relatives will follow later.

One story told of Mrs. Shaw's independence illustrates her character very well. It was at Narragansett Pier that one stormy day Mrs. Shaw appeared at one of the clubhouses, or other meeting place of the fashionables, wearing a pair of boy's long rubber boots, a much-abbreviated skirt, a coat to match the boots, and a big boy's stormy-weather sombrero.

Mrs. Shaw is most attractive, but not regularly beautiful, and is jolly and companionable to a degree, and is credited with a brilliant wit.

Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, whose picture appears with that of her sister, Mrs. Shaw, was Miss Irene Langhorne. She does not look like Mrs. Shaw, being tall and of much more statuesque type. She is considered a very handsome woman, and has much chic. Since her marriage to Mr. Gibson she has traveled a great deal. When in town during the opera season, she is frequently seen as a guest in a great many parterre boxes, and spends part of each Summer when in this country at Newport.

Mrs. James Laurens Van Alen, who is depicted with her little son in the Pictorial Section, was Miss "Daisy" Post, a daughter of Mrs. William Post. She is one of the most domestic of the young New York matrons, and is devoted to her husband and children. Mrs. Van Alen is a sister of Miss "Spriggy" Post, who married Thomas Howard, and a niece of Mrs. Frederic Vanderbilt. In appearance she is slight and very dark, and has much prettiness of a refined type. Mr. Van Alen, who is several years younger than his wife, is as blonde as she is dark, and is as domestic as his wife. The Van Alens sailed nine days ago for England with Mr. Van Alen's grandmother, Mrs. Astor. In the party were H. Coleman Drayton and Mrs. Drayton, who was Miss Constance Knower. Mr. Van Alen is the only son of James J. Van Alen, and a brother of Miss May Van Alen and Mrs. Robert J. Collier, and a nephew of J. Coleman Drayton.

The Comtesse Jules de Bonvoulier, whose girlish face may be found in the Supplement, is a granddaughter of Mrs. John W. Mackay, and only child of the Princess Stigliano, who was Miss Eva Bryant, a half-sister of Clarence Mackay. The Comtesse, who is not yet nineteen, made her début only about a year ago, and her marriage to Comte Jules was an event of January in Paris. She is an unaffected and attractive little girl, with the small stature of her mother and grandmother. Among her wedding presents were a handsome check from her half-uncle, Clarence Mackay, and a set of superb old Brussels point flounces from Mrs. Clarence Mackay.

* * *

The Countess of Aberdeen recently gave the Irish Women's Temperance Union a novel gift in the way of an address having a cover designed and worked at the Royal Irish School of Art Needlework. It has a white vellum cover lined with St. Patrick's blue poplin. The coronet and initials of the Countess appear in the centre and at each corner is a four-leaved shamrock.

* * *

The Earl and Countess of Sefton, the Earl being the new Master of Horse, are again reappearing in London as entertainers, and have secured the mansion in St. James's Square owned by the late Earl Cowper. Old Sefton House, at the corner of Belgrave Square, was renamed Seaford House after it came into the hands of Lord Howard de Walden. It was in this mansion that the third Earl of Sefton gave gorgeous banquets prepared under the direction of the most noted chef of his generation. These banquets are still remembered by some of the older of London's men about town.

* * *

The Duke of Manchester, who married Miss Helena Zimmerman, has succeeded to the picturesque office of Captain of the Yeoman of the King's Guard. Earl Waldegrave, who had held the appointment for nearly ten years, was the retiring Captain, and was 55 the day he left, while the present incumbent is just entering his thirtieth year. He is the third of his race to hold the position. In the middle of the reign of King Charles II. the Earl of Manchester commanded, and under George II., William, second Duke of Manchester, sixty-seven years later, was the Captain.

AN AMERICAN KING.

SWAN ISLANDS, U. S. A., is the stamp which appears on many letters passing through the Mobile and New Orleans Post Offices, going to or from two tiny islands situated some two hundred and fifty miles south of the western end of Cuba in the Caribbean Sea.

Few people know of their existence, and of the fact that, while not claimed by the United States, they still claim our Government as theirs. Years ago the Pacific Guano Company owned and operated these islands, shipping much phosphate rock, and, as rumor has it, carried on a lucrative business, but, owing to mismanagement or unprofitable speculation, the Pacific Guano Company ceased to exist, and the islands went to a Mr. Adams, formerly a citizen of Boston, and now (shall I say King) of Swan Islands.

With forty laborers trained to do their duties with military precision, with his boats' crews uniformed and drilled to pull a beautiful stroke, he comes very near to being a King in fact. His word is law, and there is no escape from the islands when once hired for a term of years.

King Adams has with him his consort and his Prince, and here they dwell year in and year out, with an occasional break when one of them visits a relative in Brooklyn, or the son takes a trip through the Central or South American States.

A lighthouse is maintained on the islands for the guidance of steamers, in return for which these steamers carry mail and provisions, and occasionally one of the royal family, as supercargo. It is a most happy arrangement for each party.

It was during the Spanish war that an old muzzle-loading cannon was placed in a position commanding the landing, and loaded with shot, old lead, scrap iron, and what-not, and determined to give at least a show of resistance should Spanish ships appear there. Since the Spanish-American war advances have been made to the owners by the naval representative of a growing European nation desiring a foothold and a coaling station in the Caribbean, to buy the islands, but the offers were rejected, and the [illegible] referred to John Hay, then Secretary of State.

It is a lonely life there at best, and one which few Americans would care to live. However, it is of interest, as general information, to know that we have in our possession, and that there is an American King existing.

Society at Home and Abroad

IT has been a dull week. Society has settled down to Lenten routine. It has bidden farewell to the Opera, and even some of the bridge classes have been given up until later in the year. Just now the Easter weddings are being planned. The two last weeks in April will be crowded with nuptial events, and there will be little else in the way of entertainments and events, except the belated meetings of a few of the dancing classes and the much-written-of Assembly at the Astor House.

The set which does so much for the suburban resorts will be in evidence from Easter until June, and coaching and the races and the Meadow Brook Hunt will divide attention until it is time for the seashore. It has been decreed that European sojourns will be brief. The Riviera is at its best in April, when there is little fear of the mistral, and then there is Paris in May and London in June. But many will not wait for the season in the British metropolis. There are rumors that it is not going to be as gay as usual, and that, notwithstanding all that the King will do, the Queen and her daughter will not be seen at any of the large Court functions. The wedding of Princess Ena and the King of Spain takes place in June, but it is more than doubtful if many Americans or even English people will wend their way thither. Madrid is not an agreeable city for a sojourn, and the enthusiasm over the wedding is not of the warmest nature among King Alfonso's subjects.

The Spring will bring two if not three or more weddings of interest to Americans in London. The first will be that of Spencer Eddy of the Russian Legation and Miss Luline Spreckels, at St. George's, Hanover Square. And then may come that of Mrs. Shaw and Waldorf Astor, the eldest son of W. W. Astor. This will depend upon the light in which such an alliance is regarded by the English clergy. American divorces are not always recognized over there, and there is, moreover, a growing prejudice against the remarrying of divorcées. The marriage may therefore take place in Richmond, Va. The father of the bride is now in Richmond, having just returned from abroad. Waldorf Astor was in New York last Autumn. He is the elder of the two sons of W. W. Astor. His mother was the beautiful Miss Mary Paul of Philadelphia. She died about ten years ago. Mrs. Astor's boys were educated abroad at English schools and universities. Waldorf Astor was a favorite at Oxford and the President there of one of the university clubs. He has been destined to take care of the American interests of his father and his marrying a beautiful and popular young American woman is quite in accord with the plans arranged for him.

It is just about a dozen years ago that at the last Patriarchs' of the Winter the cotillion was led by Franklin Bartlett, dancing with the toast of the season, the charming Miss Langhorne of Richmond. The Langhorne sisters were educated at Miss Daniels's school in their native city, and they had for schoolmates the younger Misses Robinson of Baltimore, the Misses Scott of Westchester, and Miss Ingraham of this city. It was Miss Irene Langhorne who made her New York début in the Winter of 1894. She was afterward married to Charles Dana Gibson, the artist. Her sisters were Mrs. Shaw, who is to marry Mr. Astor, and Mrs. Reginald Brooks, who was Miss Phyllis Langhorne, the youngest of these three sisters, who are as famous for their beauty and charm as were the celebrated Misses Gunning in their day. Never have two American women created such a furor in London society as did Mrs. John Jacob Astor and Mrs. Shaw last Summer. The success of other young matrons paled before their triumphs. Mrs. Shaw was reported to have a dozen suitors, among whom was mentioned Lord Revelstoke, the bachelor head of the Baring family.

The third wedding will be that of Miss Cavendish Bentinck, one of the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Cavendish Bentinck, to John Ford, a well-known figure in English politics. The daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Cavendish Bentinck, unlike those of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, their first cousins, are not twins. There are about two years between them. Their mother and Mrs. Ogden Mills, however, were twins and great belles in London and New York when they were young girls. Mrs. Ogden Mills and the Misses Mills will go abroad earlier this year in order to be present at the wedding, which is to take place in June. Miss May Bentinck, the elder sister, is also said to be engaged to the younger son of a peer. The Misses Bentinck were in this country three years ago, and were the guests of their grandmother, Mrs. Maturin Livingston, and of Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills. Miss May Bentinck has a delightful voice and has sung in drawing rooms and in private concerts.

Mrs. Astor sailed last Saturday. Mrs. John Jacob Astor is at Aiken. Should Mrs. Shaw and Waldorf Astor be married in April in London, Mrs. Astor will probably sail to be present at the nuptials. She will, in any case, be in London this Summer. The elder Mrs. Astor took quite an entourage with her. Among her relatives on the same ship were Mr. and Mrs. J. Laurens Van Alen and Mr. and Mrs. Drayton. Each ship sailing last week had many well-known people aboard. The trend of travel is all toward Italy. The Florida season has been the dullest in years. Palm Beach closes in a fortnight, and New York was never so poorly represented in point of numbers. August Belmont returned last week, and Dr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb and their party left on Wednesday. Mrs. Webb and Mrs. Pulitzer are in town, and on Thursday the latter will appear in the tableaus arranged for the benefit of the great hospital on Stuyvesant Square. Mrs. Pembroke Jones and Miss Jones paid a flying trip to Palm Beach, and here and there during the season were a few New Yorkers. There were no large entertainments. On the other hand, the West Indies were much favored. Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who were expected at Palm Beach but did not visit it, put the cachet on Havana. New Yorkers have been plentiful in Bermuda and Jamaica, and many in yachts and in steamships made the tour of the many tropical islands in the Caribbean Sea.

The audiences at the Opera were large and enthusiastic and the "Hansel und Gretel" performance was a gala occasion. The appointment of Rawlins Cottenet to be a Director of the Metropolitan Opera House is an excellent one. Mr. Cottenet is one of the best amateur musicians in New York. He plays the piano and understands music thoroughly, has studied abroad, and is in every way a valuable acquisition. He comes of an old New York family, which is one of the first in the history of the promotion of the love of music in America. His aunt, Mrs. William Schermerhorn, and her parents before her, were patrons of the Opera and of artists and musicians. Some most delightful concerts have been given in the old Schermerhorn house on Twenty-third Street, which is doomed now to disappear. It was one of the first private residences to have a music room, and Mrs. Schermerhorn had orchestral recitals there long before other fashionable matrons took up the fad. Mr. Cottenet and his sister, Miss Cottenet, have been familiar figures in the orchestra stalls of the Opera. They live a part of the year at Hempstead. Mr. Cottenet devotes himself to outdoor life, hunting, and also to the culture of flowers, and at one time entered into the business of a florist. An older brother was killed twelve years ago at one of the early meets of the Meadow Brook hounds. Mr. Cottenet is unmarried.

Mrs. Bruce Ismay sailed on Thursday for Europe, after a round of dinners, luncheons, receptions, and bridge parties in her honor. Mr. and Mrs. Schieffelin, her parents, gave an entertainment for her on Wednesday. Mrs. Valentine Blacque also sailed. During her visit here she was the recipient of much hospitality. Miss Adelina Moller gave her a large dinner and other friends entertained her. She was one of the members of a party last Summer which went on a motoring tour through Europe. Mrs. C. C. Cuyler, then Mrs. James Brown Lord, was another, and for a time Mrs. Foxhall Keene joined them. Valentine Blacque has been in Paris and Mrs. Blacque goes over to be with him. At present he is making much success with the binding of books, an art and fad much in vogue on the other side. Mr. Blacque, who is a Turk by descent, was for years a well-known figure in New York society. His father was Blacque Bey. Vale Blacque, as he is known, was a collector of rare books, an art connoisseur, and a musician. He composed a mass which was sung at the Church of St. Francis Xavier, and a number of songs. Mrs. Blacque was Miss Kate Read. Both she and her husband have a wonderful gift as raconteurs.

This week there will be a wedding in town. On Tuesday Miss Evelyn Baker Schley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grant B. Schley will be married to Max Howell Behr, at the home of her parents, 845 Fifth Avenue. The choristers from Grace Church will sing and there will be appropriate instrumental music by the Dannreuther Quartet. Miss Margarette Hail Behr will be maid of honor and the Misses Oliver Schley, cousin of the bride; Katherine Lefens, Aileen Lawson, and Edith Rossiter will be among the bridesmaids. Herman Hall Behr will be the best man and the ushers Evander H. Schley, Archibald Reid, Walter Stillman, Joseph Simmons, Joseph Washington, Carl Behr, and Frederick Hall Behr.

On Wednesday afternoon will be the musicale for the benefit of the Chinatown Rescue Settlement for Girls at the Waldorf-Astoria. It will take place at 3:30 o'clock. Through the courtesy of Edward J. de Coppet the Flonzaley Quartet will play. Tickets are to be obtained from Mrs. Edward McVickar, 112 East Fifty-sixth Street, or from Miss A. B. Boardman, Miss Amelia Stephens, Miss Harriett Robb, Mrs. C. L. Boardman, Mrs. Augustus F. King, Mrs. Lawrence Greer, Miss Florence Warner, and others.

And then on Thursday come the famous tableaus for the benefit of the Lying-In Hospital in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria. Mrs. F. McNeil Bacon, Jr., and Ernest Perrin will act in a lever de rideau, "La Soirée du Seize," and there will be also be music by the New York Symphony Club, which is composed of well-known fashionable amateurs. The tableaus, posed by Stanford White, will follow. In these there will appear a number of the beautiful young matrons and débutantes in New York society. The occasion will be undoubtedly most brilliant. In fact, there has been but little else talked of during Lent.

For those who have not cared for music there have been the picture sales. The Brandus sales especially resembled a fashionable function, and each evening the gathering was most distinctive, even for this time of the year. The dreadful weather of Thursday evening kept many away from the "executors' sale." Among those whose pictures were disposed of was Mrs. Lee Haggin, who is a daughter-in-law of James B. Haggin. She is the widow of Ben Ali Haggin, and she has two sons, Ben Ali, who is an artist and who married Miss Faith Robinson, and Louis Haggin. Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ali Haggin have had some teas this Winter and Mr. Haggin has exhibited his portraits, among them being one of Miss Eva Courtlandt Palmer. To-morrow evening many of the friends of Shafter Howard will assist at the premier of his extravaganza, "His Majesty," at the Majestic Theatre. Mr. Howard is a Harvard man, from San Francisco. He married Miss Mary Hunter of Newport. He is identified with the Newport colony. His classmates in Harvard, of whom Amos French is one, are preparing to give him a rousing welcome.

Society has been welcoming newcomers to the ranks. Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman are receiving congratulations on the birth of a son, the third in their family. Mrs. Harriman has been in town this Winter, having closed her house at White Plains. From abroad comes the announcement of the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. William Harvey Tew. Mrs. Tew was Miss Eleanor Scott, daughter of Judge Francis Scott. From Manila John D. Crimmins, Sr., has received the news that Mr. and Mrs. Martin D. Crimmins have a son. Mr. and Mrs. Crimmins were married four years ago in California.

Friday will be the date of the bal masque given by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Steinway at Steinway Hall. March 22 and 23 are Mi-Carême, and on these evenings society can return for a few hours to the delights of the carnival season. A number of dinners have been arranged, and with the tableaus on Thursday afternoon there will be no lack of gayety, although the season is a thing of the past.

* * *

Easter Sunday falls on April 15, now less than a month off. Easter Monday will see the initial trip of Alfred Vanderbilt's and Robert Gerry's coach to Ardsley and return, starting, as in former years, from the Holland House. On Wednesday of Easter week comes the fancy dress Assembly ball at the Astor House; on Thursday the last Neighborhood Cotillion, and on Friday the Junior Cotillion. The former of these dances will be held at Dodworth's and the latter at Delmonico's. The Saturday Evening will also have an Easter dance. Other entertainments of that kind will be for the younger set, who will assemble en masse for the holidays.

* * *

The recent bad weather has put off the Spring season for riding to hounds, as the roads are in a boggy condition. The Aiken set will remain at their Southern retreat until after Easter. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney have now one of the largest house parties there. As the Florida resorts are closing, the last weeks of March and the first of April will see the Spring season at the Hot Springs of Virginia. Atlantic City will be another favorite resort, and Lakewood does not close until after the Easter holidays. In fact, the great Spring religious festival is each year celebrated more and more out of town. Houses are opened at Lenox, and the Adirondacks are another region for the assembling of house parties. Tuxedo is with the fashionable world always. The entertaining has been continuous there, and each Friday to Monday sees many gatherings both at the clubhouse and the various villas. James Henry Smith has been giving house parties each week, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Martier will pass a part of the Spring at Tuxedo, and there are among the other hostesses Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Lorillard, who remain in this country until after the Belmont Park races; Mr. and Mrs. Tams and Miss Cruger, Mr. and Mrs. Kane and the Misses Kane, and all the other well-known cottagers.

* * *

The week end has also been gay in Westchester. The Country Club has lost none of its old-time reputation for being a jolly place to pass the Sunday, and now that every one motors, it is one of the favorite resorts in that part of the country. Mrs. Louis Boissevain, who has been absent this Winter, has returned to her home at Mount Kisco. She arrived on Thursday from Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Livermore had planned to entertain at their new place this Spring, but the house was burned to the ground last week. Mr. and Mrs. Livermore moved up in the vicinity of Katonah last Summer, and the Baroness Seillière was their guest until after Christmas. Col. and Mrs. Jay will be at their house in Katonah during the early Spring. Mrs. Jay's sister, Mrs. Richard Henderson, has been visiting her. Mr. and Mrs. Henderson live in Cheshire, England. Mrs. Henderson was Miss Hildegarde Oelrichs.

On Easter Monday Miss Ella de Ruyter, daughter of the late John de Ruyter and a sister of Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell, will be married to Augustus Drum Porter. The arrangements for the wedding have not been completed. On Tuesday, April 17, Miss Margaret Hammond, sister of John Henry Hammond, who married Miss Sloane, and Louis Starr, Jr., will have their wedding. This will take place at St. Thomas's Church. On the same day Miss May Patterson, daughter of Mrs. Wilson Patterson, will be married to Malcolm Fay. Louis Starr comes from Philadelphia, and Miss Hammond is the youngest daughter of the late Gen. John Henry Hammond of Kentucky. Miss Hammond has lived in St. Paul since she was quite a child. One of her sisters married a son of Wayne MacVeagh of Pennsylvania. Another sister is Mrs. Burnside Foster. Louis Starr, Jr., is the son of Dr. Louis Starr of Philadelphia. His mother was Miss Parrish of New York.

There will be a number of weddings on Easter Wednesday. In Providence Miss Virginia Gammell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ives Gammell, will marry Harry Parsons Cross. Miss Gammell is related to the Hon. Mrs. Herbert and Mrs. T. Shaw Safe. The names of the ushers and bridesmaids at two of the Easter Wednesday weddings in town have already been given. These are the marriage of Miss Catherine A. Cossit Dodge, daughter of Mrs. George Egleston Dodge, and John Shillito Rogers, at the Brick Presbyterian Church, and that of Miss Estha Tomlinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Canfield Tomlinson, and Clarence P. Wyckoff at St. Thomas's Church. On Thursday of the same week, Miss Alice C. Adenaw, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius K. Adenaw, will be married to Martin Phillips Parks at Calvary Church. Mr. Parks is the son of the Rev. Dr. J. Lewis Parks of Calvary Church and the nephew of the Rev. Dr. Leighton Parks of St. Bartholomew's. J. Waring Parks will be his brother's best man, and the ushers J. Lewis Parks, Jr., Lawrason Riggs, Charles T. Payne, William Constable, J. Percy Remington of Philadelphia, and Henry E. Montgomery and Francis D. Bartow of South Orange. Mrs. Arthur P. F. Adenaw will be matron of honor and the bridesmaids the Misses Katherine Jewett, Evelyn King, Georgiana Maybry Parks, Alice Blacknell, and Miss Sanford and Miss Alice Smith of Philadelphia.

Now is the time to be looking for the announcement of Spring engagements. In June there are to be two town weddings and there is a whisper of a third. Arthur Burden and Miss Cynthia Roche will be married in the month of roses and Miss Iselin and Mr. Livermore will have their wedding, according to present plans, about the same time. Among the engagements announced was that of Miss Gitty Remsen Voorhees, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Voorhees of Morristown, N. J., to Louis Francis Eaton of Santa Barbara, Cal. Last week Mr. and Mrs. Brander Matthews announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edith Brander Matthews, to Nelson Macy. Brander Matthews is the well-known professor of Columbia College, essayist and novelist. He comes from an old Southern family and his mother was a Miss Brander. The Matthews lived on Fifth Avenue in a handsome residence some years ago. Mr. Matthews's father was a banker. One of his sisters was the wife of Judge Barlow. She died recently. Another is unmarried. Miss Edith Matthews has written several books for children and a number of magazine articles. The engagement has also been announced of Miss Helen S. Mackay Smith, daughter of the Right Rev. and Mrs. Alexander Mackay Smith of Philadelphia, to Charles Lester Marlett of Washington. Mr. Marlett is the First Assistant of the National Bureau of Entomology. The wedding will take place next Summer at the villa of Bishop Mackay Smith, at Mount Desert.

Mr. and Mrs. Clinch Smith sailed for Europe on Thursday. Mrs. Clinch Smith, during her short visit to this country, passed most of her time in Chicago with her mother, Mrs. Barnes. Mr. and Mrs. Hollis Hunnewell sailed last week for the West Indies. Mrs. Clarence C. Rice and her daughter, Miss Gladys Rice, are booked to sail for Sicily on April 3. Mrs. Charles H. Marshall and Miss Marshall have gone to England. They will make a short visit to the Riviera and the Continent. Miss Marshall is to be a débutante of Winter after next. Mrs. John R. Harris and Mr. and Mrs. Leland Langley (Miss Harris) went abroad last week. They will tour on their motor car through Italy. On Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Karrick Riggs sailed for Havre. They spend the Spring in France. Mrs. Griswold Gray, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. James A. Burden, was a passenger on the same ship. Mrs. Gray was ill in the early part of the season, but has recovered her health. Mrs. Reeve Merritt was one of those who went abroad on Thursday. She will be absent the greater part of the Summer. Mr. and Mrs. Warner M. Leeds, Mrs. H. Victor Newcomb, and Mr. and Mrs. Gustave H. Schiff were passengers on the same ship.

Mr. and Mrs. John R. Drexel are to sail early next month and so are Dr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb. Mr. and Mrs. Speyer go to their country seat on the Hudson in May and they will sail in June.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. George Vanderbilt continue to entertain house parties at Biltmore. Among their recent guests were Mr. and Mrs. Goodhue Livingston. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Vanderbilt have a house party at Oakland over the week-end. One of the latest lettings at Newport is the Eldridge villa at Ochre Point. Mr. and Mrs. George Rose of Hempstead, who had it last year, have taken it for another season.

* * *

Eugene Higgins has a party on the Varuna, and on Thursday they were at Marseilles. From there they go to Gibraltar. David Bishop's yacht is also in Southern seas and the Nahma is at Cannes, where this week Mrs. Goelet, Mrs. Vanderbilt, and Miss Vanderbilt will start out on a Spring cruise.

* * *

At Cannes there have not been many Americans. Lady Cheylesmore has been entertaining a great deal. She has her niece, Miss Pauline French, with her. Miss Moreton Frewen, whose mother was a Miss Jerome of New York, is another of the American belles who have received much attention. The engagement of Miss McCarty, whose mother was a New York woman, to Count Marius de Gallifet, has been one of the events at Pau. The young couple will be married shortly after Easter. At Taormina are Lady Essex and her daughters and Mr. Brach Grant. Mrs. Anthony Drexel has returned from Berlin and has joined her husband at Cannes.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Ronalds are to be in New York this week. They have been in Washington, and were entertained at a number of dinners there. Mrs. Ronalds, the mother of Reginald Ronalds, celebrated the occasion of his wedding by a large dinner in London. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson gave a banquet at Monte Carlo on the occasion of the wedding of Nicholas Longworth and Miss Roosevelt. London remains dull. Lady Cooper, a relative of James Henry Smith, gave a small dance at her house on March 8.

* * *

Mrs. Roosevelt, wife of the President, was the guest of Mrs. James Roosevelt last week. She arrived in New York for the "Haensel und Gretel" performance on Thursday. She has returned to Washington. Mrs. Grover Cleveland was the guest one night last week at the opera of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Satterlee. Mr. and Mrs. Longworth went to Cincinnati on Friday.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. August Belmont, Jr., return this week from their wedding tour. They will be the guests of August Belmont, Sr. Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont have been in town a few days, but returned yesterday to Washington. They have taken their Washington house for another season.

* * *

Mrs. George Gould and her youngest daughter are doing well, and Miss Marjorie is recovering rapidly from the measles. Miss Pauline Townsend, who went on to Erie, Penn., to the wedding of her cousin, Miss Thora Strong, and Reginald Ronalds, was also taken with the measles and has just returned to Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. George Gould will go from their Fifth Avenue house to Lakewood. Their plans for the Summer are not arranged, but they will wait until after the Columbia examinations.

The various bridge classes—all but the Tuesday afternoon, which does not play during Lent—are in full force, and the few weeks left of Lent will be devoted to charitable entertainments and this present fad, which has become popular all over the United States. One of the fashionable classes meets every Saturday, and has among its members Mrs. George Schieffelin, Mrs. William Rhinelander, Mrs. Amsinck, and others. The meeting last evening was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Lester del Garcia, 23 East Sixty-first Street.

* * *

In the necrology of the week there is the name of Augustus F. Ireland, the fifth child of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Ireland, who lived on Washington Square. His mother was a Miss Pell, and he was a great-great-grandson of Judge Duane, the first Mayor of New York. Mr. Ireland was unmarried, and a member of the Union, New York Athletic, and other clubs. He was graduated at Yale in 1897. One of his brothers, J. de Courcy Ireland, married Miss Davis. Among his sisters are Mrs. Percy Madeira and Mrs. Wing.

THE SOCIAL WHIRL.

IT has been erroneously announced that the Eclectic Club will give a concert for Maurice Warner, the violinist. At a meeting of the Eclectic on Wednesday it was decided to increase the philanthropic fund by subscriptions from the members, and five of the members subscribed $25 apiece on the spot. The boy is a protégé of this club and will undoubtedly be assisted, but there will be no concert under its auspices. The members of the Philanthropic Committee are Mesdames Robert Wood Johnson, Frederick H. Lane, Charles F. Terhune, John F. Mately, Joseph Augustine Cozzino, and Mrs. Leonard Hill, Chairman.

At the election of officers, held on Monday, of the New York Chapter United Daughters of the Confederacy, the following were elected: Mrs. James Henry Parker, President; Mrs. Pauline Du Bose, First Vice President; Mrs. Richard Walter Jones, Second Vice President; Mrs. W. M. Klein, Recording Secretary; Mrs. William Ward Childs, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Avery Lamb, Treasurer; Mrs. Le Roy Broun, Registrar, and Mrs. Miles Collier, Historian. There are about four hundred members in this chapter, which is a most flourishing one.

Mrs. Montgomery Donaldson, 309 West Eighty-fifth Street, will receive on Wednesdays until the close of the season.

Mrs. Lawrence Barnum and her daughter of the Ansonia will sail for Europe on Tuesday, May 15. They will spend the greater part of the Summer abroad.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Goldenberg, who have recently returned from Washington to their apartments in the Ansonia, entertained a number of guests a short time ago with bridge. The players were Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Schwab, Mr. and Mrs. S. Herbert, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Smythe, and Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Mortimer. Those who won prizes were Mrs. Herbert, Mrs. Schwab, and Mrs. Mortimer. Mrs. Goldenberg lately resigned the position of Secretary of the Toy Spaniel Club of America, but her resignation was not accepted, and she will serve in the capacity of Honorary Secretary. She and Mr. Goldenberg expect to sail for Europe on Wednesday, March 28, on the Cedric. They will take their auto with them and tour England and France in it. After spending the Summer months in Aix-Le-Bain they will return to their country home, Nell-Cote-on-the-Hudson, in the Fall.

Albert Sondime will sail for Europe on Thursday, June 14, on the Deutschland. He will spend the Summer in France and Germany.

One of the prettiest receptions of the season was that given by the Woman's Republican Association, State of New York, on Monday afternoon in the palm Room of the Peverly, 2,128 Broadway. There were about three hundred women present. The room was decorated with Chinese lanterns and hundreds of small electric bulbs hidden among the palms. A number of young girls assisted in serving the refreshments. The entire management of the affair was left to Mrs. William Grant Brown and Mrs. Charles Conrad Ruthrauff. The association is making arrangements for a luncheon to be given on Tuesday, April 27, in Delmonico's. The President, Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, was assisted in receiving by Mesdames Frank B. Church, Cornelia S. Robinson, Augustine J. Wilson, Charles W. Fisk, Charles Lloyd, J. Mortimer Bell, E. W. Hatch, Andrew J. Perry, Clarence Burns, William Cummings Story, R. A. Benedict, Jane Pierce, Helena Secor Tonjes, and the Misses Helen Varick Boswell, Jennie E. Rodell, and Mildred Reid.

The Monday Bridge Club, organized by Mrs. William Smith Young, held the last meeting with Mrs. John Williams of the Marie Antoinette. There are thirty-two members in the club. The next meeting will take place to-morrow in the apartments of Mrs. Foster Coates, also of the Marie Antoinette.

Some of those interested in the American Point Euchre which will be given in the Waldorf on Tuesday evening for the benefit of Mrs. Fish's School for Crippled Children are Mesdames J. J. Crowell, W. S. Young, E. D. Whaley, Franklin Duryea, Foster Coates, J. D. Delbridge, B. A. Bullock, F. K. Taylor, F. A. Baggs, W. H. J. Austin, P. B. La Roche, F. J. Bledgett, William Bracken, and Nelson Pettison. There will be several hundred subscribers, and it is expected that this euchre will be one of the prettiest and most successful of the season.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Offerman of West Seventy-second Street have just returned to town after a few weeks spent in Atlantic City, where Mrs. Offerman has been recuperating after an attack of the grip. They will sail for Europe on Tuesday, April 17, on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse.

Mrs. Edward Everett Spencer opened her home, 244 West Seventy-fifth Street, on Friday evening for a reception to the National Society of Ohio Women, of which Mrs. Charles Conrad Ruthrauff is President.

The arrangements for a luncheon to be given on Wednesday in the Hotel Astor in honor of Mrs. William Cummings Story, were made on Friday at the meeting of the Manhattan Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Mrs. Story is Regent of that chapter. The guests of honor at the meeting and reception were Mrs. Samuel Verplanck Peekskill and Mrs. John Cunningham Hazen.

There will be a concert for the benefit of the New York Home for Convalescents in the Buckingham Hotel on Wednesday at 3 o'clock. Some of those interested are the President, Miss Mary Van Buren Vanderpoel, Mrs. Margaret P. Buchanan, Mrs. M. McKinnon, Mrs. James W. Randall, Mrs. Virgil P. Humason, Miss Helen D. Nelson, Mrs. Charles R. Treat, and Mrs. Bradford Rhodes. Mrs. Zilpa Barnes-Wood will have charge of the programme, which will include selections by Miss Anna Jewell, Miss Nicola Thomas, Miss Irene Artman, Mrs. May Nevins Smith, and William Herbert.

Yesterday there was a reception of the Mount Holyoke Alumnae Association of New York in the home of Mrs. Robert M. Vermilye, 34 Gramercy Park. The guest of honor was Miss Mary E. Wooley, President of the college.

Mrs. A. C. Bage, 65 Central Park West, will be the next hostess of the Players' Euchre Club. The last meeting was held with Mrs. B. May, 135 West Seventieth Street on Wednesday. Some of the members are Mesdames Philip B. La Roche, C. E. Johnson, W. H. Seaich, L. R. Gomperts, Richard Roderiguez, C. M. Russell, S. B. Smith, Richard Elliott, W. R. Bracken, A. L. Erlanger, Halbert Houghton, C. E. Freet, George Bermann, M. A. Wright, H. K. Adams, R. A. Farrelly, Ira McCormack, C. H. Emerson, G. S. Whitson, C. M. Cowtin, Walter Burns, Wilbour Molyneaux, C. H. Randall, N. A. Pattison, C. E. Dabb, Anthony Wilkins, Montgomery Niaze, B. M. Fellows, W. J. Kennedy, Charles Wetherbee, and Leonard Hill, the organizer.

Despite the raging storm all of the forty-two invited guests were present at the bridge party given by Mrs. Frank Lewis Sheldon, 315 West Seventy-seventh Street, on Thursday evening. The house was beautifully decorated with roses and ferns, and a dainty luncheon followed the game.

The annual luncheon of the Portia Club will be given on Saturday in Delmonico's. It will be preceded by a reception at which the President, Mrs. Harriette M. Johnston-Wood, assisted by Miss Elizabeth Grant and Miss Evelyn Van Patten Holden, will receive. Mrs. Eleanor B. Glolau, 113 West Seventy-fifth Street, is Chairman of the Entertainment Committee. Some of the guests of honor who will address the club will be Mrs. Carrie C. Catt, Miss Laura D. Gill, Miss Helen K. Hoy, John Woodward, A. T. Clearwater, and G. D. B. Hasbrouck.

There are three bodies of Republican women in this city, all actively interested in up-to-date affairs of State and city, and all giving luncheons and holding meetings every month. The Woman's Republican State Association has a membership of about 500. The Woman's Republican Club of New York City is composed of 100 ladies, and in no way conflicts or is connected with the other two. The West End Woman's Republican Association is twelve years old, and meets every week. The President is Mrs. Helena Secor Tonjes. The President of the two other organizations, although they are separate and distinct, is Mrs. James Griswold Wentz. The Ways and Means Committee of the West End contingent deserve credit for the delightful musical programme which they prepared for the musicale and dance, given on Wednesday evening in the Hotel Marseilles. Mrs. Stanley I. Otis and Mrs. George A. Varney were the Chairmen of the committee.

The Colonial Chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, met on Monday at the home of the Regent, Mrs. William H. Hotchkin, 200 Riverside Drive. There was an address by Miss Margaret E. Henry of Maryville College, Tennessee, on "The Life of the Tennessee Mountaineers." The Chapter has decided to establish a scholarship in Maryville College for the education of mountain girls of Revolutionary ancestry. Some of the guests present at this meeting and tea were Mrs. D. Phoenix Ingraham, President General; Mrs. Joseph J. Corey, Registrar General; Mrs. John Howard Abeel, Regent of New York Society; Mrs. Zeb Mayhew, State Recording Secretary; Mrs. Axel O. Ihlsing, Mrs. William F. Coxford, Mrs. Herbert L. Joeckel, and Miss Linn. The New York State Society is arranging for the placing of a tablet on the site of the old forge, near Tuxedo Park, where the chain stretched across the Hudson in 1777 was made. Mrs. Mayhew, Mrs. Hotchkin, and Mrs. Helfer have charge of the committee.

Mrs. James Henry Parker, 18 East Sixty-ninth Street, receives informally on Fridays during the season. She was assisted by Mrs. Alfred W. Cochrane and Mr. R. L. Coleman on Friday, and will have Mrs. Charles Goldsborough with her next Friday. Mrs. Parker's at-homes are attended not only by the hosts of Southern women who make their home in this city, but by numbers of west side club and society women, among whom she is popular.

The Vassar Students' Aid Society has completed arrangements for the annual benefit, to be given on Monday, April 2, in the Hudson Theatre. There are about fifty ladies at work, under the direction of Mrs. Louis H. Allen, 501 West 120th Street, President of the society. Some of these are Mesdames Louis Gutman, Charles E. Porter, O. D. M. Baker, Frederic Swift, Herman Meyer, K. Imanishi, Emma White, George Fisher, Charlton Wallace, and Woolsey Shepherd. The performance will be under the patronage of Mesdames J. J. Amory, R. Aral, Sidney Borg, William Reynolds Brown, Henry Clarke Coe, John B. Clark, George E. Dodge, Frank Scott Gerrish, Frederick Nathan, Mortimer L. Schiff, John Martin Shaw, J. Hood Wright, Henry Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. John Philip Sousa, and Justice and Mrs. Vernon M. Davis.

Some of those present and the reception given recently by Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Hyneman, 58 West Fifty-seventh Street, were Signor and Signora Caruso, Dr. and Mrs. Chichester, Mrs. John Drew, Miss Drew, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Jerome, Mr. and Mrs. George Jermain Brown, Dr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Clarke, and Mr. and Mrs. George Glen Newell.

There will be a meeting of the Lenox Whist Club to-morrow in the home of Mrs. Herbert Kelly, one of the Brooklyn members. Mrs. John Kurrus, 463 Lenox Avenue, is President of the club. Some of the members are Mesdames William Bartlett, Henry P. Connor, Anson Cowles, Robert Dyas, John P. Ogden, James Slater, Louis Somerville, Walter Janvier, and William Wentz.

Mrs. Thomas W. Ring, 342 West Eighty-fifth Street, gave her last at home for the season on Friday afternoon.

Mrs. J. Theodore Odell, 80 Madison Avenue, has just returned from a trip South, where she visited Fort Monroe and Old Point Comfort.

Mrs. William F. Osborne will give two more informal teas this season in her apartments in the Beresford, Central Park West and Eighty-first Street. The first one will take place on Thursday, the second on March 29.

On Friday morning there was a meeting of the Woman's Advisory Board of the Students' Club in the residence of Mrs. F. A. Haim, 165 West Fifty-eighth Street. There were addresses by D. B. St. John Roosa, M. D., LL. D., and John H. McCracken, Ph. D. The members of the board are Mesdames Sarah L. Hurtt, John Sinclair, George Henry Fox, J. Fred Talcot, Orlando B. Potter, and Miss Agnew. Some of the active and associate members are Mesdames S. B. Brownell, Francis Brown, Joseph D. Bryant, K. Demarest Bulkley, C. H. Burchard, C. E. Cady, H. C. Coe, H. L. Crawford, F. W. Crocker, G. W. Jarman, J. Parmley, G. P. Slade, A. A. Smith, W. H. Wolverton, E. H. Weatherbee, Agnew, Cauldwell, Gould, Herrick, Ivison, Kelsey, Livingston, Low, Rockefeller, Searle, Trull, MacCracken, G. F. Shrady, and J. R. Stevenson.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Sutro and Mrs. Sutro's aunt, Mrs. William Martin, are spending two weeks in Atlantic City.

The bridge class started in the late Fall for the benefit of Mrs. Erlanger's School for Crippled Children has been very successful. There are forty-two members, and each meeting finds a number of friends who drop in for a game or a lesson on some point with which they are unfamiliar. The class has about $425 in the treasury at present. The meetings are held in the Nevada on Thursday mornings.

MARCH 1906

THE WORLD OF ART AND ARTISTS

The Free Art League

Artists Petition Congress to Remove a Duty Contrary to Public Advantage.

IT is a remarkable document which threescore architects, sculptors, and painters have signed, this petition to the Senate and House of Representatives to allow art to go free of duty. We wish to point out, they say, that ours is the only important country which for purposes of taxation proceeds upon the theory that works of art are a luxury. "We believe that they should be regarded as educational rather than as luxuries, and that they are among the greatest of civilizing forces, constantly diffusing refinement and culture, and that a tax upon them violates the sound principle of taxation, inasmuch as it is a tax upon education."

On the 20th of last month Mr. William Alden Smith introduced a bill in the House to amend the tariff by putting works of art on the free list; it was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means and ordered to be printed. That is the fate of all the bills providing relief from the disgraceful condition of affairs regarding the tax on art; they are received in silence and handed over to the proper burial committee, who drop them gently in their little graves and carefully avoid encouraging native art by asking that a monument be erected over their remains.

There are signs, however, that this contemptuous treatment may cease. The American Free Art League, with members of its Executive Committee in Chicago, Boston, St. Louis, Philadelphia and New York, intends to keep the subject before Congress. The organizing Secretary, Mr. Myron E. Pierce of Boston, believes that Congress is by no means so impervious to argument as has been supposed, and calls on every one who has the credit and well-being of the country at heart to help the cause by letters to Senators and Representatives, by letters to the papers, by addresses and such other means as may be available.

The bill introduced by William Alden Smith provides that the tax shall remain on mechanical productions in statuary and such paintings as are made wholly or in part by stenciling or other mechanical process. Etchings and engravings to be free of duty are only those printed by hand from blocks etched or engraved with hand tools, not such as are printed from plates, or blocks etched or engraved by photo-chemical processes. Removal of the duty will therefore interfere in no way with the trades, but simply free the work of professional artists, sculptors, etchers and engravers, painters in oil, mineral, water or other colors, pastels, and makers of original drawings and sketches.

With regard to old pictures and other objects the bill fixes on the year 1800, thus: "Objects of art of ornamental character or educational character or educational value which shall have been produced at any period prior to the year 1800"—the purpose being to allow free entry of old articles which cannot be regarded as competing in any manner with modern things. This is in the interest of museums which are chiefly supplied by gifts from private collectors, who, if this bill should be carried through, would bring over objects very valuable to students of art and history and in due course present them.

At present a sculptor or painter who has to design a monument or picture requiring old and ancient figures is so much at a loss for material for study that he is compelled to visit Europe, where he finds abundant examples in the public museums. Usually he settles down there, and after making his sketches employs European models and assistants, spending a large part of the money of his commission abroad. By removing the duty on art works produced before A. D. 1800 we shall encourage the importation of materials of this kind needed by our artists, and gradually remove the chief cause for the constant flitting of our artists to the other side of the Atlantic. Of course the Congress which placed the tax on art knew nothing of this phase of the question, but the present Congress has no such excuse, and ought in fairness to rectify the mistakes of the past.

The wider aspect of the educational side of free art might well appeal to every one who is not bound hand and foot in the meshes of party politics. The artists in their petition to Congress note that more than half of the foreign works of art in our public museums have been compelled to pay duty, in spite of the exception favoring objects directly imported for the museum, and hold that the tax acts as a constant force to hamper the growth of our public collections. And they add: "We deprecate the exclusion of the art of the Old World, as we consider its influence of the utmost importance in creating a public appreciation of the fine arts, and we realize that the artists' welfare depends upon this." They are speaking for themselves and for the people in so far as their own work helps to educate the people. But there is a great educational power in works of art for the young and for citizens who are neither artists nor art lovers in the sense of collecting works of art. It is they whom we see thronging the museums and art galleries, attracted by something to look at and perhaps vaguely to enjoy. They seem inattentive and superficial to the earnest curators who are hoping to guide students of art by means of objects on which large sums of money and infinite care have been bestowed. True, for this class of visitors the results are not immediate. They are merely forming a habit of looking at works of art.

Some day, however, the visits tell. Here and there a boy or girl begins to notice the difference between this picture and that. Something in the school or the shop or the daily employment opens an avenue of thought connecting with some object observed in the museum, perhaps with indifference, and the germ soon begins to sprout. So that when the artists close the petition with their creed: "We believe that this duty is the greatest handicap which it is in the power of the Government to put upon the progress of art in this country" they are right as regards themselves, but doubly right because it is an obstacle to a kind of unconscious education of the people which is more important than a large part of the instruction given by the public schools.

In modern times, and more particularly in communities organized like ours, a National art must have as its requisite a widespread and thorough taste which penetrates all the layers of population. It must be taught through the eyes. Good architecture, sculpture, painting, printing are of enormous value; but to get them we must have education beside and beyond all teaching in schools and universities. The tax on art is a serious stumbling block in the way of such education, and it is a startling refutation of the claim for shrewdness and good sense made for our Nation that we should permit such abuses to go on unchecked. The sneer that we tax genius and fear for our artists the competition of the ancient masters long moldered in the dust may leave one cool; but it is bitter to reflect that against the charge of dense stupidity there is no reasonable defense.

CHARLES DE KAY.

Some Illustrations To-day.

THE Society of American Painters rarely sees the work of George de Forest Brush nowadays, but for this, its last exhibition under the old name, he has contributed one of those family portraits which have conferred distinction on him. "Mother Reading to Children" is really a portrait of Mrs. Brush, and the children are doubtless members of the painter's family. The little boy, by his pose and the air of listening with intelligence to what is read which he shows, makes one think of the old pictures of Christ as a baby painted by those old masters whom Mr. Brush has studied. Indeed the baby is pondering after a deeper fashion than the little girls who stand by the mother's knee. One glances at her mother's face, the other looks out of the canvas at the spectator. Extreme simplicity in the arrangement of the hair, extreme sobriety in the gown of dark brown stuff, with a waist of ruby velvet, and a mere suggestion of rich color in the back of the chair add to the distinction of this picture. The reproduction will be found in the Pictorial Supplement.

Another painter who has felt the power of the old Italian masters is Mr. Hugo Ballin, whose "Lute Player" is also given to-day in the tinted sheet. The workmanship, however, is entirely different, since Mr. Ballin shows a tendency to the broad handling of those who cover large spaces in a decorative way; he inclines toward mural painting, while Brush pushes the technical perfection of the easel picture very far. Observe the effect of the broad heart-shaped body of the mandolin or lute, and face and neck above. In the picture this instrument and the robe form a very effective contrast.

The award for women artists at the Society for American Artists called the Julia A. Shaw prize was won by Miss Lydia Field Emmet with her "Boy in White," a picture reproduced on another page. The sweetness and wide-eyed innocence of youth are well told in this charming little figure. He is all in white, shoes, stockings, and sailor suit, except for the deep collar, which is blue. The cushion under him is dark blue. The background is without incident, just as he may have been painted in the studio before a screen. There is good flesh color and some nice drawing in face and bare knees.

Another of to-day's illustrations from the society's exhibition is a scene from child life in the country, "The Exciting Moment," by Francis C. Jones. A boy and girl, brother and sister, to judge by the family likeness, are waiting breathless for the moment when the "nibble" becomes a "bite" and the shiner, punkinseed, or pickerel dangles at the end of the line. The tin pail for bait, the bare legs of the boy, and his rough stick of a fishing pole tell the story. The little figures crouched in the long grass by the bank have been well managed as to open-air sunlit effects, though Mr. Jones has a smooth technique which some of the younger painters avoid. It is a natural and attractive scene, despite the avoidance nowadays of pictures that tell a story.

An anecdote is also Mr. C. C. Curran's "Flying Kites," which is illustrated today in another part of the supplement. Here is the barefoot boy in his glory, with the wind piping in lively style over the hill and every sign that the kites are behaving gallantly. The little girl wears a slate-colored dress and the boy lying down a dark blue shirt. Movement and absorption in the game are neatly told.

Sales of old masters follow each other quickly in New York as more and more discover that paintings by the ancient worthies of the brush have qualities rarely found among modern artists. When so much that is poor, and even ungenuine, is offered, it is a relief to find a collection containing authentic antiques, as in the coming sale of the Ehrich galleries. No one is infallible, and there is room for difference of opinion as to the exact name to be placed on this canvas or that; but the main point is that the dealer is straightforward and secures the best to the best of his ability, and in accordance with such opportunities as the market offers. From the large collection to be sold on the 21st at the Waldorf-Astoria three pictures have been selected for illustration: The wife of one of the Medicis, Vittoria, a lady of the famous family Delle Rovere, who furnished a Pope to Rome, is a curious example of a Flemish painter who became distinguished in Italy. This was Justus Sustermans. The tradition as to the picture, explaining the gold pieces and jewels on the table under her left hand and the big jewels she holds in her other hand and wears on her bosom, is to this effect. She was a great heiress and brought a fortune into the Medici family at a critical moment. Hence the Cupid who looks out of the canvas at the spectator, points back at Vittoria, and announces (see the words on the scroll he carries in one hand:) "Never turn back from the magnanimous undertaking." The unconscious Vittoria looks off to her right and seems about to grasp a handful of treasure and bestow it on some one toward whom she is gazing with a bright, benevolent expression.

A double portrait is shown in the Pictorial Supplement, that of Gen. Lew Wallace, the historical novelist, and of Seymour Thomas, who painted his portrait. The artist is taken as he turns aside from the canvas and applies his brush to his palette, looking down to choose the color. This is a very natural pose, and in the illustration one can see that the hand below, holding the palette, that above, holding the brush, then the face of the artist and that of the painted effigy dispose themselves very agreeably in the field. As a composition this is certainly successful.

Current Matters of Art

DISCONTINUANCE of the suit of Messrs. Gimpel & Wildenstein against Mr. David H. King for a balance of $36,000, due them on paintings furnished the collector to strengthen his gallery just before his sale, may be hailed on general principles. Litigants are better reconciled, for law suits eat up property and leave bad blood. We have lost, however, the chance to see a precedent established. We ought to know definitely what obligation rests on seller and buyer in case the object is sold at public auction. Though Mr. King is said to have set up the defense that the genuineness of some of his purchases from the firm was questioned, it is singular that the buyers of these pictures at the King sale are not throwing them back on his hands. So far, then, it appears that the new owners do not share the tardy skepticism of their quondam possessor. If they did, would they not hasten to restore them and claim a return of their money?

The questions having been left in the air without the aid of Judge and jury to settle them one way or another, we are constrained to believe that the buyer who gets rid of his collection at public auction cannot refuse to pay, even if the pictures go at low prices. Still less does it seem fair that the new buyer should be asked to give up his prey. It might happen that rainy weather, or some mistake in advertisement, or the lack of sense in the auctioneer, or some severe criticism in private or in the press should act as a preventive to other buyers, and so the canvas should "go for a song." One of the chief attractions of an auction is the chance that things of value may go for a song. It seems fair that some protection should be given to frequenters of auctions, thus far, that if they can prove they have been deceived, they may surrender the purchase and obtain their money back. Very doubtful if it be well to carry this redemption further.

The collector who sells at auction has bought without excitement and, if he wishes, assisted by expert advice. The buyer at an auction, however, is at a disadvantage since he is rarely able to examine a canvas thoroughly before purchase. It might be interesting to hear from art dealers, auctioneers, and collectors what they think in this matter. As said before in these columns, the question brings up again the desirability of some tribunal or committee before whom such delicate questions might be placed. It is a pity that the Gimpel-King controversy could not have been amicably threshed out before a committee of disinterested persons. While it would not have had the force of a precedent settled in court it would have gone far to establish a precedent of a certain kind.

An exhibition held in Berlin just now includes a number of portraits made in New York by Mr. Otto von Krumbhaar. The handles given Mr. Harriman's name—for he is one of the persons portrayed—must be surprising even to Germans avid of titles. A "Donnerwetter!" escapes from one critic on reading this title: "Mr. E. H. Harriman, President of the Pacific Steamship Company; President of the Union Pacific and of the Southern Pacific Railroads, as Well as of Forty-four Other Railways and Banks." Donnerwetter is not acclimated in all parts of the Union, but a good substitute might be found in "Wow-wow!"

Speaking of two Americans who contribute to the exhibition of the International Society, The Daily Telegraph of London says: "Mr. Joseph Pennell is as dexterous, as brilliantly Whistlerian in externals as ever, in a series of London street scenes, of which, however, the two best, 'Steps of the British Museum' and 'British Museum,' are the least imitative"; and, again, "Miss Mary Cassatt's colored etching, 'Mère avec son Enfant,' is a performance of great distinction, with a delicate flavor of the Japanese color-print and especially of Outamaro about it. She understands the narrow limitations of the color-etching better than most of her confrères and contemporaries do."

Mr. Lionel Cust, curator of the National Portrait Gallery, London, writes to The London Times to deplore the position of sculptors in England. "Sculpture has never been treated in this country with the sympathy and respect which the art deserves. At the Summer exhibitions of the Royal Academy the art, through exigencies of space, is crowded into two rooms, in which its decorative effect, its true significance, is destroyed. It is possible sometimes, as in the present exhibition of the International Society at the New Gallery, to get some idea of the value of sculpture when seen under proper conditions. Even at the Tate Gallery the sculpture has an air of discomfort and seems ashamed of being there." This plaint recalls the condition of New York sculptors before the foundation of the Sculpture Society. Next Autumn this society proposes to make an exhibition once more. The chief difficulty it is encountering is the lack of a place fitted for such a show. The best it has held hitherto was at the Fine Arts, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street, but the limitations there are sufficiently obvious to make the society hesitate, although its permanent rooms are in that building.

An ancient burial urn has been found at Gonschorr, in East Prussia, which has on it a number of peculiar signs like writing, but neither decorative nor strictly assignable to any known alphabet. The best guess comes from Dr. Peiser, who estimates the date as fourth or fifth century after Christ and the signs as imitations of Greek or Roman letters made by barbarians unfamiliar with their meaning. Provisionally he reads them as an attempt to spell the name Alariks. This inscription is regarded as the oldest so far discovered in East Prussian soil.

Talk of the Studios

AT the recent election of officers at the Salmagundi Club the following were elected: Alexander T. Van Laer, President; Henry B. Snell and J. B. Carrington, Vice Presidents; J. A. Thomason and Dr. Leigh Hunt, Secretaries; Charles Baker, Treasurer, and William Henry Shelton, Librarian. The Entertainment and Admission Committee comprises Messrs. Edward Potthast, Henry M. Ward, E. L. Ferguson, and J. N. Marble.

C. Myles Collier gave a reception recently in his studio in the Van Dyck Building, when he exhibited a number of landscapes of the Holland country around Katwijk, where he usually spends his vacations. Mr. Collier has several marines in his studio, including one of Cape Ann, near Gloucester.

Henry Hammond Ahl has recently sold his landscape of the Massachusetts country entitled "The Afterglow" to an art collector of Springfield, Mass. It is a bit of open country near Newburyport, with a large oak tree in the foreground, under which a flock of sheep browse. A new landscape in his studio in West Thirtieth Street is entitled "After the Storm." The scene is on the Downfall Road near Newbury of a Summer's day after the breaking of a storm. A bit of rainbow colors the background of dark gray clouds. Drawings and paintings by Ahl are shown at the Sloog Gallery, 32 West Thirty-third Street.

* * *

Jonas Lie spent his vacation last Fall in the Nova Scotia country making sketches and studies of the picturesque Annapolis Valley, and the country in and around Digby and the famous Digby Basin. "Autumn Afternoon" portrays a swaying row of trees swept by the Fall breeze. The sunlight is breaking through the gray clouds, and falling on the trees gives a touch of red to the composition, which also includes a combination of browns and blues in color. The picture is now on view at the New Gallery in West Thirtieth Street. An exhibition of recent work is likely to be shown in the near future.

At the Modern Gallery, 11 East Thirty-third Street, an exhibition of recent paintings by Charles W. Hawthorne has been placed on view to continue until March 24.

* * *

Carlton T. Chapman gave a reception and private view of his newly completed painting "The Bonhomme Richard and the Serapis" in his studio, 58 West Fifty-seventh Street, recently—a large canvas and a graphic portrayal of the famous sea fight. The picture will be sent to the annual exhibition of the Society of American Artists, which opens this week at the Fine Arts Building.

Letters from Edward Gay, who sailed for Greece early in January, accompanied by Mrs. Gay, indicate that the artist is having an enjoyable time among the stimulating influences of the picturesque country around Athens. Mr. and Mrs. Gay first visited Taormina, Sicily. From that resort they journeyed to Athens, where they are now, and where Mr. Gay is engaged in filling a commission.

Henry R. Poore at Lyme, Conn., has been journeying over the country in his movable studio, somewhat disappointed over the unusual lack of snow. He has portrayed other aspects of nature during the Winter, and these landscapes will be seen soon in this city and Philadelphia. His picture at the recent Lotos Club exhibition, "Under the Winter Sun," has been submitted to the jury of selection for the annual exhibition of the society; it was produced at Lyme during the present season. Speaking of the country around Lyme, he says: "The country is unusually rugged and picturesque, abounding in rocks, a locality from which civilization has receded, leaving the primitive methods existent. The ox, for instance, is a favorite over the horse, and the mill takes the water wheel for granted."

A collection of drawings by Kenyon Cox, mural painter and instructor of drawing, was placed on view in the Art Gallery of the Pratt Institute, Brooklyn, on Monday, March 12.

F. Luis Mora, who spent last Summer in Spain, was somewhat disturbed over the tardy arrival of numerous sketches and studies of his season's work abroad. Some of these pictures were held up in the Custom House. He has completed several examples of Spanish types, and exhibits them at the Society of Artists. Recently he completed a portrait of Col. R. Bruce Ricketts, noted for gallantry at Gettysburg, commander of the Ricketts Battery, which was named after him.

Students of the Art League are making elaborate preparations for the annual Exhibition of the Fakirs, which is to be held in the League Rooms the latter part of April. The students burlesque the pictures of the Society of American Artists every year, and devote the proceeds obtained from their exhibition and sale to the scholarship fund. An auction will be held on one night, and then will follow the annual ball of the students in costume. J. Paul Burnham has been elected President of the Fakirs, and Lionel Strauss Vice President.

Jef Leempoels has reopened his studio at 6 West Twenty-eighth Street, having spent two months in Brussels. He has returned to America to fulfill several portrait commissions, and is already engaged upon a number of canvases in his studio. A bust portrait of himself attired in a gray suit, painted against a soft gray background, is now receiving the finishing touches.

In the studio are many interesting photographic copies of paintings and portraits from his brush, works exhibited in Paris and other art centres abroad. Among these are portraits of King Leopold of Belgium, a full-length standing likeness, and also one of the Duchess of Arenberg, a member of the royal family of Belgium, and the "Enigma," a symbolical female figure made for a Russian Prince, and shown at the Salon; also the original painting of "Le Destin et l'Humanité," a work perhaps more popularly known as "The Hands," which received a gold medal from the International Jury of Awards at the St. Louis Universal Exposition. Some of these paintings together with more recent portraits by Mr. Leempoels will be shown at an exhibition to open at the Knoedler Galleries on March 19, to continue there for a fortnight. This will be the first public exhibition of his work in this city. While abroad Mr. Leempoels visited Paris and other cities of France. His work in portraiture will occupy him well through the Spring and possibly into the Summer.

Addison T. Millar has a studio on West Twenty-third Street, near the centre of Sixth Avenue's busy dry goods district, but in a way secluded from the city's din on the top floor of a business building. He divides his time between painting pictures of the Orient, for which he has a penchant, and etching, which is for him a pleasant diversion. Mr. Millar is a pupil of William M. Chase. He once spent many months in Spain and Algiers, where he made several hundred sketches and studies of Spanish, Moorish, and colorful Oriental types. Although he journeyed through Holland, Eastern lands appealed with peculiar charm to him. He continues to paint Algerian subjects and those of Spain, and with these he has won his most pronounced successes.

His "Merchant at Arms," an Algerian picture, has just been purchased by a collector at Springfield, Mass., who saw the painting at the annual Gill exhibition in that city. "Concluding a Bargain," another picture of Algiers, was also shown at the Gill exhibition. Mr. Millar is painting a picture of Algiers, entitled "The Palace Door." This work, a small canvas, has already been spoken for by a Brooklyn collector. Mr. Millar is represented at the present exhibition in Charleston, S. C., by a Dutch interior. In his studio are many interesting curios and implements of warfare, gathered by the artist during his journeys through Spain and Algiers. Sketches of Moorish fortresses, bits of the blue sea on the coast of Algiers, pictures of Arab models, doorways of old mosques, Spanish knives and stilettos, and portions of Caesar's road in Algiers, with its picturesque coloring, ornament the walls. An exhibition of Mr. Millar's recent etchings will be held soon at the Pratt Institute, Brooklyn.

Miss B. Elvey Campbell, a young English artist, who has recently arrived from London, gave a reception recently and an exhibition of her craft, that of wood carving, at her studio, 687 Madison Avenue. Many artists and society folk were present, including Sir Caspar Purdon Clarke, Director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, and Miss Jeanne Clemens, a daughter of Mark Twain, who was a former pupil of Miss Campbell.

Miss Campbell has made a specialty of the Elizabethan style of wood carving. She is represented by interesting examples of her art at the South Kensington Museum, London; the Dublin and Edinburgh Museums, the Handel Museum at Vienna, the Victorian Museum at Melbourne, Australia; the Drexel Institute, Philadelphia, and the Metropolitan Museum of this city. In her studio are photographs of various pieces of her skill. Miss Campbell has a weekly class in wood carving at Wilmington, Del., and is forming classes here, not solely for the amateur, who may take up the art for recreation, but for those who desire to teach wood carving as well.

It is also her intention to hold classes in the various working girls' clubs of the city, and in the smaller towns of the country where the practical side of the work might prove of great value.

Miss Campbell met with much success abroad in her work, where she first started with the idea of interesting owners of large estates in England by bringing the art of wood carving before their tenants, and instructing them with a view to improving their condition.

Under the auspices of the Art Students' League, 215 West Fifty-seventh Street, a competition open to all art schools and art departments of colleges in the United States, with the exception of New York City, will be held in April. Eight scholarships will be offered—four upon drawings from the antique and four upon drawings from life. The drawings submitted will be judged by a jury composed of the instructors from the league. They must reach the league not later than April 1. These scholarships will give the winners free tuition in any class of the league during the season of 1906-1907.

Edwin Willard Deming is preparing a collection of his Indian pictures for an exhibition at the Modern Gallery, 11 East Thirty-third Street. These pictures will show the religious side of the old-time Indian and the mystery and grandeur of his home, which had much to do with his quaint folk-lore tales. Mr. Deming has made a special study of this phase of Indian life, and has endeavored to portray the folk-lore of the Indians on canvas.

What the Artists Are Doing

FREDERIC REMINGTON has been making a tour of the lumber camps and logging drives in the Adirondack regions studying not only the workings of the lumbering system, but also of the trees and the effect this work has on them. He is to make a series of illustrations to be called "The Story of the Trees," which is intended to arouse public interest in the matter of the preservation of the forests.

George de Forest Brush is still at his home in Dublin, N. H., working on his familiar groups of his wife and children, several of which will be shown here late in the Spring.

George H. McCord has been working on a group of pastels lately of such widely varying themes as the uplands of Western Massachusetts and the coast of Maine. He has also just completed an oil painting that is a marked departure from his usual style of subject and manner of painting. He calls the picture "The Valley Homestead," and it represents an old white farmhouse with a gray roof and a huddle of barns and outhouses near by, all this overhung by a blue sky flecked with rolling white clouds. He made his sketch for the composition in Somersetshire, England, a decade ago.

How Gold Crosses the Ocean

Care Taken to Safeguard the Treasure—The Captain's Responsibility.

THE Captain of one of the big transatlantic liners which carries in its strong room millions of gold a year, while recently discussing the subject with a reporter, said:

"After the gold, worth perhaps half a million or a million, and which is packed in solid wood boxes, strengthened with enormous bands of iron, has been placed in the bullion room, access to which is only obtained through the flooring of the saloon, I sign the receipt, and then become responsible for its safety.

"From this moment till I arrive at Liverpool the key never leaves my person, it hanging suspended from my neck inside my clothes by a piece of ribbon.

"Do I think it impossible for a thief to obtain access to the strongroom? Fifty desperadoes, shipping as passengers, might, as you say, wait till we were out in the open, and then, after murdering us all, help themselves to some of the gold—not all; it would be too heavy—and then take to the boats. Yes, fifty determined men might do this. But how are fifty criminals to assemble in New York without the police becoming aware of their presence? Why, I should spot them before we started. Responsibilities for such treasures as I carry sharpen the wits. No; the money is safe enough on the ocean.

"I simply from habit keep my eyes open during the voyage till we reach the docks—not that my responsibility ceases even then. Should the ship arrive on a Saturday or on some holiday, the vessel is considered at sea, and not only is all leave sternly refused, but the most extraordinary precautions are taken to prevent a surprise attack from shore.

"As soon as the officials from London—consisting generally of a few detectives, clerks of the steamship company—arrive the bullion room is opened, the boxes are removed in a strong net—each box being checked as it appears—placed on a trolley, and, well guarded, hurried without a moment's delay to the bullion truck. When this is done and the word 'All right!' is pronounced I heave a big sigh of relief, for my responsibility then ceases.

"The bullion truck, as you perhaps know, is a barge-shaped box, lined with solid plates of iron, about four feet long by three feet high, and secured with several locks of the latest design.

"When the gold is to be carried by rail the bullion truck is always sandwiched in between the engine and the conductor's car, so that when the conductor has not got his eye on it the engineer or fireman has."

BOYS AND THEIR AMBITIONS.

"THERE isn't a decent servant to be had these days; no, not one and why? Just because every one is so ambitious," complained a comfortable-looking woman to her friend who was out in quest of a domestic. "All the American girls are too good to go into service," she continued, "and the foreigners are fast getting into the same way of thinking. Just to show you the aspirations of the young generation—you know my husband is interested in boys. Well, he likes all kinds of boys, big and little, rich and poor. They all appeal to him, and whenever he gets a chance he enters into a conversation with some youngster on the street, in a car, anywhere at all. When we were in England and traveling on the Continent, it was the same way; he was always scraping acquaintance with the little boys, and he always asked them in the course of conversation what they wanted to be. In the case of the foreigners it was invariably whatever their father happened to be. If he were a valet, why, the boy had no ambition to be anything better than a valet, or a tailor, or shopkeeper, and so on up to a member of Parliament. Whatever the father might be, that thing was what the boy wanted to become. Now, in America it's different. There are only two things that the average American boy wants to be. Until he is eleven he wants to be like the policeman on his beat, but after that—they always answer my husband, 'What do I want to be? Why, President of the United States.' Talk about ambition!"

SAYS HIGGINS FAVORS ANTI-RACE TRACK BILL

Dr. Gregg States Governor's Attitude—Grieved at Doane.

TALKS OF SUING DR. SLICER

Reformer Resents the Rev. Dr. Slicer's Charge That the Cassidy Bill Originated with Poolroom Men.

While persons allied with the race track interests were endeavoring to shut off any further discussion of the Cassidy-Lansing Anti-racing bill and the agreement entered into between the Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer and the Stewards of the Jockey Club to "sterilize" betting at the race tracks, word came yesterday from Albany that Gov. Higgins was in favor of the Cassidy bill.

The Governor's attitude was stated by the Rev. Dr. A. S. Gregg, Field Secretary of the International Reform Bureau, which organization was chiefly instrumental in having the anti-race track measure introduced in the Legislature. Dr. Gregg said that a great deal of feeling had been aroused among ministers all through the State over the change of front of Bishop Doane, who at first favored the Cassidy bill, but after receiving a letter from the Rev. Dr. Slicer withdrew his support. Dr. Gregg said that the action of Bishop Doane would come up for discussion at a meeting of ministers this forenoon in the Y. M. C. A. Building at Albany.

Dr. Gregg expressed keen resentment at the statements, attributed to Dr. Slicer, to the effect that the Cassidy bill originated with the poolrooms.

"We have nothing whatever to conceal in connection with the origin or introduction of the Cassidy bill or the use of Bishop Doane's name," declared Dr. Gregg. "Early in January I had a hint from our headquarters in Washington that a plan for attacking race track gambling in New York State was being formulated. After sending out a lot of literature urging the people of the State to petition the Governor to recommend legislation touching gambling on race tracks, the President of the Reform Bureau, the Rev. Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, had an interview with Gov. Higgins, in which the latter declared himself in favor of the Cassidy-Lansing bill."

Dr. Gregg added that careful consideration was given to the form of the bill, and that after the amendments had been drafted they were submitted to Anthony Comstock for criticism. Mr. Comstock changed the bill to its present form, and returned it to Dr. Gregg, who handed copies of the measure to Senator Cassidy and Assemblyman Lansing, who introduced them. The bill was introduced in the Assembly on Feb. 16 and in the Senate on Feb. 19.

"As soon as the date for the joint committee hearing had been agreed upon," said Dr. Gregg, "plans were made for the mass meeting held in the Calvary Baptist Church in Albany on March 6. As the active manager of the forces that supported the bill, I had charge of the arrangements for the mass meeting. I asked an Albany pastor to suggest a good man for chairman. He named Bishop Doane. I asked one of the Bishop's personal friends to extend the invitation. This was done on March 1. The answer was that the Bishop would preside at the mass meeting if his health permitted, and that he would also speak at the hearing in support of the bill.

"On the following Monday, however, I was informed that the Bishop denied having promised to preside. He was willing to speak at the hearing, but his physician had ordered him not to leave the house. I called and asked him to write a letter which I could read to the meeting. He did so, and I received the letter on the following morning. A little after noon the same day I received a note from the Bishop asking for the return of his letter of indorsement. I think he said in this letter that he did not consider himself well enough informed on the subject to commit himself.

"Bishop Doane changed his mind very suddenly. He wrote his letter of approval on March 5, and withdrew it on the next day. In a letter to an Albany clergyman the Bishop quotes extensively from the letter written to him by Dr. Slicer, in which the origin of the bill is attributed to the New York poolrooms. This statement had great influence with the Bishop, and seems to have been the principal cause of his change of attitude. This charge on the part of Dr. Slicer is so serious that I may decide to sue him for damages.

"The moment special privileges are sanctioned all law enforcement is weakened. Poolrooms exist because the exception made in the case of race-track gambling has practically destroyed respect for all the gambling laws.

"The only way to regulate a rattlesnake is to cut off its head. The only sensible way to regulate gambling is to make all the gambling laws uniform, so that all who gamble are felons, with no discrimination between the well-to-do turfman and the common gambler."

Edward Lauterbach, who made the principal argument before the Constitutional Convention in 1894 in favor of the amendment making gambling and poolselling a felony everywhere within the State, declared that the members of the convention had never contemplated that any exception should be made in favor of poolselling on the race tracks.

"I am heartily in favor of horse racing," said Mr. Lauterbach. "I think it is noble and elevating as a sport. But racing and gambling should be absolutely divorced. If racing is made a vehicle for gambling then a very proper thing has been subordinated to a very improper and injurious one. Gambling is a taint on racing."

Mr. Lauterbach said he had little doubt that the men who are conducting the affairs of The Jockey Club were of that opinion, too, and that their action last year in cutting loose from the bookmakers had indicated their desire to make the betting ring a less conspicuous and injurious feature of the race tracks.

"If they succeed in putting an end to gambling at their tracks well and good," said Mr. Lauterbach. "If not, it should be brought about by the State withdrawing its support from race-track gambling. If gambling is a felony outside of a race track it should be made a felony inside as well. I think the race tracks could well exist without the bookmakers."

Mr. Lauterbach gravely expressed the opinion that comparatively few racegoers go into the betting ring.

Joseph S. Auerbach, counsel of The Jockey Club, said he could not discuss the situation that has arisen over the Cassidy bill or the agreement with Dr. Slicer. Dr. Slicer was equally reticent. In fact, it was learned that all interested in the agreement have decided to do no further talking in hope that interest in the controversy may die out.

ACCUSES J. P. MORGAN.

Charge of Double Dealing in a Suit to be Filed in Nashville.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, March 18.—The Enquirer to-morrow will say that J. Pierpont Morgan is accused of double dealing and a conspiracy in restraint of trade in a legal document to be filed to-morrow by W. A. Bradford, President of the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville Railroad, with Judge Lurton of the United States Circuit Court at Nashville. It is an answer to an action instituted by the Père Marquette Railroad to prevent the collection of interest on the bonds issued by the Père Marquette and guaranteed by the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad, for the purchase of the Chicago, Cincinnati & Louisville in Judy, 1904.

President Bradford gives details of the arrangements for the sale of the road and the issuance of the $3,500,000 worth of bonds that were repudiated after the appointment of receivers for the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton and the Père Marquette last Fall.

He avers that because of the deal his company incurred heavy expense in perfecting an extension of the line from Cincinnati to Louisville, and in making other improvements. He also says that the road was without a cent of floating debt when it was turned over to the purchaser July 4, 1904, but when it was thrown back on his hands a floating debt exceeding $200,000 rested against it, and the property had depreciated in value.

Mr. Bradford charges, it is said, that there is afoot a well-laid plot on the part of Mr. Morgan and his associates to get control of the C. C. & L. when they think it can be purchased cheaply enough and turn it over to the Queen & Crescent system. This, he asserts, is a part of the general plan to parcel out what were the component parts of the former Great Central, the Père Marquette to be handed over to the Erie or some of the New York Central lines, and the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton to the Chesapeake & Ohio.

To accomplish this end, he declares, J. P. Morgan & Co., who owned the majority of the stock in the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, and held a working control in the Père Marquette, adopted a scheme to have a receiver appointed for them, parcel out the lines, and repudiate all the obligations possible, so as to enhance the value of the Morgan stock at the expense of the small stockholders.

Walter B. Horn, a member of the Morgan firm, filed the suit, he points out, and declares the members of the Morgan board, in control of the roads filed favorable answers. He asserts that the Père Marquette was not insolvent and is not now.

One great purpose of the receivership proceedings, he alleges, is to put an end to competition with railroads in which Mr. Morgan and his associates are interested. This, he holds, is a conspiracy in restraint of trade.

SNOWSLIDES KILL FIVE.

Damage of $1,000,000 to Mines in Colorado—Mills Carried Away.

OURAY, Col., March 18.—Five men are known to be dead and at least $1,000,000 worth of mining property has been destroyed by snowslides in the San Juan mining district in the past two days.

Late last night a great avalanche struck the buildings of the Camp Bird Mine, formerly owned by Thomas F. Walsh, carrying away the big reduction mill, the tram house, boarding house, and library building. These buildings were the finest and most costly mine structures in Colorado.

There were six men in the library at the time and four of them were buried in snow, but their companions quickly dug them out and, although seriously injured, all will live.

The loss to the Camp Bird Company will reach $400,000 and may exceed that amount. The boarding house of the mine, in which 300 men were sleeping when the slide occurred, was directly in its path, but the force of the slide was broken and its course diverted by the great mill with its heavy machinery.

Other snow slides in San Juan and San Miguel Counties yesterday afternoon killed five men, injured many, and caused property damage, estimated at from $350,000 to $400,000.

One of the men killed was D. F. Hickey, foreman at the Green Mountain mill. The names of the other men have not been learned. Hickey lost his life in the slide that carried away the bunk house of the Last Chance Mine. The heaviest property loss was to the Green Mountain mill, which was recently completed and equipped with machinery at a cost of over $300,000. Seventy-five men had gone into the Last Chance tunnel to work fifteen minutes before their bunk house was carried away.

A monster snowslide broke loose at the top of the range on the east side of Bear Creek Basin, near Telluride, late last night, sweeping down the mountain side and across the creek to the base of the opposite mountain. It demolished the cabin of August Hellene, killing him instantly.

Early this morning a slide came down King Solomon Mountain, partly destroying the boarding house of the Unity Tunnel. A cook named Nelse Hansen had his leg broken, but no one else was injured.

To-day has been one of the worst since the storm began a week ago. The wind is blowing a gale and the snow is falling heavier than ever. It is now over two feet on the level. All railroads in this section are blocked except the narrow gauge Rio Grande between Telluride and Salida.

PARKHURST DENOUNCES ROOSEVELT'S CABLEGRAM

Says Wood's Attack on the Moros Has a Ghastly Look.

AND DISPATCH MATCHES IT

Battle No More a "Brilliant Feat of Arms" Than Smoking Bees Out of a Hive, He Declares.

The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst preached yesterday morning to a congregation which completely filled the Madison Square Presbyterian Church, on the relations of so-called Christian nations to those that are pagan, and especially on the recent killing of Moros, and President Roosevelt's congratulatory dispatch. His text was from Psalm cxlvii, 20: "He hath not dealt so with any nation."

"The unfortunate historic fact," said Dr. Parkhurst, "is that the information which heathen peoples have acquired concerning nations nominally Christian has gone a great way toward discrediting Christianity among them. The 'open door' is a great stimulus to traffic and to interchange of ideas, but the trouble is that any kind of a man can go through it, and as matter of fact a great many more knaves and sharpers go through it than people of the other kind.

"So the poor pagan is not to be blamed if, after having tasted the questionable delights of foreign machination and the uncertain joys of invasion by peoples professedly marching under the banner of the cross, they are a little disposed to hug an indigenous religion rather than to grant naturalization papers to one that is exotic."

After describing our governmental attitude toward the Chinese, Dr. Parkhurst went on:

"Consider, also, the easy and self-satisfied way in which we regard the mowing down of the savages and semi-savages in the Philippine Islands when they stand in the way of the national purpose of which after eight years of 'benevolent assimilation' we have just had a most startling and heart-rending example in the bombarding to death of six hundred men, women and children collected in a crater in the Moro Islands.

"The National ambition, the financial ambition, being what it is, we are not here to discuss the question as to whether the slaughter of six hundred Moros was or was not a military necessity. But there are two things to be said about the jubilant congratulation sent by the Chief Executive to Gen. Wood. The first is in reference to the designation of the performance as a 'brilliant feat of arms.'

"Basing our estimate on the reports rendered by Gen. Wood, it was no more a 'brilliant feat of arms' than smoking bees out of a hive or rats out of a nest.

"But a far sadder feature of the Executive communication to Gen. Wood is that it contains not one word of sympathy, one note of tender distress, in view of the indiscriminate slaughter perpetrated 'in honor of the American flag.'

"Now, we have been taught to believe, and we like to believe, that the President has a great heart. And so I prefer to think of that cablegram, composed as it was in the presence, practically, of mangled men, torn women, armless and headless children, I prefer to think of it not as being the expression of the man Roosevelt, but of the President Roosevelt, in whom officially the heartlessness and the greed of unregenerate nationality is functionally represented. I want to find a way out for Roosevelt; for the performance on the Jolo Island has a ghastly look, and the cablegram matches it.

"With the exception of the maintenance in the South of negro slavery, there has been, I should say, nothing sadder in our history than the National attitude in which we to-day stand toward the little brown people of the Philippine Islands.

"Secretary Taft said to a friend of mine a few days ago—and this friend repeated the remark to me—'The passage of the Philippine Tariff bill will be a test of American sincerity.' And you know what the situation is in that respect. The Nation paid for the Philippines in dollars, and they are still contemplated by the Nation as merchandise.

"Everything in our National life then at least tends to centre around money. National politics is shaped by it, National ethics are determined by it. And as a single means toward National regeneration we who are Christians must make our influence felt more largely in the selection for positions of high trust of men who have the grace to contemplate great questions of policy from other than the mercantile standpoint.

"To go no further, you know how the State of New York is represented in the National Senate; there is no use in confining ourselves to generalities that I know of. The regeneration of a nation involves the putting into places of great national trust men to whom there is some sweetness in the world besides sugar, other productions in the garden of the Lord besides tobacco, and other administrative principles in God's government besides tariff."

TO THE POLE IN AN AUTO.

Minneapolis Men Sure They Can Get There—Model of Vehicle Built.

Special to The New York Times.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 18.—Charles E. H. Burch and Frederick R. Burch, Minneapolis men, will attempt to reach the North Pole in an ice automobile of their own invention. The vehicle is supplied with all the comforts one might expect to have in a houseboat.

The inventors have engaged in exploration in Alaska more than once, and it was for the purpose of making trips on the trackless wastes of Alaska in quest of mineral wealth that their idea was perfected and a working model was built. After they had the vehicle in working order the idea of a polar exploration suggested itself, and the brothers announced that, while their original plan was not to discover the pole, there was no reason why they could not make the trip if the proper interest was shown in the expedition.

They have the automobile in operation at Lake Calhoun, where it was inspected yesterday by interested residents of Minneapolis. It is built like a large street car and is heated by hot water. The Burch brothers assert that they have selected a route to the pole that is as sure as their means of locomotion is certain. They believe they will be able to obtain ample financial backing for the venture.

"WHO'S RICE?" SAYS HEDLEY.

The Interborough Manager Sarcastic About Congestion in the Subway.

Frank Hedley, Manager of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, refused to discuss in detail yesterday the report of Chief Engineer George S. Rice to the Rapid Transit Commission relative to the congestion of passengers in the Subway at certain times of the day, and the causes therefor.

"I haven't read the report," he said, "and I don't know if I shall talk if I do read it. Who is Rice, anyway? What does he know about the conditions?"

"He reports that he investigated affairs in the Subway, using at times forty men to help him," it was suggested.

"Oh, well, let it go at that," said Mr. Hedley.

"Mr. Rice says the public is to blame in some cases for crowding in cars," the reporter put in, "for passengers will rush into middle cars if they have to stand up, when there are empty seats in the end cars."

"The public to blame for anything!" exclaimed Mr. Hedley. "Nonsense! There is some mistake here. The public is never to blame for anything. You take it from me, the railroads are to blame. Public to blame! Never!"

CAR RAN AWAY ON HILL.

Brake Chain Snapped, but It Stopped Without Hitting Anything.

Trolley car 1,937 of the Hamburg Avenue line, Brooklyn, bound for Canarsie, snapped its brake chain last night when Motorman Duffy attempted to stop it at St. Mark's Avenue. There is a heavy down grade there, and the car shot forward. Duffy reversed the current, but the fuse blew out. When the passengers, startled by the flash, realized that the car was beyond control and saw the steep hill in front of them, they were panicstricken.

The motorman stuck to his post on the front platform, clanging his gong and yelling that the car was running away. At Liberty Avenue, a transfer point, the runaway narrowly escaped a collision with a car which was just crossing Hamburg Avenue. A little further along Joseph Amokin of 1,705 St. Mark's Avenue, jumped. He rolled over and over, cutting his face in several places and receiving many bruises. A little further and Mrs. Lena Lewis of 895 Myrtle Avenue was forced off the rear platform and badly shaken up. The car finally came to a stop on a level stretch a quarter of a mile from where it started.

An ambulance was called from the Bradford Street Hospital and Dr. Scholl attended Amokin and Mrs. Lewis. Their hurts are not serious. While the car was running away, another car, immediately ahead, was in danger for a time. The motorman put on full speed, however, and kept a safe distance.

SEEKING BORGIA POISONS?

Russian Women Students at Turin Being Closely Watched.

TURIN, March 18.—Several Russian secret agents have arrived here, with instructions closely to watch Russian women who are students at the University of Turin.

Some years ago, when the Czar suffered a rather serious illness, it was reported that he had been poisoned by means of a pair of gloves, which had been left on a table ready for him to pick up. It was further asserted that the gloves had been poisoned in a manner familiar to certain Italians in the sixteenth century, the secret of which had been lost until it was rediscovered by Russian revolutionaries who conducted researches among the manuscripts in the Biblioteca Nationale at Turin.

Whether the poisoners of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries knew of any substances more deadly than the toxicologists of the present day is a disputed question, but there is much evidence to support the opinion that the stories about the terrible poisons used by the Borgias and others had a good deal of basis in fact.

The library at Turin is particularly rich in manuscripts and early printed books.

BARONESS A SUICIDE.

Mother of Lieut. Bussche Shoots Herself at Fort Leavenworth.

Special to The New York Times.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., March 18.—Baroness von dem Bussche, who was known in this country as Mrs. Caroline von dem Bussche, the divorced wife of Baron von dem Bussche-Haddenhausen of Berlin, committed suicide this morning at Fort Leavenworth.

She lay on a bed in her room in the quarters occupied by herself and her son, Second Lieut. Carl Frederick von dem Bussche of the Eighteenth Infantry, placed an army revolver to her head, and pulled the trigger. Lieut. Bussche was in an adjoining room, and rushed to his mother's side. She was breathing faintly, but died before medical assistance could be summoned.

No cause, except possibly melancholia, is known for the suicide. Officers at the fort decline to make known any further details regarding the affair.

The son, in 1898, enlisted in the Sixth Infantry and in 1901 was commissioned second lieutenant. Three years ago Lieut. von dem Bussche was ordered to the Philippines with his regiment and his mother accompanied him. When he returned to Fort Leavenworth a little over a year ago she followed him and since then had lived with him at the officers' quarters at the fort. Six months ago Baron von dem Bussche visited his son, but soon left, and, it was said, returned to Berlin, where he now lives. When he was at the fort his wife was absent and later it became known that the couple had been divorced.

Mrs. von dem Bussche was 46 years old. The burial is to take place at the cemetery at the army post to-morrow.

Lieut. von dem Bussche is a cousin of Freiherr von dem Bussche-Haddenhausen, First Secretary of the German Embassy at Washington.

ROBBERS SLUG NOTARY.

Schmall Left Unconscious in His Flat While Robbers Take $1,000.

Jacob Schmall, a notary public and insurance broker, was beaten into unconsciousness with a loaded bit of hose by two unknown men in his flat at 133 Stanton Street early this morning. Jewelry worth about $1,000 was then stolen.

The men escaped. Schmall is not dangerously hurt.

ROOT DECLINES TO TELL WHY AMBASSADOR QUIT

Storer Believed to Have Sought a Promotion and Failed.

A SUGGESTION OF NEPOTISM

Hints That President Declined to be Moved Because Daughter Married Relative of Storer's.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—What is reported to have been a difference of opinion between President Roosevelt and Bellamy Storer, Ambassador to Austria, on the subject of Mr. Storer's desire for diplomatic promotion, has led to the retirement instead of the promotion of the Ambassador. It is announced that the name of his successor will be sent to the Senate to-morrow, although no information as to his identity, beyond the fact that he is not an Ohio man, has come from either the White House or State Department.

Secretary Root when asked to-night why Mr. Storer was to be superseded replied that he could not say. He declared that between the President and Mr. Storer personally there was now, as always, the best of feeling. The President entertain for the Ambassador to Austria the highest respect and will continue to regard him as one of his best personal friends.

Mr. Storer has been on intimate terms with the Roosevelts ever since he was in Congress when Mr. Roosevelt was a member of the Civil Service Commission and the families were neighbors. He acted as godfather at the christening of the President's son, Kermit.

By some it is imagined that since Mrs. Storer's nephew, Representative Longworth, has married the President's daughter, the Ambassador and his wife assumed that if they desired a promotion in the Diplomatic Service it would be granted. The matter having taken this form to the President's mind it is believed that he has instantly stamped upon Storer's ambition to show that anything like nepotism will have no quarter from him. The moral effect of such a course as affecting Mr. Longworth in Ohio politics can be conjectured.

Secretary Taft may be presumed to have been consulted in the matter, as the Storers are from his State and city. He said to-night that he did not know that any fault had been found with Mr. Storer's official conduct or that any other place was in contemplation for him.

The fact that the news of Mr. Storer's impending retirement came out only on the eve of the nomination of his successor created the impression generally that there had been some difficulty between him and the President or the State Department. But those who are in position to know deny that there has been any difference whatever.

Mr. Storer has been nine years in the diplomatic service, having been appointed first by President McKinley, who made him Minister to Belgium in 1897. Upon the resumption of diplomatic relations with Spain at the close of the war, he was transferred to Spain. President Roosevelt promoted him to be an Ambassador in 1902 and sent him to Vienna.

There are only three or four European posts which could be considered a promotion over that Mr. Storer has held. The only one of these which is at all likely to become vacant as far as present indications go is St. Petersburg. It has been the talk of Washington for some time that Ambassador Meyer would leave the Russian Court in the Spring and return to Washington to take a place in the Cabinet. That would have made a vacancy to which Mr. Storer might have been appointed had the President so desired.

CUNLIFFE TRIES TO DIE.

Express Robber Dejected Over Derision of Fellow-Convicts.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 18.—Because the other prisoners look upon him as a fool, Edward G. Cunliffe, the Adams Express robber, who stole $101,000 and did not know enough to hide it, tried to commit suicide in the Western Penitentiary last week. He concealed a knife in his clothes while at work in the broom shop and opened the arteries of his wrist after being locked in his cell. Before he could die his condition was discovered.

The other convicts all deride Cunliffe unmercifully.

"You hadn't sense enough to plant your wad after you got it," they tell him.

Cunliffe stole the money and spent $2,000. The rest was recovered, and he got six years for his pains.

RESENT ANTI-DANCE EDICT.

Oswego State Normal School Students in Revolt.

Special to The New York Times.

OSWEGO, N. Y., March 18.—Because of the edict of the Faculty of the Oswego State Normal and Training School that "man dances" will not be permitted at the receptions of the literary societies, feeling runs high among the Normal girls, and a student revolt has begun. The male students declare that they will not attend any more class receptions unless the Faculty raises the edict against dancing.

The boycott of school functions has been formally proclaimed, and the male students are being warmly supported by the girls of the school, who have been unwavering in their opposition to the stand taken by the Faculty.

6 YEARS OLD, 23 INCHES TALL.

Autopsy Shows That Spinal Necrosis Kept Joseph Loricello Short.

Brooklyn doctors are showing great interest in the case of 6-year-old Joseph Loricello, who died on Saturday at the home of his parents, 596 Atlantic Avenue, of spinal necrosis. The boy was one foot and eleven inches tall.

Joseph, who was the son of a confectioner, was a very small boy. Doctors were called in when it became apparent that while the child was broadening he did not grow tall in proportion. The reason for this was not discovered while the boy was alive, although after a while he grew a little.

When he died on Saturday an autopsy was immediately begun. It revealed that spinal necrosis had prevented his growth.

TAMMANY'LL WATCH, TOO.

Going to Have a Legislative Committee Like the Citizens' Union.

The Rules Committee of Tammany Hall will report for adoption to-night the old rules of the organization with the additional provision creating a Legislative Committee. This is a departure in Tammany affairs. The proposed Legislative Committee will be made up of twelve members, and will maintain a permanent organization with a representative at Albany to analyze bills and make public reports on pending measures, with advice and comment.

The committee will operate much as the present Legislative Committee of the Citizens' Union and the like committee of the City Club, although, of course, its viewpoint often will differ materially from that of those two organizations.

THE DEWEY AT SEA AGAIN.

Leaves the Canary Islands After a Stay of Nearly a Month.

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands, March 18.—The United States floating dry dock Dewey, en route for the naval station at Olongapo, Philippine Islands, which arrived here on Feb. 23, left yesterday in tow of the colliers Brutus, Caesar, and Glacier and the navy tug Potomac.

The Dewey will call at Gibraltar.

STEAMER BURNS, 64 SAVED.

Only One Person Dies as the Result of the Disaster.

MILWAUKEE, March 18.—The steamer Atlanta of the Goodrich Line was burned to-night ten miles north of Port Washington.

The Smith brothers, fishermen of Port Washington, went to the rescue with the tug Tessler and rescued the passengers and crew, numbering sixty-five persons, who had taken to lifeboats. All except one were transferred to the steamer Georgia, another of the Goodrich Line boats. A man was drowned during the transfer.

A baby girl came into the world, unexpectedly, on the Barge Office pier yesterday morning. Mrs. Wilhelmina Getz, the mother, had just landed from the Ellis Island ferryboat, so little Miss Getz is an American citizen. Had she been born an hour earlier she would have been an alien, as under the law children born on Ellis Island of foreign parents are not American citizens.

Mrs. Getz and the baby are doing well in the Ellis Island Hospital.

MISS ROOSEVELT CONFIRMED.

Second Daughter of President Enters the Episcopal Church.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—President Roosevelt's second daughter, Miss Ethel, Secretary Taft's daughter, Miss Helen, and a daughter of Gen. A. W. Greely of the army were in a class of about twenty-five young people who were confirmed at St. John's Episcopal Church this afternoon.

Bishop Satterlee administered the rites of confirmation, the presentations to the Bishop being made by the Rev. Roland Cotton Smith, rector of the church. President and Mrs. Roosevelt and such children as are now in Washington and Secretary Taft were present at the church, which was crowded.

GIRLS' SCHOOL BURNED.

Most of the Pupils Were at Church—Two Rescued.

Special to The New York Times.

AURORA, Ill., March 18.—Jennings Seminary in this city was almost destroyed by fire to-day while most of the pupils were absent at church. Two girls in the hospital wards were rescued by firemen and six others narrowly escaped.

About 100 girls, with the teachers, went to church. The building was in ruins when they returned. Nearly all of their effects were destroyed, and to-night they are being cared for by residents of the city.

The seminary is conducted by the Deaconess Society of the Rock River Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

James Eads How Also Plans to Cure Drug Users.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 18.—James Eads How, the eccentric philanthropist who refused to accept an inheritance because he said he did not have any right to money he had not earned, is now planning to establish a sanitarium for inebriates and victims of the drug and cigarette habits. He is trying to get possession of the old City Hospital building, and many petitions have been signed requesting the Mayor to gratify his wish.

For the last three years Mr. How has been studying medicine at the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Next Winter he will receive his degree.

LOST, A ROPE OF JEWELS.

Lulu Kelly Tells the Police of Missing Pearls and Emeralds.

A handsomely dressed woman, who said that she was Lulu Kelly of 27 West Twenty-sixth Street, drove to the Tenderloin Station last night to say that she had lost a rope of pearls and emeralds from her neck while driving yesterday afternoon. She had passed most of the afternoon in Central Park, but she thought she had lost the rope near Broadway and Twenty-sixth Street. She would not estimate the value of the lost pearls and emeralds.

Rockefeller Gossip.

The inevitable result of John D. Rockefeller's seclusion in Lakewood, N. J., and the extraordinary precautions taken to keep visitors away from him, developed last night, when dispatches from Lakewood began to reach the newspapers, quoting the local gossips as saying that Mr. Rockefeller's health, mental, and physical, had given way. No confirmation of any part of this gossip could be obtained from Mr. Rockefeller's friends last night, and no comment except that it would take a good deal of health to withstand some of the yarns that have lately been printed about him.

WARNS NEW YORK LIFE NOT TO SEEK PROXIES

Untermyer Says Trustees Will Be Held for the Cost.

COMPANY IN CONTROL NOW

Has Collected Some 100,000 Proxies—Policy Holders' Committee Has 30,000—Hamilton in Town.

Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the International Committee of Policy Holders of the New York and Mutual Life Insurance Companies, has sent an open letter to President Alexander E. Orr of the New York Life demanding that that company cease its efforts to get proxies for the election of Trustees set for April 7, which the Armstrong Committee's bills propose to postpone to Nov. 15. He warns the company's management that every officer and Trustee of the company responsible for the proxy campaign and for the effort to defeat the pending bills at Albany will be held personally responsible for the money spent in so doing.

The efforts of the New York Life to get proxies in spite of the dictum of the Armstrong Committee that all insurance elections be postponed until Nov. 15, by which time the new scheme for policy holders' voting will be in effect if the committee's bills go through, will, it is expected, have the effect of increasing the efforts made at Albany to secure the passage of the special act which the committee proposes. By means of its agency force and various special inducements, the company has collected some 100,000 proxies already, which would, under ordinary circumstances control an election if it were held before the postponement bill goes through.

It is recognized that any delay in the passage of the special act would greatly strengthen the position of the New York Life management, for if the act were not passed by April 7, when the annual meeting takes place, the outgoing Trustees, all of whom are candidates for reelection, would go back into office, and the fact could be used as an argument to show the confidence of the policy holders in the existing management in the subsequent proxy battle.

Untermyer's Letter.

It was the recognition of this situation, and of the possibility of legislative delay on the postponement bill, that led Mr. Untermyer to address President Orr. His letter is:

"March 17, 1906.

"Alexander E. Orr, Esq., President New York Life Insurance Company, New York City, N. Y.

"Dear Sir: As counsel for policy holders and committee that are now representing upwards of 50,000 policy holders in your company, although no canvass for proxies has been possible, I am instructed to protest in their behalf against the extraordinary use that is being made by you and your officers of the agency force of the company, who are being pressed into the service of soliciting proxies for the re-election of yourself and assoociates as Directors at enormous expense to the policy holders.

"You are well aware that your tenure of office and that of your associates are about to be terminated and a new election ordered by the enactment of the pending legislation. You know that until this legislation is enacted the policy holders are practically disfranchised. You and your associates are responsible for their helpless position in this respect. It was under your administration that the requests of policy holders for an inspection of the lists so that they might know who are their associates and be able to communicate with them as to the selection of Trustees was recently denied. When the court granted that demand, it was under your administration that the funds of the policy holders were used in the appeal from that ruling, which resulted in the extraordinary decision that denied to them access to the lists.

"It is the result of that litigation, conducted for the defeat of the rights of the policy holder and at his expense, which emphasizes the necessity for the pending legislation.

"In its remarkable opinion in that case the court observes with prophetic vision that these lists 'might prove a valuable asset in unscrupulous hands.' And so they will if you are permitted to untilize them as you are now doing.

Telegrams to Agents.

"I am informed that within the past few days you sent out from your head office to your entire agency force throughout the country telegrams urging them to collect proxies. I have before me one of a number of printed letters and circulars issued from your head office, signed by the Cashier of your company, with an accompanying form of proxy, addressed to policy holders, inclosing a biography of each of the Directors and officers whom you seek to re-elect, including yourself. This proxy is to Messrs. John Claflin, Oscar H. Straus, and Clarence H. Mackay, of whom biographies are also inclosed, printed at the expense of the policy holders. Your circular letter concludes as follows:

"'Your interest as a policy holder cannot better be served than by promptly executing the inclosed form and returning it as suggested.'

"If these documents have been sent to every policy holder, the cost to the company of postage alone would be about $80,000, and the cost of printing and stationery as much more. How you justify such expenditures (to say nothing of the manifest impropriety of such action at this juncture) I fail to understand.

"These documents are coming to us in great numbers from infuriated policy holders, with the request that our committee take some action to prevent you thus wasting the money of the policy holders in the attempt to return yourselves to office.

"I have also had placed in my hands circular letters signed by your Vice President, Mr. Buckner, and sent broadcast to your agents some months ago, before the pending bills were introduced, and at a time when it was expected that your election for Trustees would be held on April 11. At enormous expense to the company the agency force was circularized and inducements held out to them to gather proxies in favor of the present management. In these circulars schemes and combinations are suggested, and the agents are told how many proxies are expected from each of them by the management.

100,000 Proxies Obtained.

"I am told that as the result of this misuse of the time of the high-priced officials of the company and of the agency force you have within the past three months succeeded in collecting through your agents and otherwise from policy holders who are unfamiliar with existing conditions about 100,000 proxies, of which approximately 70,000 come from your home office agents, about 15,000 from the Chicago branches, and about 15,000 from your foreign agencies through your Paris office.

"Upon the publication of the Armstrong report you issued instructions to stop this campaign. We supposed that was the end of it, and that you would await the result of the recommendations of that report.

"You have now resumed the campaign apparently in the hope of 'stealing a march' on the policy holders while they are in this defenseless situation, owing to the short time intervening between now and April 11, and to your refusal to allow them to inspect the lists of policy holders.

"It is generally understood that you and your associates are bending all your efforts and influence to the defeat of the bills that are aimed at legislating the present board out of office. The attitude of your representative at the hearing before the legislative committee and the resumption of your campaign to collect proxies confirm that belief. We accordingly protest against your use of the policy holders' money for such manifestly improper purposes:

"The policy holders are still hoping and expecting that the Legislature will act in time to defeat this latest move on your part by postponing the election until they can secure access to the lists. But in order that there shall be no room for misunderstanding on this subject you are herewith notified that you and every officer and Director of your company who is responsible for or who concurred in the inauguration or prosecution of this campaign, will be held personally responsible for the money expended in this transparent and defiant attempt to use the powerful organization of the company for your and their own purposes and for the defeat of the rights of the policy holders. Yours truly,

"SAMUEL UNTERMYER."

Mr. Untermyer is going to Columbus on Wednesday, at the request of Chairman Earl Stewart of the Insurance Committee of the Ohio Legislature, to appear before that committee in support of the bills introduced there for insurance reform as the result of the Armstrong Committee's recommendations. The Ohio scheme of legislation closely follows that proposed in this State, and bills of a similar nature will be introduced in a dozen other States in the present sessions through the efforts of the special committee appointed at the conference of Governors, Attorneys General, and Insurance Commissioners in Chicago early last month.

Conference in Chicago.

That conference will reconvene in Chicago to-morrow at the call of Gov. Johnson of Minnesota, who is a member of the international committee of policy holdery, to consider the legislation which the Armstrong Committee probers have proposed here. The insurance companies are making a vigorous fight in Ohio against the whole scheme of reform measures, and similar opposition is expected in the other States where the bills are introduced.

The Legislative Committee of the National Life Underwriters' Association and the American Association of Public Accountants both sent out statements last night, repeating the arguments presented at Albany at the hearings on the insurance bills. The agents, through the Underwriters' Association, want a modification of the bill limiting the expenses of new business, as they contend that they could not live under the proposed law. The accountants want to have the insurance laws provide that chartered public accountants must make the annual examinations of the companies, and also to have a particular form of statement adopted for the reports of the companies to the Insurance Department,

HAMILTON HAS A SUGGESTION.

Wants Insurance Trustees Kept Out for a Year—He's Coming Here.

ALBANY, March 18.—"Judge" Andrew Hamilton said to-night that he expected to go to New York to-morrow to remain two or three days. He declined to say what were his intentions or whether he would see any members of the Fowler Committee of the New York Life Insurance Company. Friends of "Judge" Hamilton here express doubt as to his going before the committee, questioning the propriety of his submitting himself to men whom he has characterized as he did the New York Life Trustees in his speech before the legislative committee last week.

"Judge" Hamilton to-night expressed the opinion that when the bills proposed by the Armstrong Committee are reported they should contain a provision that no Trustee legislated out of office next November, as recommended by the committee, shall be eligible for re-election until a full year has elapsed.

"The propriety of this is obvious," he said, "and I believe a demand for it is coming to a head. You know we have adopted from the English common law the precaution that no Sheriff can be re-elected until a term of service has elapsed. The theory is, and it applies equally to a Trustee of a life insurance company, that the Sheriff exercises such an immense power that he could at will command his re-election. So with these Trustees; they are in a position which would enable them, by favoring one and persecuting another, to command proxies to secure their election if they see fit. This should be prevented by making their re-election illegal.

"I note that some of these gentlemen in New York say they do not know me. It certainly seems strange that any man should be in a position to spend very large sums of the money of which they are the legal guardians, during a long term of years, and yet be totally unknown to them."

GIRLS IN "SUNGAZERS'" DEN.

Police Take Two Children from a Haunt of Fake Blind Men.

The police of the West Forty-seventh Street Station took two girls last night from a den of "sungazers," which is the professional name for beggars who simulate blindness. The girls were found in the basement of a West Forty-ninth Street house. The beggars had found them profitable in leading them around and thus evoking sympathy.

The girls said they were Mamie Best, 14 years old, who lately lived at 525 West Fifty-seventh Street, and Katie Sands, 13 years old, of 345 East Thirty-second Street. They were found through a bit of detective work which Mrs. Sands, mother of Katie, did on her own account.

About three weeks ago John Best, the brother of Mamie, took his sister home from the House of the Good Shepherd. He had recently married and established a home at 525 West Fifty-seventh Street, and desired to bring his sister there. Mamie was sent to the House of the Good Shepherd, says Detective Walsh of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, because her father, Lawrence Best, had been several times arrested for being a professional beggar. He is credited with having taken the girl away from her brothers to the "sungazers'" retreat.

Walsh found that the place was inhabited by five fake blind men, and presided over by a sort of a boss beggar, known as "Paddy the King." Mamie induced Katie Sands to join her.

The police made no arrests. Their explanation was that Mrs. Sands would not prefer a charge of abduction, and that they had no other charge to bring against the group of fake beggars. The girls were committed to the care of the Gerry Society.

NO SIGN OF SURRENDER BY FRANCE OR GERMANY

Algeciras Dead-Lock Continues, but Hope Is Not Given Up.

CABINET MEETS IN PARIS

French Newspapers Oppose Further Concessions—Conference Between Bourgeois and Radolin.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES.
Special Cables. Copyright, 1906.

ALGECIRAS, March 18.—During the last forty-eight hours no progress has been made here in the negotiations for an amicable settlement. Casablanca still stops the way.

In the French camp there are no symptoms of an inclination to yield. The new French Cabinet seems determined to insist on having the police organization intrusted to France and Spain in all eight seaports, and may be strengthened by the knowledge that the Casablanca proposal is not popular among some of the neutral powers.

In the German camp likewise there are no indications of an intention of going further in the matter of concessions. If it be true that Germany has not yet said her last word in this matter and is ready to make a compromise in details, provided that the principle of internationalization is maintained, a way of turning the difficulty might be found.

Instead of introducing a third nationality into the police a precaution against the alleged danger of "Tunisification" might be found in defining the functions of the Inspector General, and to this the French Government could not well object, because in the recently published instructions to M. Revoil it not only admitted the establishment of a system of inspection but declared itself ready to acquiesce in rendering the inspection as efficacious and strong as possible.

This is at present the only chink through which a ray of hope finds its way into the darkness of the situation, but I notice in certain competent quarters a disposition to believe that the resources of diplomacy are not yet exhausted.

PARIS, March 18.—I stated last week that it was not anticipated that there would not be much difficulty at Algeciras in arriving at an agreement on the question of the State Bank.

I now add that the impression is gaining ground in well-informed quarters that Germany will scarcely make her persistence regarding the question of Casablanca a cause of the rupture of the conference.

PARIS, March 18.—There was a special meeting of the Cabinet Ministers to-day in connection with the Algeciras Conference, at which the situation was fully gone over, Foreign Minister Bourgeois explaining the exact standpoints of France and Germany.

Although no statement has been given out relative to France's future line of action, an announcement by M. Bourgeois that the Ministry will not participate in the debate on the foreign affairs budget on Tuesday is regarded as a somewhat hopeful sign. This decision, coming after a conference last evning between the Foreign Minister and Prince von Radolin, the German Ambassador, is considered to show that the Moroccan knot has not yet been untied, and that the end of the conference is not in sight; but hopes are still undiminished that a solution of the difficulties will be found.

The position of M. Bourgeois is rendered more difficult owing to the uncompromising attitude of the principal journals, which oppose concessions. The Temps takes the lead in this respect, saying that France has reached her utmost limit relative to both the police and bank questions, and this view has the support of a very influential body of opinion.

Therefore M. Bourgeois hesitates to show signs of willingness to compromise the matter by a give-and-take method, as he knows that any further yielding to the German demands would render the Ministry unpopular to the last degree.

All the Latest and Best Features in "Player-Piano" Construction Are Embodied in the Stuyvesant

PIANOLA PIANO

(The Stuyvesant Piano and the genuine Metrostyle Pianola in a single case.)

Price $550 In moderate monthly payments if desired

STUYVESANT PIANOLA PIANO Price $550

THE STUYVESANT PIANO

The piano part of this instrument is the Stuyvesant, a thoroughly reliable instrument which has been before the public since 1886. The Stuyvesant piano alone sells for $300 and $335, so that the combination instrument costs no more than would the piano and Metrostyle Pianola if bought separately. At its price, the Stuyvesant is believed to be the best value on the market to-day, and whether sold separately or in the form of the Pianola Piano it carries the full guarantee of the Aeolian Company.

The great care in construction exercised in the making of the Stuyvesant is evidenced by the nicety of its finish, inside and outside, as well as its full, rich tone. These are qualities that differentiate it from other pianos of similar cost, and one does not have to be an expert to appreciate these points of superiority.

THE PIANOLA

The position that the Pianola holds to-day as the standard of its class is so universally recognized that its sales exceed those of all other Piano-players put together. In fact distinguished authorities assert that the Pianola is in a class by itself and other piano-playing instruments are not even to be given serious consideration in comparison.

It is the Pianola that has been purchased by every member of the English Royal Family, that has received the royal appointment of the King of Spain, the King of Portugal, the Pope, Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria, that numbers among its patrons hundreds of the nobility of Europe and prominent social leaders, financiers and public men in the United States.

THE METROSTYLE

The Metrostyle is the feature that in the opinion of the musical world rivals in importance the invention of the Pianola itself. It shows exactly how to play with expression. It prevents the unskilled from giving a colorless, automatic performance, such as is so often heard with other Piano-players. It places at your command the signed, authorized interpretations of Paderewski, of Grieg, of Strauss, of Chaminade, of Moszkowski and many other well known pianists and composers.

The testimony of musicians as to the value of the Metrostyle is so overwhelming that the public is justified in rejecting any "Piano-player" or "Player-piano" that does not contain it. This essential improvement is absolutely controlled by the patents of the Aeolian Company, and instruments sold elsewhere do not embody anything that even remotely resembles it.

THE STUYVESANT PIANOLA PIANO enables the music lover who cannot play by hand to voice music as his own ideals, hitherto dumb, may influence him. He is no longer trammeled by lack of technical ability. The most perfect technic in the world is now his. He can have any kind of music, at any time, to satisfy his every mood, pleasures for which he has heretofore been dependent upon the inclination, ability and presence of others.

The work-weary business man can enter, without effort, the restful realm of music. He can himself play selections from the latest Broadway comic opera, the newest waltz or twostep, the song hit of the day. Or he can have standards or classics as readily and as artistically.

The Pianola Piano never says: "I am out of practice." "I play nothing but classic music." "I have not studied that piece." "I can only play easy music." IT IS WILLING, TIRELESS, VERSATILE.

Our easy purchase plan on the Stuyvesant Pianola Piano should interest everyone who has had in mind the purchase of an instrument of this type, but has deferred action on account of price. We give immediate possession on a very moderate down payment and the balance can be paid off while you are enjoying the instrument. Send for full particulars of this plan and illustrated catalog.

STIRRING UP THE CHINESE.

Native Press Trying to Influence the People Against Foreigners.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

SHANGHAI, March 18.—The native papers yesterday, all using the same block, published a picture of the Nan-Chang Magistrate's head after death, displaying ghastly wounds.

Their action was evidently prearranged and points to an organized and deliberate attempt to stimulate the passions of the people against foreigners.

The increasing hostility of the vernacular press and its unconcealed desire to create trouble are regarded with complaisance by the Chinese officials.

The matter undoubtedly calls for diplomatic intervention.

The Magistrate at Nan-Chang-Foo was mortally wounded after a quarrel with Roman Catholic missionaries, and died some days afterward. The missionaries assert that he committed suicide, but the Chinese declare that he was killed by the Catholics.

There seems no doubt that the wounding of the Magistrate, whether the injury was self-inflicted or not, was the immediate cause of the anti-missionary riots at Nan-Chang.

REBEL TOWNS RAZED.

Ruthless Suppression of Kutais Revolt—Warsaw Prison Attacked.

SUKHUM, Transcaucasia, March 18.—The ruthless manner in which Gen. Alikhanoff has crushed the revolution in the Government of Kutais by razing towns, executing the ringleaders of the movement, and driving sympathizers with it to the mountains, has produced such resentment that acts of terror and the throwing of bombs at the troops are frequent.

Gen. Alikhanoff has proclaimed and is enforcing martial law with terrible rigor, and revolutionaries or other persons caught with arms are immediately shot.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 18.—An armed crowd at Warsaw to-day attacked the prison in Pawia Street, killed a warden, and mortally wounded two others, and liberated a political prisoner named Zaleski.

The Government is using the most repressive means to stop the agitation for a strike of railroad men and telegraphers. A meeting of railway men at Rostoff-on-Don to-day was surrounded and invaded by Cossacks, who fired into the assemblage, killing two persons and wounding eight.

At Moscow troops are now guarding all the railroad stations and several factories.

At Hartsoff to-day the circulation of false reports that the pensions of widows of soldiers who fought in the Russo-Japanese war had been withdrawn caused a mob to besiege the Mayoralty building and demand a distribution of money, threatening otherwise to burn the city. Cossacks and troops finally dispersed the mob.

Anti-Semitic pamphlets have been widely distributed in Poltava City and throughout Poltava Province.

Six thousand persons participated here to-day in the initial meeting of the League of Education, which was inaugurated by the Constitutional Democrats to disseminate political instruction among the people. Prominent speakers were present. There was no interference with the meeting until M. Novikoff, a well-known Liberal and formerly Mayor of Baku, made an impassioned speech, in which he demanded the abolition of the death penalty. Thereupon the police closed the meeting.

SEVASTOPOL, March 18.—Vice Admiral Chouknin has rejected the appeal of Lieut. Schmidt for the setting aside of the verdict of death passed upon him by a court-martial for his part in the mutiny at Sevastopol.

The privilege of being shot instead of hanged has, however, been conceded to Schmidt.

MANY MORO WOMEN SAVED.

Any Killing Was by Shell Fire—Attack Long Delayed.

From a late edition of yesterday's NEW YORK TIMES.

MANILA, March 18.—Further investigation develops the fact that many women and children were saved in the attack against Moro outlaws on Mount Dajo recently. Those killed were killed at long range and by shell fire.

The attack was delayed six months while Gov. Scott was endeavoring to persuade the outlaws to surrender. All overtures were scorned, and the defiant attitude of the leaders of the outlaws and the Arab priests persuaded their followers that the Government would be unable to dislodge them from their fortress within two years.

Leading Moros, in their desire for the extermination of the outlaws, aided the troops in the fight. Two hundred Moros, under the direction of leading Dattos, formed columns and carried water to the troops.

The reports of company and troop commanders to Gen. Wood show that every effort was made to save women and children. After the fight was over Gen. Wood ordered supplies and assistance for the women and children remaining alive in the crater.

The Sultan and the principal Dattos are still congratulating Gen. Wood on the killing of the outlaws, which made possible the tilling of the fields.

REUNITED AFTER 30 YEARS.

For Eleven Years Sisters Lived Near Each Other and Didn't Know It.

Special to The New York Times.

WORCESTER, Mass., March 18.—Sisters who had not seen each other for thirty years lived within five miles of each other without knowing it until yesterday. The women are Mrs. Leon Larose of Warren and Mrs. Emma Beaver of Ware.

The reunion was brought about through Mrs. Julia A. Labare of Warren, who knew both sisters in their girlhood days and recognized Mrs. Beaver in Ware on Friday. Mrs. Larose hurried to Ware, and to-day there are not two happier women in the country than the reunited sisters.

MITCHELL URGES BAER TO HELP AVERT STRIKE

Suggests Another Conference of the Joint Committee.

POINTS TO PUBLIC INTEREST

Miners Not Willing to Take Responsibility for Abrupt Termination of Negotiations.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 18.—Despite a strong strike sentiment that has developed in the past twenty-four hours, President Mitchell of the United Mine Workers of America has addressed another letter to George F. Baer, Chairman of the Anthracite Coal Operators' Committee, replying to the committee's communication rejecting the demands of the miners' organization. He asks for another conference between representatives of the miners and the operators in an endeavor to avert a strike. His letter follows:

Indianapolis, March 17, 1906.

Mr. George F. Baer, Chairman, Philadelphia:

Dear Sir: Referring again to your communication dated March 10, with accompanying documents, and to our reply thereto, I write to say that I have submitted to our committee the answer made by your committee to the propositions presented by us. It is unnecessary to state that we were keenly disappointed to learn that our demands were rejected in toto, and that our arguments in favor of them had received so little consideration at your hands that they were practically ignored in your reply to us.

We have again reviewed the scale presented for your consideration; have compared it with the scale of wages paid for similar classes of labor in other coal-producing States and districts, and we are satisfied beyond the peradventure of doubt that the wages proposed are not in excess of, indeed, that they are not so high as, the wages paid in the bituminous mining districts of our country.

Judging from the language employed in your answer to us, it is perfectly evident that we failed to make clear or that you failed to understand the real import of the propositions submitted by us.

We wish to assure you that we are not unmindful of the great public interests involved in this controversy as to our future relations, neither are we unappreciative of the splendid efforts made by the Anthracite Coal Strike Commission to establish a relationship between us that would insure a just and permanent peace; but if you will refer to the award of that commission you will find that the commission itself was in doubt as to the permanency of its findings, and expressed the hope that at the expiration of the award the relations of operator and employe would have so far improved as to make impossible such a condition as existed throughout the country in consequence of the strike in the anthracite region.

We had entertained the hope that our adherence to the letter, and the spirit of the award, and the absence of local or general strikes during the past three years, would have appealed more strongly to your confidence, and that we might reasonably expect serious consideration of our claims at this time.

When we met in joint conference at 143 Liberty Street, New York City, on the 15th day of last February, it was agreed that when the separate committees of seven had terminated their work they should report to the committee of the whole. We understood this to mean that after we had submitted our demands and our reasons therefor, and you had prepared your reply thereto, the joint committee would meet, confer, and, if possible, reach an agreement.

But it would seem from reading your reply that all our propositions have been rejected, and that your final decision has been given. We trust that this conception of your intention is incorrect. It is our opinion that neither you nor we can afford to break off negotiations in this abrupt manner. So far as we and the interests we represent are concerned, we are not willing to accept any share of the responsibility this action entails. We believe that a further meeting should be held, and that we should strive earnestly and conscientiously to reconcile our differences.

While it may be true that on the part of the operators there has been no serious cause for complaint during the last three years, we wish to assure you that in expressing this opinion you do not reflect our views. Not only has there been criticism among the miners, but what is more important, there exists much cause for criticism and complaint.

To such an extent is this true that we feel it incumbent upon us to say that we cannot with any degree of contentment or satisfaction work under present conditions.

However, we repeat that the interests involved are so vast that we are not willing to break off negotiations without first making further efforts to reconcile our differences. We, therefore, propose that further conference or conferences be held between now and the 1st of April.

If this suggestion meets with your approval, we will be pleased to arrange with you a date upon which our joint committee may reconvene. I am, yours truly,

JOHN MITCHELL, Chairman.

It is now conceded that an uphill fight must be made if peace is to be maintained after April 1.

Several hundred soft coal men arrived to-day from eight different States. In the van was the Illinois delegation, 150 strong, which is leading the fight against any compromise. They are supported by Southwestern operators from Missouri, Arkansas, and Texas. Ranged on the other side are a majority of the mine owners from the fields of Western Pennsylvania, who are following Francis L. Robbins in his peace programme.

Ohio and Indiana operators appear to be holding a neutral position, but are talking war more than peace. The operators will hold their meeting to-morrow morning. Mr. Robbins and President Mitchell are not resting in their endeavors to turn the tide in the direction of peace.

A long conference was held again this afternoon, in which Mitchell, Robbins, and the operators with him discussed their plans. Mitchell afterward was confident. Mr. Robbins continued to work quietly among the Ohio and Indiana men. They were both somewhat disconcerted, however, by the statements made by such men as Herman Justi and A. J. Moorehead of Illinois, Secretary T. W. Brooks of Ohio, and by a number of Indianapolis operators.

"Nothing can prevent a strike in Illinois," said Mr. Justi. "I believe it will extend over the entire bituminous field. Illinois is on record as opposed to even this renewal of the old wage scale, and to back down would be suicide to our organization."

PHILADELPHIA, March 18.—George F. Baer read to-night a copy of John Mitchell's letter to him. "I have nothing to say," he said.

A representative of the anthracite coal carrying companies said last night that the coal Presidents would not refuse a request from the miners for a new conference. This, he said, however, could not be taken as meaning that the operators, in granting the request, would commit themselves to any change of policy.

HOLDING COAL FOR A RISE.

Company May Make Big Profit on Its Holdings.

PITTSBURG, March 18.—With a sufficient water stage to ship coal south, the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke Company is holding 5,000,000 bushels of coal in the Pittsburg harbor.

After April 1 it is expected that, if the wage advance is not granted to the miners, the price of coal will go up at least 50 cents a ton to the consumer. With the amount of coal in the harbor the company will net a big profit.

Officials say the reason for non-shipment is that the mills in the Pittsburg district are stowing fuel in anticipation of a shut-down of the mines.

600 MACEDONIANS COMING.

Emigrating to America—Atrocities Still Going On in Turkey.

BELGRADE, March 18.—Six hundred Macedonian emigrants left here to-day for the United States by way of Fiume.

All of them possessed sufficient funds to permit of their entering the United States.

Although the Turkish Government reports the condition of the Macedonian valiyyets to be "tranquil," it appears that, after all the efforts of the powers and the elaborate measures taken by the foreign gendarmerie officers, the condition of the Christian population is very little better than it was two years ago.

On Feb. 28 Bulgaria addressed a "note verbale" to the Ottoman Commissariat, calling attention to the sufferings inflicted on the Bulgarian population in Salonika and Monastir Provinces by Greek bands and by the Turkish officials and troops.

The note gave details regarding a series of atrocities perpetrated by Greek bands in recent times, including numerous cases of assassination, arson, and pillage. Among the instances cited was an attack on the village of Bernek, where nine men and one woman were killed, others wounded, and five houses burned; the burning of the village of Poutouros, where two men and one woman were murdered and two children committed to the flames; the burning of the village of Tzernitchani, and the series of exploits of the famous Capitan Panayoti, including the plundering of the village of Iveeni, from which twelve of the principal inhabitants were carried away and subsequently put to death.

AMERICAN SCHOOL LOOTED.

Building at Van Also Burned While Turkish Officials Look On.

BOSTON, March 18.—A complaint from the officials of the American School at Van, Eastern Turkey, against the treatment by Turkish officials and Kurds has been received by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

The school officials state that, notwithstanding the ostensible friendship of the Governor General, a man of unusual strength, the school has been plundered and burned by the Kurds, in the presence of Turkish officials and soldiers. Fruit trees have been cut down and breadstuffs purchased by American missionaries for the American orphanage have been held by the Turkish Government for more than four months. By the withholding of the breadstuffs and the intimidation and imprisonment of the men sent to purchase them the cost has been increased at least 21 per cent.

In addition a herd of live stock belonging to the orphanage, valued at $1,500 and upon which the children were dependent, has been carried off by the Kurds.

Secretary Barton of the American Board in commenting on the treatment says:

"If Americans, citizens of a sovereign State, are thus treated in the Turkish Empire without redress, what can be hoped for the subjects of the empire who have no courts to which they can appeal?"

SAY NO TO CONSTITUENTS.

Connecticut Senators Will Oppose the Philippine Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., March 18.—In answer to the letter of seventeen influential Republicans, tersely informing Senators Frank B. Brandegee and Morgan G. Bulkeley that the Republicans of Connecticut did not like their attitude on the Philippine Tariff bill and wanted them to vote for the measure, Senator Bulkeley has replied that he intends to vote against the bill if it comes to the Senate. The answer of Senator Brandegee is that he has been and still will be against the bill, as to pass it would result eventually in injury to Connecticut tobacco interests.

While there is no disposition to question the right of either Senator to vote as his judgment dictates on the bill, or on any bill, it is strongly felt in the State that in refusing to back the President on the Philippine tariff matter both Senators have made a serious mistake, if they intended by their votes to vindicate the feelings of their constituents.

DR. LEE'S FLOCK DIVIDED.

Petition Against Him Is Talked Of, at Least—Mrs. Lee Ill.

That Dr. John Lloyd Lee, the pastor of the Westminster Church, has not his entire congregation with him in his fight against the Presbytery was a report that was circulated yesterday. It was declared that a petition speaking for the integrity of the Presbytery had been signed by several members of the church, and that some thirty other members and one officer sympathized with it.

Dr. Lee's friends, however, declare that the fight will go on as hard as ever. Nobody was found who admitted having signed the petition.

Mrs. Lee is at Asbury Park suffering from nervous prostration, brought on by worry over her husband's fight to have the church leave the Presbytery.

OBJECT TO POLICE RIVALS.

Municipal Messengers Hope Bingham Will Abolish More Details.

A letter containing a set of resolutions has been forwarded to Police Commissioner Bingham by the Municipal Messengers' Eligible Association. It urges the Commissioner to continue the abolition of "soft snap" details by sending to regular duty policemen now doing messengers' work in public offices.

It is pointed out that the continuance of these details will be an injustice to hundreds of persons who are eligible for the places.

Many Killed by Formosa Earthquake.

LONDON, Monday, March 19.—The Daily Telegraph's Tokio correspondent, telegraphing concerning the earthquake Saturday morning in the vicinity of Kagi, Island of Formosa, says that according to the Nichi Simbun the casualties exceed 100, and that the Jiji Shimpo places them as high as 800. An official dispatch, he adds, reports 60 deaths and many more persons injured and 200 houses destroyed.

Shot Dead in His Home.

LANCASTER, Penn., March 18.—Clayton Christy, aged 24 years, shot and killed Frank Meissinger, 41 years old, last night at Columbia, this county. Christy asserted that Meissinger had attempted to prejudice him against Miss Grace Findley, to whom he had been paying attention. He went to Meissinger's house, and when the door was opened fired at him. When arrested to-day Christy had two bullet wounds in his left arm. It is believed that he shot himself accidently at the time of the murder.

WORSE THAN HERR MOST IS A FRANCHISE GRABBER

Senator Elsberg Mentions the "Dangerous Dreamer" Just Dead.

SAYS THERE'S LAW A-PLENTY

Dr. Slicer Not Allowed to Answer a Question About the Racing Bill at People's Institute Meeting.

Although last night was the occasion of the eighth annual celebration of the founding of the People's Institute in Cooper Union Hall, and quizzing of the speakers was not in order, the desire to ask questions was evidently strong in some of the 1,600 or more persons at the meeting.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas R. Slicer, who is a Trustee of Cooper Institute, had been invited to be Chairman. He had finished a few remarks on social conditions and the necessity of a neutral zone, where both sides in sociological questions might be fairly heard, and had taken his seat when a voice from the rear of the crowded hall sounded on the air, seemingly directed at Charles Sprague Smith, the Director of the Institute. The voice called:

"Ask Slicer to tell us what he thinks of the Racing bill."

Dr. Slicer moved in his chair and started to go to the front of the platform again, but Mr. Smith would not have interruptions.

"I'm sorry," said Dr. Slicer after the meeting. "I would have answered that chap if I'd had the chance."

Once again an interruption came when George L. Record, Corporation Counsel of Jersey City, was talking on the subject of the evening, "Civic Righteousness." Mr. Record was preaching against the practical politician, and declared that cold chills would run down the politician's spine if a system of primary nominations was adopted in New York.

A man in the hall, evidently a party worker, yelled:

"Say, if I lived on the other side of the river, I'd go for him."

Senator Nathaniel A. Elsberg was warmly welcomed. His address was against hypocrisy among citizens. He declared that if a man lived up to his contracts, was right in his duties to his family, he might filch the public property, close his eyes to corruption, and yet retain the respect of his fellow-man.

"New laws won't be enough," he declared, "until we respect the laws we have already. No laws will be sufficient to bring about civic righteousness until men live up to righteousnes and honesty wholly. The whole community has been shocked by the reports of the dens of vice discovered in this city. Who are the landlords of these places? Who are the men who take increased rents for them? They should be made known and pilloried and punished. The punishment of one of them would do more good than the punishment of the miserable scoundrels engaged in the traffic, who paid their rents regularly."

A great burst of applause greeted this.

"The man who takes a public franchise without paying for it breeds more disorder than did that dangerous dreamer who died yesterday, Johann Most."

Amid the applause for this sentiment were hisses.

Rabbi Silverman inveighed against dishonesty in the big financial institutions, at the ballot box, and in the Legislature. He declared that it was never intended when Church and State were separated in this country that morality and Government should be separated.

"We are not sufficiently independent," he declared. "American citizenship should rise above party politics."

Gov. Higgins, who had been invited to attend the celebration, wrote to the Director of the Institute, declaring that he had started the insurance investigations when he found that something was radically wrong, that they had been conducted without fear and by able counsel, and that it was "a hopeful sign when vast wealth and vested interests could be arraigned and made to answer charges of lawless greed and selfishness, the constituted agencies of the Government not yielding to popular clamor, not seeking to discredit all because a few have proved recreant to their trust, desiring to serve the people rather than the plutocrats, and to promote the common good rather than foster the vanities of the few."

Dr. Lyman Abbott and Richard Watson Gilder also sent letters. Among the other speakers were Mornay Williams and Dr. Leipziger.

MARCH 1906

GEN. GRANT TELLS NEEDS OF NEW YORK'S DEFENSES

Says the Barracks at Some Forts Are Rotten.

DRILL GROUNDS ARE NEEDED

Wants $600,000 Spent at Fort Hamilton—Schuyler Needs $250,000—Urges Congress to Spend the Money.

Major Gen. Frederick D. Grant, United States Army, commanding the Department of the East, sent to Washington on Saturday his recommendations for the improvements of Forts Hamilton and Schuyler, the fortifications commanding respectively the Atlantic and Long Island Sound approaches to the City of New York. In the face of Fort Hamilton, where present conditions are said by army men to be little less than a disgrace to the service, Gen. Grant asked for approximately $850,000, and for Fort Schuyler he requested about $250,000.

The plans for Fort Hamilton contemplate an extensive improvement of that fortification, which guards New York from the Atlantic side to a point beyond Sandy Hook. At present the garrison is short one company of coast artillery, owing to the necessity after the fire that recently destroyed a part of the barracks of transferring the Eleventh Company of Coast Artillery to Fort Adams, R. I., pending the appropriation by Congress of money to replace the destroyed portion. The officers' quarters are of the most inferior sort, while it is absolutely necessary that the barracks still in use be at least partially reconstructed if they are to be made decently habitable for the men who compose the garrison.

In his report to the War Department Gen. Grant submitted three different plans for the improvement of Fort Hamilton, and it is the second one that he recommends. A plan that was suggested by Col. Grenough, until recently commanding the fort, was not submitted, since, in Gen. Grant's opinion, the amount of money needed to carry it into effect is far greater than Congress would be likely to grant. Col. Grenough's plan called for an expenditure of about $800,000.

$600,000 for Fort Hamilton.

"The Army bill now before Congress," said Gen. Grant yesterday, "carries $350,000 for reconstruction work at Fort Hamilton and $250,000 for the purchase of additional land, needed for drill grounds, camping purposes, and rear fortifications for use in time of war. If this money is granted we will have enough to make the fort what it should be, one of the best in the country, and as it forms a most vital part of the defenses of New York, there is no reason why the money should not be forthcoming, for, as everybody knows, New York is the most important point, from a military standpoint, in the Union.

"Col. Grenough's plan were entirely too expensive, and contemplated improvements so extensive, and necessitated an appropriation of so much money, that they could not be entertained. After the receipt of Col. Grenough's plan I sent a Special Board to the fort to make new ones more in keeping with the amount of money that Congress may see fit to give us. If Congress votes the money all will be well and good, and if it fails to do so, of course we can do nothing.

"The three plans submitted by me are as follows: First, what I may call a cheap plan—that is, one that contemplates a plan of construction that would make the post at least decently habitable, and that would require the expenditure of the least possible amount of money. The second plan, and the one that I recommended, calls for the utilization of all the buildings that can be made serviceable for uses other than the housing of the officers and men, the construction of new quarters for the men composing the garrison, one of those barracks to be made by reconstructing the present post hospitals, the hospital to be replaced by a new and modern building. This plan if adopted will make of the post a park, and will leave ample room for such improvements as may be necessary to bring it up to date in years to come.

"The third plan contemplates a reconstruction of the entire post, and, if carried out, would make the post complete for present purposes, but would not leave room for improvements that may be necessary in the future. For the latter reason, as well as the greater cost, I did not recommend this plan.

Third Plan Not Recommended.

"Now, concerning the second plan, and the one that I hope Congress will give us permission to carry into effect. It can be carried out with an expenditure of a little less than $350,000, the amount for construction carried by the bill now before the House. Many of the buildings now on the reservation, with a few alterations, can be used for other purposes. It is the barracks and the officers' quarters, the hospital, and the present drill grounds where the greatest work is necessary.

"Most of the officers' quarters are frame buildings, rotten as can be, and should be pulled down. In other words, the living quarters of the post should all be replaced. Then there are the stables that were burned down just before the fire that destroyed part of the barracks, and they, of course, will have to be replaced. Until the barracks are replaced it will not be possible to bring back the battery of coast artillery that I had to send to Fort Adams after the recent fire.

Drill Grounds in Bad Shape.

"As for the drill grounds, there is a lot of work necessary there. They need filling in, and a system of drainage should be installed. At the present time whenever we have a hard rain the water settles in the centre of the ground, making drilling out of the question, sometimes a week at a time, and forming a splendid breeding place for mosquitos.

"Concerning the purchasing of the additional ground, for which the bill carries an additional $250,000, that land is necessary for various purposes. In time of war a garrison at least three times as strong as is necessary in time of peace would have to be assembled, and we would have to have suitable grounds for drilling and camping purposes, as well as the construction of rear fortifications to protect the exposed batteries in front.

"The fortifications at Fort Hamilton are perfect, the guns modern and up-to-date, and no money is needed for improvement there. It is the garrison proper that must be made decently habitable, and until that is done Fort Hamilton will not be what it should be, one of the finest fortifications in every respect in the United States."

Next Gen. Grant discussed Fort Schuyler, the fortification at the entrance to the East River from Long Island Sound.

"Fort Schuyler," he said, "needs money for extensive repairs, and guarding as it does the Long Island Sound approach to the city, it is almost as vital to the defense of the port as is Fort Hamilton. Why, up there the officers' quarters and the barracks are so rotten that the concussion of the guns at present in place would shake them all down should it become necessary to defend New York from an enemy approaching by that route.

"Fort Schuyler, you know, is on a narrow strip of land, and the buildings should be built with the idea of the great strength of the batteries in mind. To make this post what it should be we need about $250,000, and I have recommended the expenditure of that amount. As in the case of Fort Hamilton, I hope that we will not be disappointed.

"Another fort," concluded Gen. Grant, "that needs money is Fort Slocum, the post where the important work of the training of recruits is carried on. New quarters for officers and men are necessary there, but the improvements contemplated are not so extensive as in the case of the other two forts. However, a recruit should be as well treated as a veteran, and there is no reason why Congress should not appropriate the money for the improvements there, too."

TO BUILD HAVANA HOTEL.

Ne Yorkers in a Syndicate to Put Up $1,500,000 Structure.

A number of New Yorkers are interested in a syndicate formed to build and operate a large modern hotel in Havana. A site has already been obtained, and work will be commenced inside of sixty days. The carrying out of the enterprise will entail an expenditure of about $1,500,000.

Cuban advices state that the heavy travel of the present season has swamped the hotels in Havana, and that travelers from the United States who were willing to pay all the way from $10 to $40 a day have been compelled to stay at cheap hotels because all the better ones were filled.

The new hotel is to have 312 rooms, 211 of which will have baths. The prices for rooms are planned to be those which prevail in first-class hotels in the large cities throughout the States, and will be less than accommodations cost at the principal existing Havana hotels. The new hotel will occupy half a city block, in close proximity to the ocean front. It will have five stories, and there will be a roof garden, an electric lighting and power system, and elevators.

The Havana Hotel Company has been organized under the laws of the State of Maine. Among the New Yorkers concerned in the enterprise are J. M. Ceballos of J. M. Ceballos & Co., Daniel Bacon, President of the West India Steamship Company; George Frederick Victor of Victor & Achelis, Squire Garnsey, Treasurer of the Santa Cecilia Sugar Company; Charles Scribner of Charles Scribner's Sons, H. W. Bennett, President, and M. H. Lewis, Vice President, of the Cuba Eastern Railroad Company, and A. W. Eager.

SAY IT'S COCKRAN'S BEST.

Congressman's Friends Enthusiastic Over His Speech for To-night.

Congressman W. Bourke Cockran has been working for three days preparing for his speech to-night at the special meeting of the Tammany General Committee, when he will, at the instance of Charles F. Murphy and the powers of the Wigwam, lay down the Tammany platform for the coming Fall campaign.

Resolutions have been prepared by Congressman Cockran, and they will be offered by him to-night as a preliminary to his speech. These resolutions cover all of the issues of the day, such as insurance, gas, municipal ownership, the Philippines massacre, rate legislation, and the like, and have been designed to erect a broad platform on which Democrats may unite. The resolutions originally were covered in about 3,000 words, but since he drew them first Mr. Cockran has cut the document to about 1,500 words, and it now is in final form. His speech on the resolutions is likely to occupy nearly two hours. His friends declare it will be the masterpiece of his oratorical career.

TURNED TO TRAIN'S PATH.

Woman Crossed the Track, Then Became Confused and Was Killed.

While on her way to church yesterday Mrs. Mary Smith, 50 years old, who lived with Mrs. Martin Brennan of 24 Prince Street, Orange, N. J., was run over and instantly killed in that city by the westbound Morristown express.

As Mrs. Smith approached the Lackawanna crossing at Prince Street the gates were lowered for the approaching express train. Mrs. Smith, who was in a hurry, stooped under them and started to cross the tracks. The gateman shouted a warning to her, but the woman was deaf and did not hear him. She got across the track before she saw the train, but catching sight of the big locomotive, became confused, stopped, and then, turning, walked squarely in front of the train.

CROWD AT THEIR WEDDING.

Six Policemen Needed to Keep Throng of East Side Guests in Line.

There was another of the largest east side weddings last night, when Miss May Jochdors, daughter of the President of the Congregation Agudath Achim M. Krakau, 54 Pitt Street, was married to Dr. Jacob Leon Kronfeld of Henry and Clinton Streets.

After the religious service had been performed by the Rev. Mr. Grachman the wedding feast was spread in the Lenox Assembly Rooms, 254 Second Street. Fifty carriages and automobiles blocked the way, and it took six large policemen to stem the crowd that desired to felicitate and bride and bridegroom.

BRICKMAKERS MAY STRIKE.

Trouble Impending at All the Yards Along the Hudson.

The unions in the brickmakers and allied trades, including the boatmen in the brickyards along the Hudson, now say a general strike for recognition of the union and higher wages is pending. The headquarters of the unions are at Haverstraw, where most of the big employers also have their headquarters.

A report was made at yesterday's meeting of the Central Federated Union by a committee appointed to see the brickyard and boat owners on behalf of the brickmakers and boatmen. The committee reported that one of the most prominent brickyard owners in Haverstraw said that he was willing to meet the men in conference, but admitted he would join in a general lock-out if one was ordered.

The Secretary was then instructed to notify the brickyard and boat owners along the Hudson that unless they consented to a conference before March 25 aggressive measures would be taken. It was stated afterward that in case of a strike or lock-out the New York building unions will be asked not to handle material from these yards.

HAMBURG CANAL STRIP BIDS.

Boston Firm Offers Buffalo $901,000 for the Property.

BUFFALO, March 18.—Controller Zimmerman has received the following bids for the Hamburg Canal strip: Lee Higginson & Co., Boston, $901,000; David H. Forgan, broker, Chicago, $750,000; New York Central, $405,000; Lehigh Valley, $335,000.

BOSTON, March 18.—James J. Storrow, a representative of Lee Higginson & Co., refused to-day to discuss the bid for the Hamburg Canal strip further than to say that Lee Higginson & Co. were bidding for a client and not for themselves. It had been reported among railroad men here that the Boston firm was acting in the interest of a railroad, either the Wabash or the Canadian Pacific, and that the canal strip would furnish an entrance into Buffalo.

Held Prisoner in Tunnel Air Lock.

Frank Miller, one of the night shifts in the tunnel running from Fifteenth Street, Jersey City, to Morton Street, Manhattan, was held prisoner in the air lock at the Jersey City side for several hours Saturday night. The machinery of the cage running from the lock to the surface went wrong and closed the door of the lock so tight that it could not be opened.

ROCKEFELLER, JR., BACK WITH HIS BIBLE CLASS

Lengthens Social Session to Talk with the Members.

LECTURES TO THEM ON SIN

The Sowing of Wild Oats Not Essential, He Says—Sin a Reality, However.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., returned to his Bible class in the Fifth Avenue Baptist Church yesterday after two week's absence, with evident pleasure. He declared after his talk to the members that the exchange of greetings in the social session after class was particularly delightful to him, and he urged as many as did not have to hurry away to go into the adjoining room to the church and spend a few minutes with him.

Young Mr. Rockefeller's class is not made up of men who show wealth or success by their clothes. There are many members who are of humble station in life. They shake hands and chat with the class leader to their mutual delight, and yesterday the wealthy young leader lecturing seemed more than ever to desire to prolong this gathering.

Many States of the Union are represented in the class, and some of the various nations may be told by accents distinctive. Smith, "the Scotchman," who says he has no particular religion, but believes that all of them are good, has been a member five years. He gets up and talks whenever a question is raised by Mr. Rockefeller. There is a South Carolina man who worked on a salary which would not have kept a church mouse fat, as another member explained, and who is now the Treasurer of one of the biggest publishing houses in the city; Mr. Troxell, the President of the class, is from a little town in Maryland; there is an Ohioan who has been a newspaper man in this country and England and who has quit that business for church work; there is a stalwart negro with considerable learning in Biblical lore, and gray heads and flaxen heads that hail from every part of the earth.

"I speak from my own experience," said Mr. Rockefeller yesterday. "The social gathering after the class gives us a fine opportunity to know one another, and as far as I am concerned it is a great pleasure. Some of you have to hurry away right after class, but I wish that every man who can spare the few minutes would come into the adjoining room for the few minutes we have together."

Mr. Rockefeller's talk yesterday was on "Sin." His view is that the man who says he has no sin in him is without moral conscience or has been hardened.

"What is sin, whence it came, and what it is leading to are problems," he said, "but we know of the reality of sin because of the sin in our own lives. The world undertakes to question its reality; the world calls it the folly of youth, the sowing of wild oats, and the world never said a wickeder thing when it said that the sowing of wild oats was essential. We have seen many men hopelessly lost through following that advice. Every time a man does a wrong thing it is a little harder for him to do the right thing the next time there is a question between right and wrong.

"Because many of us learn that fire burns by burning ourselves it does not follow that that is the wisest way to discover the fact. We should know about evil, not, however, of its alluring and fascinating elements, but through the agony and suffering and misery it brings in the world. Evil is everywhere, and in every department of our lives, and the man who is blind to that is a weak man, for if he knew this he would strengthen himself against temptation.

"He who gave us life has a right to demand a proper use of that life. You and I would like the religion of Pharaoh because it is an easy religion. It is a religion which requires only the observance of the ceremonials, to do what the laws require, and after that to do as we please. Such a religion does not lead to the life Christ led, but to the religious life before Christ came. A man cannot judge of his own purity by prescribed standards. It is not enough to say that you have obeyed the law and have gone to church and done the other things required ceremonially. It is through your own conscience and moral sense that you can do right.

"Pharaoh had his warning, and warnings come to us all when we lead sinful lives. We have never seen a wicked, selfish man come to a state of happiness or a happy death bed in the end."

Of Pharaoh's stubbornness and the plagues and punishments that befell him Mr. Rockefeller said in applying the Egyptian's case to his lesson of to-day:

"Punishment cannot save men; it may save the community from an evil man, but it does not save the man who is sent to prison. There is only one power that can save us, and that is the love of God. God sacrificed His Son to show His love for us. The love of a mother for her child is the only love that we may compare to this great love of God for us. It is a sacrificial love, giving everything for it. Let us ask this love and try to deserve it."

Next Thursday the class will have its second quinquennial reunion in the church. Mark Twain, Timothy L. Woodruff, Martin W. Littleton, Mr. Rockefeller, the leader; Dr. Fagnani, and others will speak.

COLLECTION TAKEN UP TWICE.

Once Without Authorization, and a Morristown Church Visitor Is Arrested

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., March 18.—A sleek-looking man walked into the Church of the Assumption this morning and sat down in a rear pew. After the collection had been taken up and part of it deposited in a small basket in the anteroom the man arose and walked out.

Soon afterward it was discovered that some of the collection was missing. The stranger was found walking leisurely about the streets and taken to Police Headquarters, where he was searched. He was charged with the theft, but protested his innocence, although $8 in change was found in his pockets, which was about the amount taken at the church.

He gave the name Simeon Monahan, 14 Harton Street, Newark. He was committed to the county jail.

Paine's Volunteer Grave Guard Ill.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., March 18.—Capt. George W. Lloyd, who for forty years has voluntarily cared for the grave of Thomas Paine, author of "The Age of Reason," was taken seriously ill yesterday and removed to the New Rochelle Hospital, where he is in a critical condition. Capt. Lloyd is 87 years old. Only a few days ago he lost his wife. He is suffering from an old injury which he sustained while serving as a spy in the Confederate Army before Richmond.

Hearing on Niagara Bills To-morrow.

There will be a public hearing at Albany at 2 P. M. to-morrow on bills relating to the further diversion of water from Niagara River for power purposes. The American Scenic and Historic Preservation Society appeals to those interested in the protection of Niagara to attend this hearing and speak for the protection of the Falls. The society thinks that this is the psychological moment to protest.

RUNAWAY DUE TO FAT MAN.

Weight Capsized Surrey—Followed a Wild Dash Down Amsterdam Avenue.

Three hundred pounds caused an exciting runaway on Amsterdam Avenue late yesterday afternoon, in which three men were dumped into a snow pile, a surrey demolished, a telegraph pole smashed, a horse injured, and hundreds of people put to rout. The runaway galloped down the avenue thirteen blocks, followed by two policemen, who gave chase in an electric car. The animal was captured at Eighty-third Street.

Charles Hoffman of 447 West Fifty-second Street, who tips the scales at an even 300, invited Fred Schneider of 461 West Fifty-second Street and Michael Clements of 764 Tenth Avenue, a hotel keeper, to go driving with him. The horse was going down Amsterdam Avenue when at Ninety-sixth Street one of the rear wheels of the surrey got stuck in a car track.

Clements, who was driving, swerved to the right to get clear of it. As he did so the right hind wheel struck a snowbank and the surrey was slightly tilted. The vehicle would have righted itself if the heavy Hoffman had not been sitting in the rear seat on the left-hand side. His weight overbalanced the surrey and it toppled over.

All three men were tipped out and the horse bolted. At Eighty-eighth Street he took to the sidewalk and sent the surrey crashing against a telegraph pole, splitting it and demolishing the vehicle. The animal ran on until Policemen Ruth and Eckweiler of the West 100th Street Station, who had pressed a southbound Amsterdam Avenue electric car, crowded with passengers, into service, overtook him at Eighty-third Street.

As the policemen leaped from the car a young man seized the horse's bridle and managed to check his flight until help came.

HE KEPT A MODEL SALOON.

Markel Held to His Ideal and Made a Fortune.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, March 18.—Frank Merkel, who conducted a saloon at 546 Smithfield Street as he thought a church would conduct one, died last night.

In the quarter of a century that Merkel kept a saloon here he never had a remonstrance filed against him. His place was never open on Sunday, Christmas, or any other holiday. He said that men should remain at home with their families on such days instead of crowding into saloons, where they remained too long and drank too much.

If a man entered the place intoxicated he was told to go out. If he did not go he was put out. If a man drank so much that he was nearing intoxication the drinks were stopped. If a disorderly argument started the place was cleared until order was restored, and there was never a fight in the place.

Although Merkel's saloon was dingy and poorly furnished it was patronized by many business and professional men. He died, leaving an estate of several hundred thousand dollars, all made out of the saloon.

PLANS A LABOR THEATRE.

Julius Hopp Would Use It to Extend the Union Propaganda.

Julius Hopp, Chairman and manager of the Progressive Stage Society, wrote to the Central Federated Union yesterday asking its co-operation in establishing a labor theatre. The letter was signed "For art and labor, Julius Hopp."

Mr. Hopp proposed by means of plays to extend the labor union propaganda. He asked that a committee be sent to attend a special meeting under the auspices of the Theatre of Labor in the Berkeley Lyceum Theatre on Sunday, April 1.

The Progressive Stage Society has already given several plays in which stanch union men were the heroes and came out triumphant, while the non-union villains were always foiled.

The members of the Actors' Protective Union do not like the Theatre of Labor, although several officers of labor unions are on its Executive Committee, and the coming meeting will be addressed by a number of labor men. Henry De Veaux of the Actors' Protective Union, which is composed of variety actors, said that he did not like anything that was not a strictly labor union concern.

Several delegates said that they had investigated the plan, and that it would be good for organized labor. It was decided to leave the question of co-operation to the Executive Board Committee.

OUR TRADE WITH EUROPE.

Merchandise Worth $1,021,000,000 Exported There in 1905.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Europe takes two-thirds of the exports of the United States, and supplies practically one-half of the imports, says a bulletin issued by the Department of Commerce and Labor. Of the $1,021,000,000 worth of merchandise sent to Europe in 1905, $239,000,000 was manufactures, the other $782,000,000 worth being largely foodstuffs and manufacturers' materials. In 1900 the exports to Europe crossed the billion-dollar line, and since then have averaged about $1,050,000,000 per annum.

In 1900 the exports to all sections of the world other than Europe were $354,000,000 in value; in 1905 they were $498,000,000, the growth since 1900 in exports to the non-European countries having been proportionately greater than that to Europe.

Prior to 1890, the share of the imports drawn from Europe averaged about 55 per cent.; in 1905, it was 48.4 per cent. This reduction, the bulletin says, is apparently accounted for by the growing demand in the United States for tropical and sub-tropical products, which are supplied almost exclusively by the other grand divisions of the world. The value of these products brought into the United States in 1905 was $508,000,000 against $203,000,000 in 1895.

REDMOND VERY HOPEFUL.

Believes England Will Soon Give Ireland All She Demands.

LONDON, March 18.—John Redmond, addressing a St. Patrick's Day demonstration at Manchester to-day, made the most hopeful speech yet heard from the Irish leader. He said he believed that Ireland had turned the corner, that the record of the last elections would never be reversed, and that the England of the future would give to Ireland all that she could reasonably expect or demand.

Time, said Mr. Redmond, would be given to the Government to fulfill the pledges contained in the King's speech. The Nationalists had confidence in it, and would not contemplate the possibility of being forced to turn their weapons upon the Government as they had turned them upon previous Governments.

WHACKS FOR MR. FORT.

East Orangeites Sarcastic Over an Expatriation Bill of His.

A delegation of citizens of East Orange living on State Street will appear before the members of the East Orange City Council to-night to show their resentment and to oppose actively a plan of Franklin W. Fort, a son of Supreme Court Justice J. Franklin Fort, to force them to become residents of Orange.

Mr. Fort has as a client Harry T. Ambrose, President of the American Book Company, who lives in Centre Street, Orange. Mr. Ambrose has a tract of land in Centre Street, Orange, which he wants annexed to East Orange, and the City of Orange has said that it will have no objection provided property making up for the tax ratables lost through the Ambrose transaction is given by East Orange to Orange. Mr. Fort prepared a plan for legislating State Street into Orange, and Assembly Bill No. 417, now in the hands of the Municipal Corporation Committee at Trenton, was framed to carry this out.

The State Street residents called a mass meeting on Saturday night at the home of William R. Britton. Every resident of State Street was present, and Councilmen Lindsley and Yardley were invited too. Mr. Fort wasn't invited, but he heard of the meeting and attended.

Mr. Yardley explained the objects of the Assembly bill. The bond of friendship between Mr. Yardley and Mr. Fort is about as strong as a piece of worsted. Mr. Yardley is a Citizens' Union graduate, and has been fighting "the gang" for many years. He and Mr. Fort, who is not a Citizens' Union man, had a fight of words a few days ago. After Mr. Yardley spoke Mr. Fort told of the hard time he had had with the matter, and then referred to the East Orangeites as "spots on a blueprint." He said he had forgotten they were individuals. He then declared he was tired of the fight, and would stop the action in the City Council and would also see that the bill in the Legislature would be killed.

George H. Austin replied in a sarcastic vein. Frank B. Colton said that he was much impressed with the powerful control Mr. Fort had over the City Council and the Legislature. He said he was glad Mr. Fort was going to the Council and to the Legislature to kill the bill, but added that a committee of the State Streeters would go along too, just to see that the work was done thoroughly.

TOOK THEM AT THEIR WORD.

President Venable Called Bluff of College Baseball Team.

Special to The New York Times.

CHAPEL HILL, N. C., March 18.—Purity in athletics has been carried to such a point here in the University of North Carolina that President Venable succeeded only with the greatest difficulty in quelling a real mutiny.

It all came about because a star catcher, one "Wally" James by name, accepted a bonus of $5 for a base hit more than a year ago. Some enthusiastic rooter on the third base waved a couple of greenbacks over his head and said they belonged to the man who "delivered the goods." "Wally" made the hit, and the greenbacks were soon snugly reposing in his pocket.

When the baseball season opened the Advisory Committee decided to make investigation into the records of the candidates for the team. They rejected James for taking the bonus. The team, much perturbed, threatened to resign unless James was made a member of it.

"Very well," responded President Venable.

This unexpected acquiescence caused consternation in the team, and the threat was not made good.

DEMOCRATS WIDE APART ON RATE BILL POLICY

Conference of Senators Brings Out Many Differences.

THEY MAY CONFER WEEKLY

Hopes of Agreement in the End—Partisanship Not to be Urged for the Present.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Seventeen Democratic Senators gathered at the suburban home of Senator Newlands in Cleveland Park this afternoon to discus the party course in the Senate on the rate question. Those present were Senators Bailey, Dubois, Tillman, Foster, Martin, Pettus, Newlands, Overman, Patterson, Latimer, McCreary, Simmons, Blackburn, Culberson, Frazier, Clay, and Rayner.

The conference lasted two and a half hours, and covered the whole range of proposed action on the rate question. There was a free discussion of the various amendments that have been prepared by the different Democratic Senators.

The first proposition taken up was whether the Democrats, as a party matter, should insist on a "maximum rate" amendment, or should support the idea of giving the Inter-State Commerce Commission power to fix rates absolutely.

The next question was whether they should vote to retain in the bill the much-discussed word "reasonable" or make it "justly compensatory" in order to meet the Constitutional limitations upon the power of Congress in legislating upon property or personal rights.

The third matter discussed was the extent to which they should go in framing a court review amendment. There was no agreement among the Senators present in favor of such an amendment, nor was there anything like unanimity of opinion as to the insertion of a clause limiting the power of the courts to enjoin the immediate enforcement of a new rate by the Inter-State Commerce Commission. All the amendments discussed were in written form, and were read and analyzed by the Senators who urged them.

The conference failed to agree on a course of action as to any of the propositions considered. It was found that there exists such a division of sentiment among the Democrats that no agreement is to be expected at this stage of the discussion. Indeed, several Senators present said that no one had had any idea that there would be an agreement at this conference, and it is likely that similar meetings will take place weekly during the consideration of the Hepburn bill for a general comparison of views with the idea of getting together, ultimately, if possible, on common ground.

There was no discussion of the possible agreement of the Republicans on the court review amendment or of what course the Democrats would take as a party if the Republicans should get together. The idea was that the consideration of the rate bill was still for the most part non-partisan, and that no necessity existed for setting up partisan landmarks as yet.

There was more support for the proposition advanced by Senator Bailey for limitations on the enjoining power of the courts than was expected.

LYMAN J. GAGE RETIRING.

Will Leave Presidency of United States Trust Company and Rest.

Lyman J. Gage, ex-Secretary of the Treasury of the United States, announced yesterday that he would in a few weeks retire as President of the United States Trust Company.

"I have been working fifty-five years and am near 70 now," he said to a TIMES reporter yesterday, in his apartments at 14 East Sixtieth Street, "and if I'm ever going to take any leisure it is about time for me to begin. I have been obeying other people's wishes for a long time, and now I am going to do just as I please. As a private citizen I will have the right to follow my own inclinations entirely."

"Have you made any plans for your future?" was asked.

"None, except that I will travel," he replied.

"Has there been any disagreement between yourself and the officers of the company or any other business reason for your retirement?"

"None at all," he said. "Everything has been harmonious and satisfactory."

Mr. Gage said that the United States Trust Company was about the only concern in which he was actively engaged, so that his retirement would be practically from all business activity.

"I have been in the public eye for some time," Mr. Gage added, "and am glad to get out of it."

While Mr. Gage knows who is to succeed him, he said yesterday that he did not think it proper to give any information on the subject. Frank A. Vanderlip, Vice President of the City National Bank, who was Assistant Secretary of the Treasury under Mr. Gage and at one time Mr. Gage's private secretary, has been mentioned as his successor, but Mr. Vanderlip said yesterday that he was not to be the new head of the company.

James S. Clark, Vice President of the United States Trust Company, is also soon to retire, his intention to leave the company having been announced before Mr. Gage told the Trustees that he contemplated leaving the Presidency.

CIRCUS BOSS SLUGGED.

Supt. Hyatt Knocked Down and Robbed in the Railroad Yards.

Frank Hyatt, the veteran Superintendent of the Barnum & Bailey Circus, will probably lose an eye as the result of an attack made upon him by foodpads in the Mott Haven railroad yards early yesterday morning. He also has a broken nose and numerous lacerations of his face and body.

The paraphernalia for the big show had all been unloaded and started for the Madison Square Garden, and Hyatt had started down through the yards to give some instructions to the men in charge of the empty trains, when he was attacked from behind and nearly stunned by a blow from some heavy weapon, presumably a slungshot. Although he was dazed, Mr. Hyatt struggled with his assailants, who numbered, he thinks, two or three, but he was quickly overcome, robbed of a small amount of money, and left lying between the tracks temporarily helpless. Just how long he remained there he doesn't know, but about 4 o'clock he tottered into the Garden. He could only explain that he had been attacked by footpads, and that he had been brought to the Garden by a cabman that he had been fortunate enough to find in Willis Avenue, when he fainted.

An Exhibition in West Africa.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—An agricultural exhibition is to be held in Lagos, West Africa, in November, 1906, under the auspices of the Lagos Government, states the British Colonial Secretary. Exhibits of any simple implements or machinery suitable for the cultivation or preparation of the principal products of the colony—palm oil, palm kernels, rubber, cotton, maize, cocoa, coffee, shea butter, mahogany, &c.—are invited. As the plantations have no draught animals at present, exhibits of hand implements and machines would be most suitable.

LIQUID AIR FOR COMMERCE.

Consul Describes Results Obtained By a French Inventor.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Consul Brunot of Saint-Etienne writes that a group of savants of the Académie des Sciences, Paris, very recently paid a visit to a factory at Boulogne-sur-Seine to witness the manufacture for industrial purposes of enormous quantities of oxygen and nitrogen, extracted in a liquid state from atmospheric air.

Georges Claude, the inventor of the process, furnished the explanations. As the liquid oxygen flowed out from the generator it was of a bluish hue, while the nitrogen was colorless. Several experiments were made for the visitors to prove the importance of having an abundant supply of oxygen at one's disposal; a forge set up in the grounds showed the wonderful effects of the gas. The fire, which had almost died out, was immediately rendered incandescent by a current of hydroxide from the blowpipe. A bar of iron was brought to a red heat and then melted like lead. Two pieces of iron were welded in a few minutes by the aid of a powerful flame from the blowpipe.

Much costly and tedious riveting will be no longer necessary; iron will be welded against iron, copper against copper, &c. The doctors already foresee the possible treatment with liquid air of certain affections of microbian origin, such as osteomyelitis, anthrax, and the malignant disease of the skin termed lupus.

Liquid air has been tried in mines as an explosive agent, and for this purpose marl is wet with petroleum and then saturated with liquid air. The paste thus formed constitutes a good explosive when fired with fulminate, and has the advantage, when it hangs fire, of being without danger, as the liquid air evaporates very rapidly.

The price of oxygen, according to M. Claude, for industrial purposes will not exceed 4 to 6 mills per cubic meter. It is believed that it will be possible to use liquid air as a motor power.

MISS BURDEN LOSES "ZIZI."

Though Not an Irish Setter, He Followed the St. Patrick's Parade.

As the St. Patrick's Day parade was marching in Fifth Avenue, near Ninety-second Street, Saturday afternoon, a diminutive Pomeranian spaniel sat on the curb wagging his tail in approval. One of the marchers took a fancy to him and snapped his fingers. The dog jumped from the curb and ran into the ranks.

"Sure, it's a foine dog, Mike," said the man whom the spaniel approached.

"He's worth somethin', that pet," replied the other, lifting the dog and examing the collar. Inscribed upon the plate on a leather band was the name "Zizi."

"He's too good for us," rejoined the first parader, and the dog was dropped to the pavement. Instead of returning to the curb where he first sat, the dog trotted behind the marchers and kept on up the avenue.

Ten minutes later Miss Eva Burden, daughter of I. Townsend Burden of 2 East Ninety-second Street, had the servants of the household out on the street hunting for Zizi. They could not find him. Then Miss Burden sent advertisements to the newspapers, offering a reward. She says that Zizi has been lost several times. Owing to his predilection for running away she has a special playground for him behind her home.

"And to think," she said last night, "he may have run away with that big parade. Now if he were an Irish setter we could appreciate it, couldn't we? But when he's only a Pomeranian, how can we account for it?"

MERSINA A TRADE GATEWAY.

Railroads in Asitaic Turkey Increasing Its Importance.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Consul Norton reports from Smyrna that the purchase of the Mersina-Adana Railway by the Anatolian Railroad Company means the increasing importance of Mersina as a seaport, through which will flow the trade of Mesopotamia and the upper Euphrates Valley. The Anatolian Line is now in operation from the docks at Haidar Pasha, opposite Constantinople, via Afioun Kara Hissari, Konieh, and Eregli to Bulgurlu, a distance of nearly 500 miles, and within 75 miles of Adana, where it will connect with the newly acquired line to Mersina. From Adana the railroad will push on toward Bagdad.

Trade now finding an outlet at Alexandretta will naturally be diverted to the railroad port of Mersina, or hurried by rail to Haidar Pasha, ferried across the Bosphorus, thence to the Oriental Railway, running northward to Vienna, &c. Smyrna may also come in for a larger share of this Asiatic trade, as railroad connection exists between Smyrna and Afioun Kara Hissari, on the Anatolian Railway.

Consul Norton also states that the new French railway from the port of Beirut to Aleppo will be finished within a year. The Anatolian Company will also build a branch line south to Aleppo from its main railway to Bagdad. Beirut is also the terminus of the present line to Damascus, which is extending to Mecca.

Japan's Timber Industry.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Consul General Miller of Yokohama makes an interesting report on the timber industry in Hakkaido Island, which is the northern island of Japan. He says that many of the samples he has seen are very attractive, susceptible to high polish, and are used in Japan for furniture and for interior finish in houses. He believes that a good trade between the Pacific Coast and Hakkaido could be built up by utilizing ships that are bringing fish from Alaska to Japan to carry timber as return cargo.

Allendale Race Track Sold.

Word was received by Mayor F. Brush of Mount Vernon, yesterday, that the Allendale trotting track, on the outskirts of the city, was sold Saturday to a syndicate of New York real estate brokers. The tract consists of about two hundred acres, and it is said that the price paid was $500,000. The syndicate will make a park of the property, and cut it into restricted building lots.

MORTGAGE TAX BRINGS $514,459 IN HALF YEAR

But Tax Board Believes Amount Will Be Greatly Increased.

COST OF COLLECTION $38,034

Real Estate Assessments in New York City Show a Growth of $480,000,000 in the Year.

ALBANY, March 18.—The total amount of money collected from all the counties of the State under the mortgage tax law for the first six months of its operation was $514,459.52, and the aggregate expense of collecting this amount was $38,034.85, or a trifle less than 8 per cent., according to the annual report of the State Board of Tax Commissioners, made public here to-night.

"These figures, however, are misleading at this time," says the report, "for the reason that there are included in the item of expenses the supplies for recording officers for nearly a full year, while the item of mortgage tax receipts fails to include a large number of mortgages (those payable on demand or one day after date) which are permitted to be recorded without the payment of any tax at the time of recording, and therefore not until after June 30 next, when the taxes upon these mortgages shall have become due, can it be correctly stated what the present law will produce.

"It is safe to say that the amount of receipts at that time will be large in comparison with the amount already collected, and in addition thereto the regular annual taxes will accrue. In New York and Kings Counties mortgages aggregating $750,000,000 were recorded in 1905. A flat rate of five mills would yield for the entire State approximately $4,000,000."

The report states that returns for 1905 of the assessed value of real and personal property are not yet available, but that tentative assessments in the City of New York show an increase in real estate of $480,000,000, as against $173,000,000 in 1904 and $281,000,000 in 1903. On this subject the report says:

"The increases in real estate assessments are practically held on the books, but personal assessments are vague guesses and must necessarily be so in large cities under our tax law. From a tentative assessment of $3,500,000,000, 80 per cent. is sworn off nearly every year for reasons so frequently given. It is conceded to be impossible to equitably tax personal property and real estate on the same basis; in fact, the attempt to do this works injustice and inequality, and only by taxing them at different rates suited to each class can we hope to attain approximate equality."

The value of real estate exempt from taxation during the year was $1,389,333,411, an increase of $31,438,429 over that of the preceding year. The number of corporations, firms, and individuals required to make reports for the year 1905 was 1,728.

EUROPE INVESTING HERE.

Last Week's Gold Import Made Possible by Heavy Shipments of Our Securities to Other Side.

The upward movement of exchange rates this past week and the slight advance which occurred in the London price for bar gold, following the taking there for American account of $1,250,000 on Monday last, prevented any further imports of gold, even under the special conditions which governed the transaction successfully carried through by the National City Bank. It was acknowledged in connection with this import of gold that it was made possible only by the fact that bills of exchange drawn against shipments of securities had been obtained by the bank on specially favorable terms. This indeed is an interesting feature of last week's gold engagement in London. Europe has been buying our securities on a large scale, and with every indication of confidence in the outlook for American enterprises. Besides the very large purchases of American stocks and bonds for Dutch account, to which reference was recently made in these columns, there has been large demand for our securities from France and Germany and other European countries.

It is this movement of our securities to the other side which was largely responsible for the recent depression in exchange and also to a large extent for the contraction in loans, which have enabled the New York City banks to maintain their surplus reserves practically unchanged for several weeks past, despite heavy losses in cash to the interior and to the Sub-Treasury.

A factor which in the opinion of some bankers will greatly increase the French demand for American securities is the probable unwillingness of the French investor to tie up his resources in the future to anything like the extent to which he has tied them up in the past in Russian bonds. While the French market has as a whole shown wonderful reserve during the trying periods in recent Russian history, it can hardly be doubted that the appetite of the French investor for Russian securities has been diminished by the period of apprehension through which he has passed. The influence has admittedly had important influence upon the movement of Dutch capital into American securities. To a less extent the same influence is probably at work in Germany. Among the recent American issues in which Germany has taken a large interest are the bonds of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and the notes of the Mexican Central Railway. Recent Berlin advices have laid stress on the freedom with which German capital is drifting toward American securities.

LYNCHED FOR THEFT OF COW.

Negro Taken from Posse in Louisiana and Hanged.

Special to The New York Times.

CRESCENT, La., March 18.—William Carr, a negro cattle thief, was discovered last night butchering a cow belonging to a planter living near here. The negro escaped, but later Constable Marioneaux and a posse surrounded his house and captured him. The posse started for the parish jail, but were stopped by fifty armed and masked men, who took the prisoner and hanged him to a tree by the roadside.

The lynching is deprecated, but it is said in excuse that the negro had a bad reputation, was a confirmed cattle and corn thief, and was under bail for trial on the charge of stealing corn from the E. J. Gay Planting Company.

ROCKEFELLER RESIGNATIONS.

Significance from Wall Street's Point of View of the Withdrawals from Missouri Pacific Board.

Notwithstanding statements made by representatives of the Gould interests that the retirement of the Standard Oil representatives from the Missouri Pacific board last week had no significance, Wall Street was strongly of the opinion that the resignation of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., and E. Parmelee Prentice was a matter of considerable importance to the Missouri Pacific and the Gould interests in general. This view of the case was, if anything, strengthened by the course of Missouri Pacific stock during the week. The report for the year, 1905, it is true, made a very unfavorable showing, but in some quarters a disposition was shown to attribute the decline in the stock from above par to 92 more to the retirement of the Standard Oil representatives than to the publication of the year's earnings, which had been previously made known in the usual monthly statements of earnings.

One reason, possibly the chief reason, why Wall Street regards the retirement of the Standard Oil representatives as important for the Gould interests is the fact that the several Gould properties are engaged in varied undertakings requiring for their completion a lage amount of capital. The Goulds heretofore have profited by the nominal if not the actual backing of the Rockefellers, but the retirement of young Mr. Rockefeller and Mr. Prentice seems to remove even the semblance of the support of the interests which they represent.

The severance of the relations of the Rockefellers with the Goulds has been progressive. The determination of George J. Gould to construct the Western Pacific resulted in his resignation from the Union Pacific Board, and later in the retirement of E. H. Harriman from the Directorate of the Denver and Rio Grande. Last year the Rockefeller interests, which are intimately allied with the Union Pacific, withdrew from the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, and now their representatives have withdrawn from the Missouri Pacific.

The Gould roads still have much uphill work before then to bring to completion the ocean-to-ocean line which Mr. Gould has made it his ambition to control. Money has already been provided for the construction of the main line of the Western Pacific and for some of the proposed branches of that road, but the scheme in its entirety may well call for more than the $50,000,000 that has already been secured for the construction of the road. In the East much work remains to be done before the new disconnected portions of the Gould system are brought into effective co-operation. In all the financing that is necessary to carry these projects to completion Rockefeller support would have been a valuable asset. Wall Street is of the opinion that the retirement of the Rockefeller representatives from the Gould properties means that this support will be lacking.

CIRCUS REHEARSAL TO-DAY.

Madison Square Garden Nearly Ready for Thursday's Opening.

Five hundred carpenters and as many helpers began work early yesterday morning getting Madison Square Garden ready for the opening of the Barnum & Bailey Circus season next Thursday evening. All day long the gaudily painted wagons, loaded with circus paraphernalia, and each drawn by a quartet of horses who can perform in the ring as well as draw a truck, arrived in steady streams at the entrance at Fourth Avenue and Twenty-seventh Street.

The men worked in relays, and just before noon the squad that had started soon after midnight was succeeded by another gang. The result was that by 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Garden had begun to assume its annual circus appearance. Perhaps a thousand loads of earth were dumped into the arena, and before night all three rings had been placed in position, the hippodrome track was nearing completion, and the rearrangement of the seats was under way.

The apparatus for "The Limit," a somersault in mid-air by a woman in an automobile, was placed in position during the afternoon, as was also the other automobile thriller, known as the "dip of death," which was seen here last season. The trapeze riggings, the aerial parallel bars, and the other apparatus needed to carry out the programme that will be presented next Thursday were also put up, and to-day the Garden will be ready for the first rehearsal.

Most of the animals were brought in yesterday, and by to-night practically all the cages will have been installed in the basement. Another important work that will be completed to-day will be the platforms on which the abnormalities will be exhibited. The tallest man in the world, the fattest girl, the smallest midget, the lion-faced boy, the "what is it," and the other human prodigies will assemble to-day for the purpose of becoming familiar with their new surroundings.

PATENT MEDICINE EVILS.

Bill for Exact Labels Is Approved by Y. M. C. A. Audience.

Patent medicines and their evils were again discussed at the Majestic Theatre meeting of the West Side Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association yesterday afternoon. Alfred L. Manierre described the Stevens-Wainwright bill for the labeling of proprietary medicines, with a list of their ingredients, and a resolution was passed in support of it.

"One feature of the relations of the Proprietary Medicine Association and the press," he said, "is that the former's advertising contracts carry a clause rendering the contract void in case of hostile legislation. This explains why many newspapers do not take up the question. I want to say, however, that THE NEW YORK TIMES a few days ago printed a column, and an editorial as well, in support of the bill. There were also short accounts of the hearing at Albany in The Mail and, I think, The Tribune and The Herald.

"I sent a copy of the bill to Earl Grey, Governor General of Canada, and he, in speaking to the Medical Faculty of McGill University, Montreal, declared that a similar measure was necessary for Canada."

Norman Hapgood of Collier's Weekly also spoke.

INVENTOR'S WEIRD STORY.

A St. Louis Man Says He Was Hypnotized, Kidnapped, and Robbed.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, March 18.—Hypnotized and kidnapped, held prisoner for hours, and robbed of $250 was what Carl Vickers, an inventor of a new type of automobile, told the police to-night had happened to him. His story was later substantiated in several important details and the police are inclined to believe it.

Friday evening he left the house on Finney Avenue to mail a letter, and was accosted by two men who insisted on walking beside him. They walked with him two blocks on Alphonsus Street, he says, against his wishes. He struck one of them in the face, knocking him down. The other then grappled with him, and the two, at the point of a revolver, put him in a carriage. He was warned not to cry out, and began to grow sleepy after the carriage had gone two blocks.

He asserts that from that point until he awoke in a room yesterday noon at the New Lindell Hotel, Sixth Street and Lucas Avenue, his mind was a blank. His money was gone, with the exception of 92 cents, which the clerk says Vickers had when he registered. Vickers says he had nothing to eat or drink, but that he was not ill treated.

ROBBERY RUINED GROCER AND CRAZED HIS WIFE

He's Lost His Store and She's in Bellevue Hospital.

ROBBERS USED CHLOROFORM

Then the Landlord, the Milkman, and the Baker Descended on Spielfogel in a Body.

In a one-story building in the rear of 71 Goerck Street the Delancey Street police found Asher Spielfogel yesterday, surrounded by his four children, none too well clad, looking into a dismal future. His wife Dora is in the observation ward at Bellevue. It is feared that she is hopelessly insane.

Spielfogel has lost his tenancy of the grocery store at 57 Columbia Street, out of which he has made a living for himself and family for a year or more. The landlord has dispossessed him. All this has happened to him through a robbery, he avers, and there is no reason to doubt his story.

The police seem to have doubted it, however. They did little in the way of trying to investigate the robbery or bring the robbers to justice until yesterday. They only took Spielfogel's wife away to Bellevue.

The most notable features of the robbery which undid him were not at first told by Spielfogel at all. They were told by his neighbors. Chief among them is Mrs. Max Winkler, who runs a butcher's shop at 59 Columbia Street. She insists that both Mr. and Mrs. Spielfogel were drugged or chloroformed before they were robbed. This is Mrs. Winkler's story:

She had occasion to go out into the yard in the rear of her butcher shop between 2 and 3 o'clock on Friday morning. The Spielfogels lived in the rear of their grocery store. It was damp and raw, and yet she noticed that Spielfogel's windows were up. She was about to investigate, when Mrs. Spielfogel rushed out of the house, clad only in her nightrobe. Her hair was flying about her head and she was yelling hysterically in Yiddish:

"There they are! There they are!"

Mrs. Winkler sought help in her own household. They tried to wake up Spielfogel, but he would not wake up. Finally, by battering at his feet, they succeeded in getting him to show some sign of life. With much difficulty they got him on his feet and fired a volley of questions at him. He couldn't answer them. About that time a man rushed into the areaway saying that a woman dressed only in her nightrobe was acting queerly in the street.

"It's your wife," said Mrs. Winkler to Spielfogel.

That seemed to bring back Spielfogel's wits. Rushing into a side room to put on some clothes, he went out to see what had happened to his wife.

Almost the first thing that he did was to look at his wife's neck. "The money! Our money!" he cried. The robber had torn away a little cloth bag which Mrs. Spielfogel had hanging about her throat. There were finger marks on her neck, indicating that the thief had choked her into silence. Spielfogel said that the bag had contained somewhere between $70 and $80, out of which they had expected to pay their rent.

It was believed by Spielfogel and his neighbors that Mrs. Spielfogel's senses would come back to her again, but they didn't. Later in the morning Policeman Corey of the Delancey Street Station was called in. He sent for an ambulance from Gouverneur Hospital. Dr. Lohmiller advised taking Mrs. Spielfogel to Bellevue. She went, without being able to make any intelligent statement about the robbery.

Soon after 7 o'clock the milkman and the baker arrived. They asked for the money Spielfogel owed them. In despair he threw up his hands and said:

"Take it! Take the store!"

And they did it. Soon the little stock which Spielfogel had in his place had all been carted away. Then the landlord told Spielfogel to go, too.

The little shed Spielfogel now occupies was offered to him by his sister, Mrs. Gussie Brenner, in the rear of 71 Goerck Street. There are four children: Minnie, 9 years old; Lena, 6; Sallie, 5, and Hynan, 4.

Spielfogel corroborated the story told by Mrs. Winkler. His impression was that the robbery had been committed by some one in the neighborhood who knew that his wife kept the money tied about her neck.

The police of the Delancey Street Station had the removal of Mrs. Spielfogel noted on the blotter, but nothing of the robbery. When the foregoing facts were told them they sent a plain clothes man to Spielfogel. The latter told him the story, pretty much as it appears above, in the presence of the reporters.

ROOSEVELT AND NAVY YARD.

Unions Get the President's Letter on Building Battleships Here.

The organizations in the trades represented in the Brooklyn Navy Yard issued a call yesterday for a meeting to-night at Johnston's Hall, Flatbush Avenue and Nevins Street, Brooklyn, to try to have more battleships built in the yard. Among the speakers will be Bird S. Coler, President of the Borough of Brooklyn; Congressman Knowland of California, and Sheriff M. J. Flaherty.

Letters will be read from President Roosevelt, Congressman Parsons, and others in reply to letters sent to them from the Central Federated Union and individual unions asking them to urge the building of more battleships in the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

Congressmen Lindsay, Ruppert and Goldfogle are pledged to support the unions.

OLD CONDUCTOR'S FUNERAL.

Roosevelt's Fellow-Masons Attend Services for Long Island Employe.

OYSTER BAY, L. I., March 18.—Elaborate floral tributes and a large attendance marked the funeral here to-day of Alfred L. Jones, for many years a conductor on the Long Island Railroad, and about the oldest employe of the road.

Besides the railroad men Mattinnecock Lodge of Masons, of which Jones was a member, attended. This is President Roosevelt's home lodge. The floral tributes included a railroad semaphore set at full stop, with the red eye showing; a car made of roses, a vacant chair, a conductor's lantern done in flowers, a signal tower done in carnations, and a Masonic emblem.

2 GIRLS DROWNED AT OLEAN.

Children Were Sledding on Ice and Broke Through.

OLEAN, N. Y., March 18.—Ada Lamb, 13 years old, and Myrtle Lockwood, aged 11, were drowned to-day in Olean Creek. The sled on which one was drawing the other was found on the thin ice through which they went, a single hole near the thicker ice telling the story of their death. They were children of Mr. and Mrs. B. B. Lamb and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lockwood.

Asparagus Special This Year.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., March 18.—The growers of asparagus on the eastern part of Long Island are pleased by the news that this Spring their product will be in the Manhattan and Brooklyn markets on the same day it is cut. This will be the result of the Long Island Railroad running a later day freight train than at present.

No Yellow Fever at New Orleans.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW ORLEANS, March 18.—Experts from Alabama, Mississippi, and Texas, sitting with the local health authorities, declared to-day, after an autopsy on the body of Jules Ebranz, that the man did not die of yellow fever, as was supposed, but of cirrhosis of the liver, complicated with jaundice and acute nephritis.

SWALLOWED HIS TEETH.

Mr. Kenny Sure of It—Locked Up Hoping They'll Grow Outward.

A broad-shouldered stableman of 56 East 109th Street, who said he was James Kenny, walked into the East 104th Street Station last night, bearing evidences of having prolonged the St. Patrick's Day celebration from Saturday.

"Sarge," he said to Sergt. Thompson, "I'm in a bad fix. Jes' swallowed me false teeth."

"What?" shouted the Sergeant.

"Jes' dropped some o' th' china out o' me dining' room into the Subway."

"How did you do it?" asked the policeman.

"Don't know," responded Kenney. "Jes' feel 'em, thash all, and they got t' come out. Hurt. See?"

Thompson sent for Dr. Ried of the Harlem Hospital, who applied a stomach pump. Dr. Ried pumped for ten minutes, but there were no results.

"You're wrong, man; you've got no teeth down there. In fact, you haven't got anything down there except space," said the doctor.

"Get them teeth out," growled Kenny. "I feel 'em yet."

"Can't get 'em out," said the doctor as he prepared to go.

"Well," rejoined Kenny, "maybe you can't get 'em out, but if you can't I can lick you, see?" He made a rush for the doctor, but the police were too quick for him.

He went to a cell moaning: "I've got ingrowin' teeth. Turn 'em 'round so's they'll sprout on the surface."

CHILD BURIED ALIVE

To Guard a Dam, According to an Old Mexican Superstitition.

After a day on the plantation Simpson discovered that the late proprietor had tarried on his property but two months, then placed it in the hands of his agent to dispose of at any price. And incidentally Simpson found that the late proprietor was the fourth for that year; he decided to investigate.

He was returning late one afternoon from the cane fields along the river which ran through a part of his plantation. His horse was one of the best and the trail through the fields was in good condition, but it was a long ride, and he knew it would be after dark before he reached his hacienda house. Already the shadows were stealing through the twilight, drawing down the curtain of darkness which precedes the play of the moonlight. Suddenly he stopped, halted his horse with a sharp check, and listened. No, it was nothing, and yet he could have sworn that he heard a cry of distress.

He spurred his horse on—then, there it was again—to the right. Low, like a dying moan, it stole over his senses; he first felt it in his finger tips, then it crept cautiously up his arms—his heart stopped still. He shivered, though the air was warm.

Involuntarily he checked his horse again, and listened. No—it was not a woman's cry; it was not mature, though it was not like that of any child he had ever heard. The cry was low and weak, weird and plaintive, though it was incessant and seemed to have a supernatural strength in its weakness.

Simpson glanced around and saw that he was in a washout which was probably an arroyo during the rainy season; it was not very wide or deep. He peered through the dim light to his right and saw at some distance away what appeared to be a black wall; on riding nearer he perceived that it was the ruin of an old reservoir dike, built out of big blocks of stone. He did not ride around to see whether or not the reservoir was dry, but from the crumbling condition of the dike he decided that it was. And all the while the low cry continued, insistent, like a sob which will not be choked down. It seemed to come from the wall of the reservoir.

It was just three days later when, without any apparent warning of the coming catastrophe, there was a cloudburst up the mountains. The little streams, swollen with the heavy rains, rushed down the mountain sides like mighty rivers. It was the worst flood in years. The valley was veiled in tears, and the only sign of Simpson's plantation was the spot where his house ought to have been.

Like the true optimist that he was, Simpson was delighted to discover himself safely sitting on top of some floating wreckage. He rightly reasoned that it was a wonder he was on top, and not in a watery grave under his household furniture.

But Simpson thought nothing in particular of a strange sight which surprised him as he drifted down stream for the low hills to the south. The dead body of an infant in a perfect state of preservation passed him, floating with the wreckage, drowned men, women, and cattle. It was the unclothed body of a baby girl. She floated by him, her hair stringing in wet strands behind her. In one hand she clutched a tortilla; in the other a piece of piloncillo.

Years ago the poor peons of the haciendas thought that an infant, inclosed alive in the wall of a reservoir or the dam of a stream, would give warning with cries at any approaching danger—such as a storm or a flood. So it was considered a commendable act for a peon mother to sacrifice her child, and such a sacrifice was not without mercy. A tortilla in one hand and a piece of brown sugar in the other—these were supposed to sustain the little one so that it would have sufficient strength to cry out in time of danger. Then the wall was completed—the baby boy or girl being buried alive.

In the course of time—say, forty or fifty years—the wall of the reservoir might crumble in places, though the part protecting the tomb might perfectly preserve the body of the infant. Should a flood or storm of sufficient danger be imminent the departed spirit of the infant might give warning with cries of distress and these cries might be heard by some one in passing. Should a flood finally come and wash away the crumbling tomb of the infant the drifting body might be seen by the same one who heard the cries—but who would believe the tale?—Modern Mexico.

Reclaiming Desert Lands.

According to an official of the Geological Survey, in the three years since the Federal Government organized its reclamation service 77 miles of main irrigation canals of river size have been built, which, with others of smaller dimensions constructed within the past twenty-five years, make a total of irrigation canals in the United States long enough to span the earth twice and representing an outlay of $90,000,000. "Every year," we are told, "the area reached by these canals returns a harvest valued at more than $150,000,000, with a population of 2,000,000 dwelling in harmony and contentment, where only a short time ago wilderness or a desert reigned." It is beyond question that no investment of Government funds has yielded such large, immediate, and satisfactory returns as the money expended for irrigation purposes in the Far West. No one except those who have visited such sections of the Union as Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, and Southern California can realize what irrigation has already done and what its extension means for the future of these regions, where often for eight months of the year not a drop of rain falls. Southern California—now one of the richest, most fertile, and populous sections of the United States—would still be, for the most part, an arid and uninhabitable country were it not for its vast systems of irrigation. The saying in all these regions that "water is life" has a significance elsewhere unknown. The Federal Government has adopted a generous and far-sighted policy in regard to reclamation projects; but it might expend ten times the amount thus far appropriated with a surety of getting at least $2 back for every one expended within a few years in permanent additions to the Nation's wealth.—Leslie's Weekly.

COFFEE GROWERS' STRAITS

Brazil's Currency Schemes Worse Than Overproduction.

MONEY BURNED TO HELP

Planters' Financial Burdens Grow as Currency Is Curtailed—Where the Plan to Raise Coffee Prices Fails.

Underlying the Brazilian Government's plans for the valorization of coffee, about which much has been heard recently, though they have not yet been put in definite shape, is a remarkable economic situation due to the Government's arbitrary manipulation of the country's currency which is held by those who are familiar with Brazilian affairs to have had as much to do with the embarrassment of the coffee planters as overproduction of the staple.

For a number of years past the Federal Government of Brazil has been reducing the paper currency of the nation by burning up vast quantities of milreis annually. This expedient, urged by the Rothschilds for the purpose of stiffening an overextended fiat money system, served its purpose of raising the value of the milreis, but the growing dearth of money and the consequent rise in the rate of exchange carried in its train such hardships for the producers and the debtor classes generally that the Government now finds itself face to face with a widespread discontent that necessitates radical measures of alleviation.

When the Brazilian currency was at its maximum extension the milreis was worth about 4d. The rate of exchange has risen as a natural consequence of contraction of the currency, and is at present 16 9-32d. The result, entirely unforeseen and unprovided for by the Brazilian lawmakers when they adopted the simple plan of appreciating the currency by burning the overplus, has been that every planter who had mortgaged his property in the old days of cheap money is obliged, in effect, to pay what he borrowed four times over, and in addition to pay a rate of interest which is equivalent to about 48 per cent. per annum on the original mortgage, for, while the prevailing rate of interest was 12 per cent. when the mortgages were made, it takes considerably more than four times as much coffee now as then to pay it. The planter's difficulties are increased by a decline in the price of coffee due to overproduction, so that in addition to getting fewer milreis for the pence in which his pay comes to him, he actually gets fewer pence. When it is considered that three out of the six coffee-growing Brazilian States produce nothing else, it may readily be understood that the planters have been reduced to desperate straits.

Conditions in the three exclusively coffee-growing States are approaching the danger point, according to one coffee man in New York who is in close touch with the affairs of his Brazilian clients, and it would take very little more to change discontent with the Government's policy into a flare-up South American revolution. As it is, even now, according to this same authority, it is as much as any one's life is worth to go into the outlying districts and attempt to foreclose on the plantations, and a very large number of defaulted mortgages are held by foreign capitalists who cannot get possession of the property represented. The situation seems to be much the same as in the nineties in Texas, when after several successive years of cheap cotton and poor crops the money lenders had the farmers mortgaged down to their cooking pots, and had foreclosed on hundreds of thousands of acres of the best bottom lands in the cotton belt. Then a six-shooter was always the handiest desk ornament in the local real estate man's office, and the agents of the money lenders rode through the farming country with an armed bodyguard.

Although only six of the twenty-two States of Brazil grow coffee, and only half of these make it their only crop, the necessity of relief to the cotton planters was so generally acknowledged that at the last session of the Federal Legislature the members voted unanimously to extend £15,000,000 of the Government's credit to whatever measure might be adopted to relieve the distress of the planters.

The Executive is authorized to take steps, in co-operation with the Governments of the coffee-producing States, to accomplish the valorization of coffee, to regulate the trade, and to establish a propaganda with the object of increasing the consumption of the berry, especially in the United States, where the wide publicity given to the advertisements of coffee substitutes has seriously curtailed the consumption of coffee.

The valorization plan, which, is, briefly, artificial boosting of the price by the establishment of a corner in the staple, has been agitated for a number of years, but no practical working scheme has ever been devised.

The provisional plan outlined in the recent Brazilian legislation provided for a loan of £15,000,000, secured by the credit of the national Government, which will be held in the National Treasury and disbursed solely for purchases of coffee at a minimum price, the idea being that when enough of the crop has passed into the Government storehouses the remainder will fetch an equal if not higher price from the foreign buyers, who will be driven to compete for their annual needs. None of the coffee so purchased by the Government is to pass into the market again except at a price at least as high as the established minimum. Reimbursement will be had from an additional export tax, so that the planters will in the end repay the central Government.

There is one serious objection to the plan which has hitherto prevented its adoption and which remains a stumbling block as far as coffee men in New York know to the contrary. The power to control the market lies with the holder of the coffee, and Brazilian planters do not control more than one-sixth of their own product. Coffee has been shipped out of the country faster than it has been consumed, and at present it is estimated that Europe holds 357,000 tons and the United States 288,000 tons to Brazil's 100,000 tons. These conditions would put on Brazil the burden of enriching the foreign coffee holders by $6 for every $1 of benefit extended to the planters.

OARSMEN DUMFOUNDED BY DISQUALIFICATIONS

Executive Committee of N. A. A. O. to Purge Rowing Ranks.

NO PLACE FOR WRONGDOERS

President Pilkington Says National Body Will Keep the Sport Clean at Whatever Cost.

There was little talked of among oarsmen and those in touch with rowing yesterday save the radical action of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen on Saturday night in the cases of Mulcahy and Varley and the Vesper Boat Club of Philadelphia.

The athletes and their friends were amazed when they learned yesterday of the severe punishment meted out by the committee to purify rowing. It was an object lesson, not only to oarsmen, but to every amateur athletic organization throughout the country, and all might well pattern their course after the rowing authorities with profit to the interest of sport. That the attitude was not assumed to fit one occasion, was forcefully stated by President James Pilkington yesterday. In speaking of the efforts of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen to keep rowing above suspicion, he said:

"As long as I am President of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen I intend to use every means at my command to make the oarsmen walk straight. If they only knew it, it is easier to be straight than crooked. I do not believe a single member of the Executive Committee has an axe to grind. Personally I think they are as square a body of men as can be found in amateur sport. They have repeatedly been referred to as a close corporation, running rowing matters to suit themselves. Perhaps it will now be acknowledged that we are running rowing for rowing, and if any one doubts it let him try anything contrary to the rules of amateur oarsmen and he will get a short shrift.

"No one can imagine how I felt over the cases of Mulcahy and Varley and Cody, but I should have been guilty of violating a trust had I failed to do my duty. All the members of the Executive Committee are in harmony in this respect, and we are firmly resolved to make an example of those oarsmen who try to pull the wool over our eyes.

"I think it will be a long time before another American oarsman rows abroad under our sanction unless his record is absolutely clean. The slightest taint of suspicion will result in the refusal of the National Association to indorse him, and while we will keep a close watch on our oarsmen going abroad, it must not be supposed that we intend neglecting those who compete in this country.

"The crusade just begun will be continued, and the slightest taint of crookedness or professionalism will immediately be stamped out. The National Association does not object to professional oarsmen, provided they keep in their proper station, which is outside of our ranks. We have no room for, nor do we desire the company of, any but amateurs, and the watchword of the Executive Committee will always be 'purity in amateur rowing.'"

The history of athletics in America fails to produce a parallel to the stern, unbending method adopted by the National Association on Saturday night to keep their own branch of athletics clean and pure. The uncompromising attitude of dictators of rowing policy should stiffen the yielding dispositions of certain athletic bodies and establish a precedent worthy of emulation.

Mulcahy and Varley of the Atalanta Boat Club were indefinitely suspended for conduct prejudicial to the interests of rowing. Mulcahy received his first instructions in rowing from James Pilkington, President of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen, and was regarded as Mr. Pilkington's special protégé. Personally the President would do a great deal for Mulcahy, but he was one of the first to cast his vote for suspension. This was followed by Mr. Pilkington moving for the disqualification as an amateur of former Lieut. W. E. Cody of the Harlem Rowing Club. Cody was not only an officer in Mr. Pilkington's club, but for nearly twenty years has been one of his oldest friends. Mr. Pilkington did not hesitate to discipline him.

Unless the Vesper Boat Club Henley crew can show a clean bill of health on April 7, when the next meeting is to be held, the members of that organization will feel the axe. Charges of professionalism will be brought against six members of the crew this week.

Ripples Along the Harlem River.

The action of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen in ordering a complete investigation of the amateur standing of the members of the Vesper Boat Club, Henley crew, has halted plans of that club to send another crew to Henley next July. Over $3,000 had been promised and plans for the journey were well under way. No matter what the outcome of the investigation may be the Vespers will not send a crew to England this year.

There is general satisfaction over the selection of Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, Mass., for the National regatta. The New York and Harlem River Railroad will carry the boats free if twenty-five tickets are purchased over the road.

Fred Shepheard of the Seawanhakas will have a hard time to defeat Frank Greer of Boston over the National regatta course at Worcester, as the New Englander is thoroughly familiar with it.

Fred Fuessell of the Harlem Rowing Club has announced his intention of finding a partner to take to Hamburg for the double sculls race next July. Fuessell also expects to compete in the singles.

C. S. Titus and T. O'Neil have begun training for the Spring regattas, preparatory to a trip to Hamburg to try for the prize Mulcahy and Varley failed to win.

The cold, raw wind of yesterday kept many of the oarsmen on the Harlem River in the clubhouses, where they discussed the doings of the Executive Committee of the National Association of the previous evening. Capt. Callahan of the Metropolitan Club talked over the season's plans with about a dozen of his fellow-members. He intends devoting most of the training to the fours instead of the eights, as he considers it easier to keep the men together in that way.

A four-oared gig from the Wyanoke Clubhouse spent half an hour on the river yesterday. The Crescents junior four rowed four miles. Crews from the Union, Metropolitan, Bohemian, Dauntless, and Nonpareil Clubs were out during the day.

Capt. Cornell of the Union Boat Club, who has been in the hospital, is rapidly recovering, and expects to be back at his post in the clubhouse not later than a week from next Sunday.

The annual beefsteak dinner of the Nonpareil Rowing Club occurred yesterday at the clubhouse. Seventy-five members were present. During the afternoon a vaudeville entertainment enlivened the proceedings.

Madden's String for Benning.

Special to The New York Times.

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 18.—The horses which will carry the colors of John E. Madden on the Eastern turf the coming season will be shipped from Hamburg Place to the Benning race track to-morrow.

Madden will accompany the horses, and after they are placed in good quarters there, will proceed to New York, returning to Washington in time for the opening of the meeting.

Madden will have a crack lot of two-year-olds this season in the get of Imp. Mirthful, Imp. Galore, Ornament, Plaudit, and Frankfort, while his three-year-olds are Sampson, The Quail, East End, Bender, Sailor, and Tangle.

Adams, and one other to be selected.

The team will go direct to Chicago, arriving there on Tuesday evening. On the following night the team will meet the swimming representatives of the Chicago Athletic Association in the following events: Water polo match, relay race, 40-yard dash, 110-yard scratch, plunge, back stroke, and a feet-and-knees match between J. A. Ruddy of the New York Athletic Club and R. F. Laughlin of the Chicago Athletic Association. The members of the water polo team have been training since the championships, when the Chicago Athletic Association team defeated the Mercury Foot seven. The latter are confident of turning the tables on the Chicagoans.

On Thusday night the New Yorkers will meet the team from the Chicago Young Men's Christian Association in the latter's tank. The feature of the evening will be a 440-yard match between National Champion C. M. Daniels and H. J. Handy of Chicago. The other events will be: Water polo, relay, plunge, backstroke, and 100-yard scratch race.

The dual meet with the Missouri Athletic Club at St. Louis will be held on Friday and Saturday, March 23 and 24. The programme for Friday will be an English water polo match, relay race, 50-foot dash, 100-yard scratch, and a special 50-yard race between L. S. Crane of the New York Athletic Club and Otto Schwartz of the Missouri Athletic Club. Daniels and Marquand Schwartz will compete in the 100-yard scratch race. The list of events for Saturday will include an American water polo match, breast stroke, back stroke, plunge, and fancy diving.

COLUMBIA'S FIRST ROW.

Crew Will Be Put on the Harlem River To-morrow.

Columbia will launch its first crew on the Harlem River to-morrow, and from then until the intercollegiate races at Poughkeepsie in June the Blue and White oarsmen will have three months' hard work at training. Under the direction of Jaspar T. Goodwin the shells will be towed to Spuyten Duyvil Creek and then down the Harlem to the Columbia boathouse, where preparations will be made for the launching of the crew. Owing to the fact that the launch Columbia has not yet been chartered, the Rowing Association has placed a speedy motor boat at the disposal of the coach, and it is probable that he will use it during the remainder of the season. Columbia's "rooters" are expected to be out in full force at the boathouse tomorrow to give the crew a send off.

The situation in rowing affairs at the Morningside institution is precarious, to say the least, and everything is being done to increase interest in the sport in order to get a larger number of candidates out for practice. At a recent dinner tendered to Coach Goodwin and members of the crew, Goodwin gave expression to his views on the status of the Columbia crew and its prospects. With only three of last year's 'Varsity men on the squad, he is facing a situation which it has rarely been the misfortune of any coach in previous years to encounter. From the raw material he will have to form practically a new crew, and the standing of the local collegians in the intercollegiates is therefore hard to conjecture. Goodwin, however, is quite popular with the rowing candidates, and he has them working with him to a man. What they lack, therefore, in experience they will make up in spirit. Relying on this enthusiasm Goodwin remarked:

"We will work together, and go out to win."

BUSY WEEK FOR GIANTS.

Play Three Games with Nashville—Then Return to Memphis.

Special to The New York Times.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 18.—The Giants enter on the final week's work in Tennessee to-morrow. The first game is scheduled for Thursday in Nashville against Manager Finn's Southern League club. The Giants will leave here Wednesday night, remaining at the State capital for games on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, then returning here for their first Sabbath contest of the year next Sunday against "Charley" Babb's Memphis Southern League club.

Manager McGraw is undecided on the course of the Giants after that. He would like to remain here, but the grounds are needed by the local leaguers for their own use, and, as several exhibition games are to be played, afternoons of idleness would necessarily have to be spent by the players. McGraw will therefore arrange to commence the trip North sooner than expected, or, in the event of continued cold weather, he will lease the 'Varsity ball park here, which, although rather small for world's champion baseball players to field in, is provided with a good diamond and abundance of room for the batteries and infielders to work.

Pitcher Christopher Mathewson may appear in uniform to-morrow if there is a favorable temperature and plenty of sunshine. Indications, however, to-day point to clouds, dampness, and conditions altogether unfavorable for one convalescing to chance.

The first wager between members of the New Yorks on any angle of the coming pennant race was registered last night between "Joe" McGinnity and Pitcher Luther Taylor, shortly after they received permission by Manager McGraw to leave on a two-days' furlough for their respective homes. Taylor wagered a suit of clothes with the "Iron Man" on the result of the games this year. The matter is to be decided on percentage of victories rather than gross amount of games won.

All the champion's pitchers are working nicely with the exception of C. Mathewson. Although enough may not have been seen of young H. Mathewson to judge of his ability, the opinion seems unanimous that he is in need of about two years' experience in the minor leagues before ripening into a steady slab man for the Giants.

Rain Kept Americans Indoors.

Special to The New York Times.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 18.—It rained hard all day and the Greater New Yorks stuck close to the hotel except for a few hours at the Athletic Club, where they played pool and billiards and enjoyed the swimming pool and shower baths. There will be practice to-morrow if the weather permits. The next game is scheduled for Tuesday, on which occasion Whalen, Hughes, and Hogg will do the pitching. Some of the local experts have been saying that Hogg has been slow in the practice and lacks ginger. This will be disproved on Tuesday. Every man in the party is in good physical shape.

Manager Griffith said to-night that he was well satisfied with the team as a whole, and had an especially good word for the youngsters whom he is trying out, declaring that they were showing up finely. The men, he said, are all conducting themselves well.

Early Pick-Ups on the Diamond.

"Joe" Yeager, the useful utility player of the Greater New Yorks, is the most-talked-of man in Washington to succeed Cassidy, the clever short stop of the American League team of that city, who is said to be very sick at his home in Chester, Penn. Fears are entertained that Cassidy, even if he does recover, will not be able to resume playing before the season is well advanced.

The veteran George Van Haltren, who is managing the Oakland Club of the Pacific Coast League, has just signed J. T. Cox, a pitcher, who was with the Georgetown University team, and who will make his first appearance as a professional.

Many improvements have been planned for Washington Park, the home of the Brooklyn Club, this year. There will be a brand new main entrance at Fourth Avenue and Third Street, something on the style of the Polo Grounds. There will be more booths for the sale of tickets and more accommodations for spectators. The clubhouse, too, will undergo needed alterations, and the new conveniences will be a swimming pool and shower baths.

The Inter-City Baseball Association, the first real governing body the amateur and semi-professional clubs have ever had in New York and vicinity, has secured permanent headquarters in Lyric Hall, Sixth Avenue and Forty-second Street. The regular meeting to-night promises to be important, as matters pertaining to the approaching playing season will be considered.

"Jake" Beckley, "Old Eagle Eye," has again been selected to guard first base for the St. Louis National League team this year.

Headache Powders Kill a Girl.

Special to The New York Times.

YORK, Penn., March 18.—Miss Sadie Kemper, 26 years old, of Bermudian, died at her home to-day a victim of patent headache powders which she took to cure pains in her head. She was to have been married to George Keins of Greenmount in April.

NEW AUTO COMMITTEES MAY BE KNOWN TO-DAY

Vanderbilt Cup Contestants Anxious for Definite Conditions.

GLIDDEN TOUR DIFFICULTIES

Racing Board Expected to Make Some Radical Changes—Legal Problems for the West.

Announcements of more than ordinary interest to the automobile world will be made either to-day or to-morrow from the office of the American Automobile Association. The names of all the members of the Racing Board will be given out, and in addition the complete list of all the other committees is looked for. These include the important Touring Committee, of which Paul Deming of Detroit is Chairman. What this committee and the Racing Board are going to do regarding the big contests which each has in charge for the year is anxiously awaited by all automobilists interested in those events.

From the Racing Board some definite statement about the closing of entries and any changes that may be contemplated in conditions are desired above all things by American manufacturers who have made plans to build racers for the Vanderbilt Cup race. Jefferson De Mont Thompson, Chairman of the committee, said last week that just as soon as his committee was announced he would call a meeting. Word from William K. Vanderbilt, Jr., concerning certain changes that were discussed before his departure for Europe has been expected at the Automobile Club of America, but nothing satisfactory has been received. Mr. Vanderbilt, however, expects to return to America early in April, and it may be necessary for the Racing Board to wait until that time before positive instructions can be formulated about the Vanderbilt Cup event this season.

Paul Deming and his Touring Committee will have a rather difficult problem to determine a satisfactory route for the Glidden Cup tour. A new system of awarding points for the winning car has been under consideration for some time. The Contest Committee of the National Association of Automobile Manufacturers has made several suggestions along these lines to the Directors of the American Automobile Association, and these will all be laid before the Touring Committee at its first meeting.

It is not so necessary to know the route and conditions for the Glidden tour as it is to know something tangible about the Vanderbilt Cup event. A number of cars are already being built for that high speed contest. One thing, however, has been generally taken for granted, which is that the officers of the American Automobile Association have been more disposed to listen to the manufacturers and other practical automobilists whose interest in the big speed race is all that makes it a success from the American standpoint. Last year no amateurs were represented among the American contestants, and there is not likely to be any change this year.

The new committee will be smaller than has formerly been the case. It will be composed of men of acknowledged ability who can judge correctly and with tact, and whose opinions are not likely to be warped by automobile commercial interests. With a board of this sort the belief is very general that the committee will announce at an early date that in the elimination race of American cars the five finishing first will be selected for the National team without more ado.

Mr. Deming has been deluged with suggestions regarding the best course for the Glidden tour. The Western autoists will undoubtedly be recognized in their claim that the tour start from their part of the country, but whether Cleveland or Detroit will be selected remains with the committee.

Sidney S. Gorham, the American Automobile Association Secretary and Chairman of the Law Committee, will return from Chicago next week. He has not been idle while in Chicago, and as a result of several conferences with President John Farson has virtually perfected his plan for uniform State legislation. The most active work, at the outset, will probably be done in some of the Western States, where the good roads movement needs lively agitation and more State associations are needed.

Shooting on the Seventh's Range.

The Three Prize Match was the special feature on the weekly programme of the Seventh Regiment Rifle Club Saturday night, and seventy members competed. Private Mestri carried off the premier honors with the excellent score of 67 out of a possible 70 points. The conditions called for seven shots standing at 200 yards and seven shots prone at 500 yards. Entrance fee, 25 cents, four entries; highest score only to count; three prizes. The range was in charge of Sergt. W. H. Ford of Company A and Private H. S. Barnes of Company K. The scores:

A Rochester Youth Drowned.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., March 18.—Fred Beeker, 19 years old, was drowned in the Genesee River this afternoon. With two companions he undertook to cross the river in a canoe. Ice was encountered, and in trying to force the canoe through it all three were thrown into the water. The other two young men managed to save themselves.

Oklahoma Pleads for Statehood.

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 18.—Hundreds of telegrams were sent yesterday and to-day to President Roosevelt, to members of Congress and to others in official life in Washington from commercial and other bodies in almost every city and town of importance in Oklahoma and Indian Territory urging immediate Statehood for the two Territories.

CHURCH A. L. BASKET BALL.

Xaviers Won Senior Championship and Calvary First Among Juniors.

The senior basket ball championship of the Church Athletic League was won by the Xavier Athletic Association, which went through the season without a defeat. The junior championship was captured by the Calvary Athletic Club, while the Bethany Athletic Club won premier honors in the midget department. The series was the most successful in the history of the league. The final standing follows:

Automobile Notes of Interest.

Carl G. Fisher, who purchased a dirigible balloon from Leo Stevens a short time ago, is by no means going to renounce his loyalty to automobiling. The latest news of his activity in the West is to the effect that he is planning to build a five-mile automobile track near Indianapolis. He intends to make the track 60 feet wide and 100 feet at the turns, and he believes that with such a track automobile racing will experience a decided revival.

Baron Henri de Rothschild has offered a prize of $200 for a speed and distance indicator competition which will be held in Paris under the auspices of the Automobile Club of France on May 1. Competitors must submit to a hundred kilometer test run, and the indicator will be examined four times during the trip. Regularity, facility of installation, precision, strength, weight, and cost will all be taken into consideration in awarding the prize.

The Spanish automobilists are planning to hold a four-hundred-mile speed race, from Barcelona to Madrid, as one of the features during the wedding celebrations attendant upon the forthcoming marriage of the young King of Spain.

A number of automobilists will attend the third annual convention of the New York and Chicago Road Association, which will be held in Hornellsville, N. Y., next Tuesday and Wednesday. Several papers will be read on the good roads movement throughout the country.

The American Motor League has just issued for the use of its members an automobile hand book, called "Roadside Troubles." It points out the causes and remedies of common motor troubles, giving directions for starting and operating the motor car under various conditions; tell how, when, and where lubricators should be applied and what lubricators are best; treats of the different causes of imperfect combustion and troubles with the sparking apparatus and ignition circuits, and other technical and practical points that are likely to be of assistance to motor-car owners. The book is written by Charles E. Duryea, a well-known and experienced automobilist.

The American Motor League is trying to encourage the safe and proper use of automobiles. It favors the holding of automobile speed contests under proper conditions, but is opposed to all forms of racing on the public highways and to the dangerous speeding of motor vehicles on the roads and streets.

A distinctive feature in the construction of the new four-cylinder Pope-Hartford car is the efficient water circulation, whereby the water is forced into the top of the cylinders around the valves by the pump and is also taken out at the top, thus insuring the coldest water in the neighborhood of the valves and around the explosion chamber, and at the same time keeping the body of the cylinder warm.

It is conservatively estimated that there will be at least twice as much automobile touring the coming season as in 1905. Not only is the contemporary production of touring cars larger than ever before, but the touring inclination is constantly on the increase among the majority of American automobilists.

In a handbook recently issued by the new American Motor Car Manufacturers' Association are interesting statistics taken from the report of the Coroner of the City of Chicago for the year ended Nov. 30, 1905. In this report it appears that out of 3,482 deaths reported only five were caused by the persons being struck by automobiles, 355 were due to railroad accidents, 68 were caused by wagons or horses, 137 were in street car accidents, and 15 were in elevator accidents.

Jaffray, which sailed from London March 13 for Vancouver, B. C., was towed into this port to-day. The Don was in collision yesterday off Start Light with an unknown vessel.

AMERICAN TENNIS GIRL TO GO ABROAD AGAIN

May Sutton to Defend Her Claim to English Championship.

TOPS FOREIGN RATING LIST

She, with Her Three Sisters, Will Probably Play Here During the Early Season.

Displaying that fairness in sport where an opponent is concerned, Miss May Sutton, the present holder of the All-England women's championship and American ex-champion, will go to London in July and defend her claim to the English honors. The American girl's decision to do this was received in this city yesterday, and she will cross at the same time as the American challenging team which will compete for the Dwight F. Davis international challenge cup.

Miss Sutton, who is a Californian, won the English championship least season by defeating Miss D. K. Douglass, the defender, setless, in the challenge match. Shortly before the match the Englishwoman had wrenched her right arm while at practice. It was the opinion of the English followers of the sport that had their champion been in the best of trim Miss Sutton would have possibly fared differently. Appreciating the apparent cloud on her title, Miss Sutton has made her plans to again visit London and defend the championship against the winner of the tournament on the Wimbledon courts.

Before sailing for England the American girl has arranged to play in many of the Eastern tournaments. In this round of play she will be accompanied by at least two and possibly three of her sisters, all of whom are experts with the lawn tennis racquet. It is expected that Miss Florence Sutton and Mrs. Bruce, a married sister, will surely contest in several of the meetings around this city late in May and early in June. The three who plan to visit New York have recently been playing in the early tournaments on the Pacific Coast, notably those on the Coronado courts, in which they came through to the finals, Miss May Sutton winning.

English Lawn Tennis, the current issue of which has just been received in this country, gives a ranking for the season about to begin. In the list of women players the American girl is rated first with a remarkable record. For the three leading championships of Great Britain which she won Miss Sutton is credited with winning 16 matches, 32 sets, and a total of 204 games. She did not meet defeat in any match or lose a single set in all of these contests, and only lost 75 games, which do not figure in the final result. Her average for this brilliant showing was .910, which is not even approached by any of the women or men lawn tennis experts. The average of Miss Douglass, ex-champion, for approximately the same play is .830.

The English rating of the men players also includes the Americans who contested in the internationals of last year: H. L. Doherty, their champion, heads the list, followed by Beals C. Wright, (American;) Norman E. Brooks, (Australian;) S. H. Smith, Holcombe Ward, (American,) William A. Larned, (American,) and A. W. Gore. William J. Clothier is rated seventeenth. From information the English Lawn Tennis Association has received, Beals C. Wright, Frederick B. Alexander, Holcombe Ward, Kreigh Collins, and Clarence Hobart comprise the list that the American team will be chosen from. It was learned yesterday that Ward had consented to join the team this year, which practically settles the dispute as to the make-up of the challenging doubles pair, as it places him with his old partner, Wright. Dr. James Dwight, Frederick G. Anderson, and Raymond D. Little, the American committee in charge of the international team, have decided that the Americans will sail for England the last of June.

SYSONBY TOP WEIGHT AGAIN.

James R. Keene's Champion to Carry 131 Pounds in Metropolitan.

Of the sixty-nine horses which have received weights for the Metropolitan Handicap, to be run on the first day of the first meeting at Belmont Park, Thursday, May 10, James R. Keene's champion Sysonby will be required to carry 131 pounds, with Hermis, Ort Wells, and Delhi following and carrying 126, 125, and 124 pounds, respectively. It was in this race last year that Sysonby, carrying 107 pounds, and ridden by Shaw, and O. L. Richards's Race King ran a dead heat and divided the purse, which was valued at $9,230.

The Metropolitan Handicap is for three-year-olds and upward, by subscription of $100 each, half forfeit, or $10 only if declared by Tuesday, April 17, to the winner, with $10,000 added, of which $2,000 goes to the second horse and $1,000 to the third. The distance is one mile. Penalties accrue from noon to-day. The weights follow:

LOOKING FOR TROUBLE.

We dislike exceedingly to give credence to the report, originating in a semi-official military journal of Berlin, that it is the intention of the Kaiser to bring before a European Conference questions arising in Abyssinia and in Siam between Germany and France. In both these regions, as in Morocco, France has special interests due to the fact that her unquestioned possessions border on each of the countries concerned. Germany, on the other hand, has no special interests, none differing from, or exceeding, those of the other Powers. In each case France has heretofore dealt with the rulers of the two countries independently. In the case of Siam she probably contemplates some extension of her own influence and possibly an ultimate protectorate. In that of Abyssinia no such plans are in question.

It now appears that the Kaiser has made up his mind to permit an adjustment of the Moroccan matter satisfactory to France. He apparently reached this conclusion at a moment when he seemed isolated, and when the rest of the world showed signs of unpleasant impatience with his policy. He has the satisfaction, such as it is, of feeling that for nearly a year he has kept the Chancelleries of Europe in a perturbed state of mind and has unquestionably inflicted very considerable business loss on the French and on his own people by the apprehensions he has aroused and kept active. He can continue that game if he wishes, for he is the practically absolute ruler, so far as concerns foreign affairs, of a great and powerful military nation. So long as there is uncertainty as to whether he intends peace or not, he will be the centre of intense interest which may not be unflattering to him. But it is not easy to see what in the long run he can gain by it. If he has enemies, he keeps them alert and anxious; he drives them to greater exertions in preparation for contingencies he forces on their attention, and the military burden steadily grows heavier for his own already heavily laden people. And from such a policy he must harvest rather the dread of the world than its affection or respect.

SUBWAY SERVICE.

Controller METZ did a very sensible and practical thing in asking the Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners to put their experts upon an investigation of the train service in the Subway. The report of Chief Engineer RICE shows that the step was needed and that the company has already allowed its service to lag decidedly behind the requirements of the public and its own means of meeting them.

He finds that the express service on Sunday is from 28 per cent. to 38 per cent. short of what it should be—that is, that five-car trains are run where seven-car or eight-car trains should be run. The local trains on Sunday on the Lenox Avenue line are run on six minutes headway and are crowded. Sunday traffic is, in a way, less important than on weekdays, since unavoidable defects are not so harmful. But there is no excuse for avoidable defects. The present condition of the service can be explained only by a desire to collect as many fares as possible for as little expenditure as possible. That is a motive legitimate enough in a private enterprise open to competition. It is quite unjustifiable in the case of a corporation enjoying a public franchise and open to little or no effective competition.

Practically the same conclusions are reached by Engineer RICE as to express service outside the rush hours. The trains are too short and the headway too long. Neither defect is unavoidable or justifiable. The report limits its recommendation for eight-car trains instead of five-car trains to 9 P. M. But either longer trains or more frequent are badly needed at much later hours. It is a common thing for local trains—after the expresses are withdrawn, about midnight—to be so crowded that ingress and egress are difficult and riding is excessively inconvenient, while the risk from panic in case of such accidents as have already occurred is very much increased. It is announced that the Rapid Transit Commissioners, after Engineer RICE's report has been carefully studied, will make some definite recommendations to the Interborough Company for improvement. The management will do well not to wait for the action of the Commission. There is a number of things it can do and should do at once.

"STERILIZED BETTING."

One rather wishes that Bishop DOANE and the Rev. Dr. SLICER had foemen more worthy of their steel than the Rev. WILBUR F. CRAFTS. For Mr. CRAFTS is one of those convinced fanatics who will say anything. Those who have marked his course with reference to the army canteen and regarded with wonder his recklessness of statement cannot be astonished by any looseness of statement on his part in other affairs. Possibly we flatter him in describing him as a fanatic. Certainly, if the "International Reform Bureau," which he appears to constitute, or which appears to constitute him, has not, as to the army canteen, some subterranean connection with the distillers, and with the divekeepers who infest the army posts, it has neglected its plain business opportunities. And when Mr. CRAFTS is diverted from his ordinary good work in Washington to come to Albany and battle with the giant evil of betting on horse races in the State of New York, conjecture has no choice but to get busy with his motives.

At the same time we cannot much better understand the motives of the highly respectable clergymen and gentlemen who are lined up on the other side. Mr. CRAFTS, it is true, has undertaken to impugn the motives of Dr. SLICER. But he would be a bolder even than Mr. CRAFTS who would undertake, in the City of Albany, to impugn the motives of Bishop DOANE. Bishops, no doubt, if also men of sense, have sometimes occasion to comply with evils the existence of which they deplore. That has been the case with one of Bishop DOANE's episcopal brethren, Bishop POTTER, with reference to the "saloon evil," which Bishop POTTER has taken what he regards as the most practical means for mitigating, and has been extensively denounced therefor by persons the ignorance of whose denunciation has doubtless deprived it for him of all terror. But the appetite for strong drink is one of the primary appetites of human nature which must be reckoned with and perhaps complied with lest a worse happen by ignoring or prohibiting it. There are other appetites and passions in the same category. But we do not see that the appetite for public gambling is one of them. Doubtless the appetite or passion exists and is pervasive. A million Crafts cum Comstocks could not prevent men from betting. But a very moderate degree of legislation and supervision can prevent them from public betting on horse races, which is the case in point. It seems to be true that the stoppage of such public gambling might stop horse racing. But that would not be such a privation as we may suppose would greatly afflict either Bishop DOANE or Dr. SLICER.

As a matter of fact it seems that the issue now raised at Albany is not between gambling and anti-gambling, but between two sets of gamblers. It is the kind of contest, it appears, which occasionally comes to an acute issue in Wall Street between "the Exchange" and the "curbstone brokers." Everybody knows that gambling may be transacted on the floor of the Exchange as well as on the sidewalk. Some weak-minded persons even ignore the immense industrial function of the Exchange by proclaiming that gambling is its business, instead of an incident of its business. To these has just now joined himself Senator DUBOIS of Idaho, who, in an insulting letter to a member of the Stock Exchange, has described it as a "gambling joint," thereby proving nothing at all about the Exchange, but proving much about his own measure of statesmanlike comprehension of the industrial needs of the country, and of the means by which they are supplied. But, at all events, the "improvement of the breed of horses," by means of horse racing, is not a public object of such importance that it should be pursued, like the business of the Stock Exchange, in spite of the abuses which it may attract. The attitude of the favorers of the existing law who oppose the proposed law, being the attitude of the operators of the Stock Exchange to the operators of the curbstone, was prophetically described by POPE:

> Virtue, I grant you, is an empty boast,
> But shall the dignity of vice be lost?

There seems to be no good reason why the dignity of this particular form of vice should be retained. The object at stake is not of such momentous public importance that what is illegal on the outside of a fence should be legalized on the inside. Men will no doubt continue to bet on horse races so long as horse races are allowed to be run, as they will continue to bet on elections so long as elections are allowed to be held, but it is not good for the public morals that they should be allowed to bet on either class of events "under the protection of the law and in the gladsome light of jurisprudence."

A FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE?

Tax-dodging, complicated with perjury, is one of the recognized recreations of the unco rich in this country. Magistrate-dodging, in connection with automobile "accidents," is another. No billionaire takes shame to himself for either of these forms of pastime. But subpoena-dodging is not quite on the same footing with tax-dodging, or even with summons-dodging. The distinction between a subpoena-dodger and a fugitive from justice is difficult to draw.

So when the common American citizen, who merely pays his debts and "looks the whole world in the face, for he owes not any man," reads daily that the richest man in America is dodging a subpoena and taking his exercise after dark, why should such a common American envy the richest man in America? What an abject snob the common American would have to be to envy the skulker in question! All the less should he envy him because he does not see why the billionaire should dodge his subpoena. Still less if he suspects that it is not the information ostensibly required by the subpoena that the billionaire is reluctant to give, but that the billionaire's real dread is, "What will they ask next?"

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE.

Congress is sensitive about comments on its use of the franking privilege, and its Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads has just had up before it a Washington editor to explain some of the remarks of his paper on the subject. He testified that they had a comic intention, and were in none of their details to be construed seriously. The writer said that some of the members were sending live stock through the post; blue ribbon bull calves, registered, most likely, and prize merino rams with twisted horns, like those before which the walls of Jericho in temple and tower went to the ground, where the Post Office, under like stress, might have gone also if that ancient Biblical city had had one. On the face of them these statements are of humorous design, like those old tales of the sometime Senator POMEROY that he franked his linen home to Kansas to be washed, that he once franked a hoe and tried to "ring in" a dog churn, but was headed off as to the latter by meddlesome understrappers in the department. Later, so the tales ran, he franked a brass-eyed bird dog and two field hands for his potato ranch, and fell back on his base of operations with the consciousness that in his engagement with the department he had come off, as he always did when he rallied round "the old flag and an appropriation," ahead of the game.

If such ambitious views of Congressional privilege in the matter of postal service still prevail in any quarters, it is in consonance with morals and public policy that they be brought out into the open for an airing. The Washington newspaper humorist may have performed a useful service in flashing the beam of his magic lantern on such shapes or phantoms of them as came across his field of vision. As the Congressional railroad passes are now shut off, or pretend to be, the door may be thrown open to an argument as to whether the franking privilege, used with such patriotic liberality since it was instituted, may not be taken away also with no injury to the public interests.

JAPAN'S COMMERCIAL MORALITY.

That the reputation of commercial immorality among her merchants is hurting Japan's expanding trade is indicated by a letter from Baron SUYEMATSU to The Magazine of Commerce, who protests against JOSEPH H. LONGFORD's recent evil characterization of certain Japanese traders in The Contemporary Review. We think that a comparison of Mr. LONGFORD's article, however, with Baron SUYEMATSU's reply will show that they serve to supplement each other in vindicating the morality of Japan as a trading nation. For example, Mr. LONGFORD says:

> There are great firms in Tokio and Osaka, some of which already existed in the days of feudalism, others which date their establishment only to recent times, whose standard has always been and is as high as that of the oldest historic firms of England, against whom not a murmur of complaint has ever been uttered. Banks and other great joint stock companies in Japan have invariably observed their contracts with the same scrupulous fidelity as their Government, and conduct their business with liberality and integrity.

He adds that all the great railways and joint stock companies in Japan are above suspicion, that corruption in any form has been long unknown in every Government department, and no instance is heard even in war time of fraudulent contractors profiting by the urgent necessities of the moment. In the City of London there is not only the example of the great and prosperous Japanese bank, which exercises a large influence on all financial intercourse between England and Japan, but of several agencies of well-known native firms:

> Against none of them has one murmur of complaint of unfair dealing ever been breathed by an English client, and both bank and agencies are in all their transactions only types of a score of others in Japan, unrepresented in England, to whom credit is given both by English banks and merchants in Japan as well as by manufacturers in England precisely as it would be to the most solvent English firm with the same results of confidence worthily placed.

Descending even lower in the social scale, Mr. LONGFORD admits that the Japanese tradesman will in honest dealing compare not unfavorably with his confrères in any country in Europe, while stories are proverbial of honesty displayed in its best form in the humblest and poorest ranks of the people. But his onslaught upon the traders of the old-time treaty ports is rancorously bitter. They are stigmatized as "degraded plutocrats," who at the time of opening the ports had flocked thither as sharks and adventurers, had formed monopolies of goods for export, and by taking advantage of ignorance among foreign merchants of the Japanese language and commercial and social conditions, had grown excessively wealthy. "Neither wealth, self-interest, nor patriotism," he continues, "has even modified their inherited and deeply ingrained incapacity for grasping the primary tenets of commercial integrity."

Baron SUYEMATSU admits this lamentable condition in part, but thinks Mr. LONGFORD's picture is "painted blacker on the side of the Japanese and brighter on the side of the foreigners out there than the figures warrant"; and he speaks of much to be criticised in the bearing of foreign merchants who came out there to trade—that they were also mostly adventurers in a measure, inconsiderate, and even arrogant in their dealings with the native traders. Besides acting dishonestly themselves, they often mistook their market:

> In Japan commercial goods were, and are still, to a great extent, made by hand on small scales. No big industrial factories existed where one could order a large number of articles identical in every respect as one could do in Europe. Foreign traders, not taking these conditions into their serious consideration, often gave similar orders as they were used to do in Europe, and when articles delivered to them were found to be not perfectly identical they often took advantage of that fact, and gave much trouble to the native contractors, who did not expect to meet with so much severity.

The destruction of the feudal system, which plunged 2,000,000 of Japan's noblest class into comparative poverty, brought an unskilled element into the circle of trade which largely disrupted successful conditions; this element, chivalrous in its standards of honesty, is emerging and strengthening commercial relations with foreign countries. We must perforce believe that with a better understanding of the Japanese people since the late war, and with the organization and financing of her commerce and manufactures now progressing upon the best industrial models, little will be heard in the future of Japan's immorality in trade.

The Canadian Minister of Railways is quite justified in his affection and admiration for his country, and we have no reason to be proud of the way in which we have rejected reciprocity, urged Canada to protectionism, and driven scores of thousands of our people across the border. He has sufficient ground for the fond hope that Canada will play as big a part in the twentieth century as the United States did in the nineteenth—sufficient, that is, for an after-dinner use of the prediction. But he and all intelligent men on either side of the boundary ought to wish and to work for cordial friendship between the two peoples and for the abolition of the trammels on our intercourse which their several Governments have imposed. In everything but government the union of the two countries is pretty sure to become closer, and political union is of little consequence one way or the other.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Queer Ideas About Orthography.

Several of our correspondents have found pleasure in sending us letters written as they think letters will have to be written if the spelling reformers have their way. Not one of these good people has yet attained his desired end of making this reform ridiculous; what they have very brilliantly succeeded in doing is in proving that they have given no real thought to the subject; that they have not informed themselves as to the objects and the plans of the would-be reformers, and that they haven't any except the faintest and most inaccurate ideas as to phonetics. Their communications have one and all been as badly spelled from the reform as from the orthodox standpoint, and are mere imitations of illiteracy. On the other hand, at least one correspondent has insisted that no reform of spelling is worth while that doesn't begin with the invention of a new alphabet, large enough to give to every sound-element in English words its separate character. That claim sounds well and has a sort of logic in it, but what is the use of saying "all or nothing" when "all" is utterly out of reach and "nothing" means the endurance of heavy burdens till the end of time? The golden mean of "something" is vastly more attractive to the sensible mind—a something that can be enjoyed just as soon as we consent to take it. When questioned the other day, the truly eminent Mr. SWINBURNE said, with characteristic suavity and moderation, that spelling reform was "a monstrous, barbarous absurdity." One might imagine from this that Mr. SWINBURNE did not know that all his life he has been using a spelling not only reformed, but very recently reformed. Of course he did know it; he had only forgotten it for the moment, as does everybody else who angrily or piteously opposes any further change in what has already been changed no end of times and does not contain within itself even the very first element of permanency. It's most amusing to see how many people think that the English language and a mysterious something they call "style" would be affected and for the worse by a revision of our spelling. That is simply because learning to spell "correctly" has had to be so large a part of early education and lack of the ability has come to be the most easily notable proof of illiteracy. Yet not a few very well-educated people, with a good command of both language and style, are weak when it comes to spelling. SHAKESPEARE was, for one, at least according to modern notions.

How About Race Suicide?

When one notices that, in all the comment excited by MARY MORTIMER MAXWELL's comparison between American and English wives, the division has been between those who deny that the American wife neglects her husband for her children and those who insist that the neglect, so far as it exists, is all right, one cannot help wondering what excuse there was for the recent accusations, so vehemently and frequently made, that many, if not most, American wives neglected their children to the very tragical extent of not having any to care for. We suspected all along that this talk was an utter waste of time, Presidential and other, and the course of the current discussion confirms the suspicion. Certainly if it is a characteristic of American wives, recognized as clearly by those who do not like it as by those who do like and defend it, to place the child before the husband, then there must be something entirely wrong about the other assumption. Be that as it may, the various contributions to the present debate have all the interest that comes from earnestness and emotion, and therefore they make extremely good reading. On the whole, it seems to us that the men, in declaring themselves neglected, have as yet had a little the best of the argument. That is due, perhaps, to the fact that the men speak from observation and experience, while their antagonists rely more on sentimental generalities and ancient traditions, mostly delusive. Take, for instance, the correspondent who signed herself "Mother and Wife"—the sequence is curiously significant—and declared that nobody, no matter how experienced, (by which, doubtless, she meant no matter how learned in medicine, hygiene, and the art of nursing,) could understand a child as well as its mother. "Its very cries," she went on, "mean definite things to her—pain, fear, hunger, &c.; therefore she feels the need of being constantly beside it to act as interpreter." This is all very pretty, and very sweet—and very far from true. Indeed, nothing could be further from the truth than the implied claim that all children who receive the personal, constant care of their mothers are well cared for. The statistics of infant mortality are the best of proof that such care is injurious or fatal if it be not also intelligent and enlightened, and it isn't always both—not quite always. The mother does, however, have, if she chooses, one advantage over every other attendant, no matter how scientific, but it is not a superior power of interpretation of the noises made by children; it is an advantage which none of our correspondents has mentioned and perhaps it would not become us to be bolder than they, but while they ignore it the discussion will not really approach a conclusion.

Safe as Well as Convenient.

DR. GEORGE A. SOPER, a very competent observer, concludes, after a long and careful examination into Subway conditions, that the great tunnel is on the whole sufficiently well ventilated and that the chances of injury to health there are limited to a lack of sanitary care that can and probably will be remedied, to the presence of metallic dust, concerning the harmfulness of which he is not sure, and to the effects of overcrowding. This is decidedly reassuring to those of us who are practically obliged to spend many minutes a day in the Subway, and it is not really alarming to the employés who pass all their working hours there. The lack of sanitary care to which Dr. SOPER refers can be instantly terminated by the Board of Health whenever that body chooses to act, and, as it is a pretty good Board of Health, all things considered, the requisite action can be expected with some confidence. As for the metallic dust, that is only indirectly harmful at worst, and it is yet to be proved a serious evil. Overcrowding, alas! seems to be unconquerable. The public always has selected, and probably always will select, the fastest means of transportation, and the prospects of ever getting enough subways to carry us all comfortably are not encouraging. Of the old talk about "bad air" very little is heard now, and the once noticeable Subway odor, if it still exists, has become nearly indistinguishable to New Yorkers. Present objections to the Subway concern details of management almost entirely, and they are not only all remediable, but they will all be remedied if the victims of them growl with sufficient fierceness and persistence—in the right quarters.

OPPOSES STREET CAR BILL.

Rhinebeck Charter 13 Years Old Now and More Time Is Asked.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The bill to extend the time to complete the Rhinebeck & Rhinecliff Street Surface Railroad, which comes up for final passage before the Assembly this week, should be most vigorously opposed by those members of the Assembly who have given any real thought to the merits of the question involved. The charter for this road was granted thirteen years ago, yet practically nothing has been done under it during all these years, and the statutory time to complete the road would have expired long ago were it not for three previous extensions which have been procured from the Legislature through the political influence of those interested in the charter.

The people of the village of Rhinebeck who would derive most benefit from the road are opposed to a further extension, as they have been to those granted in the past because they don't believe the road will be built, but that the owners of the charter are only holding it to sell to any one who will pay their price.

Chairman Hooker of the Railroad Committee is opposed to this practice of extending unused franchises which has prevailed for some time in the Legislature and publicly announced such to be his policy. However, his committee outvoted him and favorably reported this Rhinebeck bill, which is of vital interest throughout the whole State because of the principle at stake. H. S. K.

Rhinebeck, N. Y., March 17, 1906.

SMALL TALK OF WASHINGTON.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Time does not soothe the sorrow in the Congressional breast over the abolition of passes, and this great issue of the day still continues to come up where two or three are gathered together. Some of them were talking about it to-day, and it reminded one of them of an incident in the life of Mr. Bartholdt, the German Congressman from St. Louis.

"Bartholdt," said he, "got up a bill in the interest of the brewers. Our consciences were in their usual acute condition over the evils of the demon rum, and we downed Bartholdt's proposition by the usual W. C. T. U. majority.

"Bartholdt sat and glowered while the next bill was put on its passage. It was a bill giving some new privileges to a railroad company. It went through pretty nearly unanimously, and then we adjourned. As we went out I found myself alongside Bartholdt, and I asked him what made him look so glum and sour.

"'Mein Gott!' he said, and it came stright from an overcharged heart. 'If the breweries could only issue passes!'"

Champ Clark has been receiving felicitations on the popular appreciation which has greeted his use of the word "jowering" in debate. Papers all over the country are discussing it, and his colleagues are congratulating him on adding a new word to the language.

"Hang 'em!" said Champ. "I'm going to look it up now and see if there isn't authority for it. I'll bet Shakespeare or somebody used it, and if they didn't, it's the first new word ever added to the language of which that isn't true."

The press agent of a theatrical company which is to open here to-morrow night conceived the brilliant idea of writing to Baron Rosen, the Russian Ambassador, asking him if it was true that he contemplated requesting the State Department to have an act eliminated from the play. There is a scene in which a Russian spy tries to bribe an American army officer to sell him some military information. The press agent wrote to the Ambassador in a panic-stricken way, desiring to be posted at once on whether this fell rumor was true.

The good Baron took bait, line, and anchor. He wrote a dignified and kindly letter to the press agent, assuring him that he was safe from any action by Russia. The press agent was showing the letter in the newspaper offices on the row to-night and trying to get it into the public prints.

THE MUNICIPAL COURTS.

A Pernicious Bill to Abolish the Rotation of Judges.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is pending before the Cities Committee of the Assembly a bill introduced by Senator Cooper to abolish the system of rotation in the municipal courts.

What the passage of this bill would mean is realized only by those who remember conditions years back in the old district courts, and the conditions that cropped up more recently when the rotation system was for a time discontinued.

These were fully exploited several years ago, when Herman Bolte, a Judge of that court, was removed for misconduct in office.

On the hearing in that case it was demonstrated that a municipal court Judge who sat in his district all the year round, became virtually an autocrat dispensing or dispensing with justice as he chose; that he could surround himself with a gang of lawyers who were always sure of winning their cases if any dispute of fact could be injected into the case so as to give him a pretext for deciding in their favor; that when it seemed impossible on the facts to decide the case in the interest of a favorite the opposing side could always be worn out by adjournments, granted without legal excuse, until he was glad to settle for a smaller sum than the amount due him, or to discontinue his suit altogether.

At times even body executions would be issued at the instance of some of the inner circle of the Judge's admirers based on the alleged failure of a defendant to appear in answer to the summons, and he would be denied the opportunity to show that the summons had not been served upon him.

These things would seem almost impossible in these days of general education and broad publicity. But it is to be remembered that this is the poor man's court; that the suitor is often unable to afford a lawyer, and that he rarely has money enough to maintain his rights even if he is instructed with regard to them.

Shortly after the revelations of the Bolte case rotation was restored.

It may be asked what effect has rotation on these evils?

The answer is this: First, it decreases the pressure upon a weak Judge and relieves him of the temptation to do wrong.

Second, it deprives the weak or the corrupt Judge of much of his opportunity to do wrong.

These Judges are elected from comparatively small political divisions. They owe their election and are dependent for their re-election upon the minor political leaders of the district. Those leaders are concerned largely with "taking care" of the people in their districts who are "right," and also of taking care of their own pockets in their leisure moments.

If the Judge sits in his own district he is bound to be subjected to pressure from the petty "Warwicks" of the district who will try to induce him to favor those who are "right" and to smite the Philistine, i. e., those who are not "right"—in the political sense.

THE "SIDE-TRACKED HUSBAND."

Two American Acknowledgments That the "Englishwoman" Is Right.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Oh men with wailing in your voices," this time your grievance is just. We, as an American woman and, we reluctantly acknowledge, possessing, also, the dull distinction of wife and mother, confess that you are set aside for the "infant crying in the night" and the demands of the older "jewels." It is not, however, because we enjoy midnight rambles about the room, nor yet the exhausting duty of amusing our older progeny. These duties are instinctive, as the hen scratching for her chicks and sheltering them under her wings. No doubt she would rather wander about with her strutting mate. Nature really has quite too much to say to our sex. It is easier by far to divert a man than a child, and much more amusing to accompany him to the opera and theatre, or even the roof garden. We pipe to our offspring and they will not dance. We mourn and they do not lament for us. The husband and father sighs for the days that are no more, and is echoed by the mistaken wife and mother. When she does not go further and indulge in expletives, exhausted nature sometimes does speak in italics. By all means let us adopt the English custom—cajole the men and go about with them, while judiciously neglecting the babies. There is such a thing as too much attention, even to children. They also like to be let alone. We think the Englishman's manner of making love, when engaged, charming. Think of a love letter daily, besides the lover himself.

"Backward, turn backward, oh time in your flight," and let us do it all over again, and in the English fashion. F. W. H.

Tarrytown, N. Y., March 16, 1906.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I say that I think the "Englishwoman's" views in regard to American life are true in the large majority of cases, especially in regard to the "Sidetracked Husband"? The larger number of American women neglect their husbands for their children, usually with undesirable results to both, for if a man finds he cannot have his wife's society he will go elsewhere, and the infants quickly begin to regard themselves as the most important members of the household, and make everybody but the father and mother wish they were either non-existent or made to behave.

A well-behaved child, with good manners, is the exception in the United States, and not the rule. However, if the "Sidetracked Husband" who expressed his woes in THE TIMES had not "forgotten the wiles by which he embellished his wooing," he might (?) not have been put so completely in the background. The American lover is all that can be desired—I haven't tried him in the other capacity, but hope to do so in the future.

An Antidote.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As an American voter who trusts his army, but is sometimes shamed by his Congress, I submit the following as an antidote to the effusion read in the House yesterday:

TO "WOOD'S BRIGADE."
(With apologies to nobody.)
Honor the poet brave,
Far from the battle!
Pour your best blood to save
His sacred rattle.
What tho' the death was thick?
Far off some lunatic
Rises to raise "Old Nick"
O'er you poor cattle.

Women and Their Pets.

Lady Violet Greville in The London Graphic.

Women really seem to be growing quite silly over their attachment to their pets. One lady recently buried her dog in a white satin coffin, with flowers strewed over it; another carried a bottle of Apollinaris water about with her lest her dog should drink of contaminated water; another will not accept an invitation unless her dog is included in it.

The Editor's Breakfast.

From The Anthon (Iowa) Herald.

G. W. Nicholas, one of the prosperous farmers living northwest of town, made his annual donation of fine home-grown honey to the editor of this paper last Saturday. All we lack now for an ideal breakfast is a few pounds of buckwheat flour, a small serving of home-made sausage, and enough country butter to cover the cakes before the honey is applied. We have the cook to do the cooking and the appetite to relish this delicious repast.

TIGHT CHECKS NOT "ENGLISH"

Even Royalty Now Drives Without Bearing Reins.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Only yesterday I had occasion to pity in Broadway a beautiful pair of horses, whose bearing reins were so tight that they were almost unable to move their heads. In this position they had to stand over an hour. My first impulse was to remonstrate with the coachman, but reflecting that his ignorance of proper harnessing would be exceeded by his rudeness, as is generally the case with such creatures, I refrained. Had I known where to find an officer of the proper society, I should have dearly liked to give him and his tender-hearted mistress in charge for cruelty.

As this class of people are much given to paying attention to what is done by English society, let it here be known that the Duke of Portland, a lover of horses and a good judge of what is "chic" in the matter of turnouts, has publicly condemned the use of bearing reins, never uses them, and has induced the great majority of carriage owners, including royalty, to dispense with them. When you see a tight bearing rein in the Park rest assured that the owner of the horses is a man ignorant of the treatment of horses, who is afraid of showing his ignorance to his equally brutal and ignorant coachman by telling him his business. Would Abolish All Corporations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's editorial entitled "Artificial Men," and discussing Senator Tillman's reference to "a struggle (in the distribution of wealth) between the actual man and the artificial man represented in the corporation," you well say, "The trouble arises from the assumption that with the artificial man goes an artificial morality."

There is, however, another trouble which is inherent and arises from the fact that with the artificial man goes artificial power, which, however lawfully used, carries with it an advantage over the natural man. The very granting of this advantage, the creation of the corporation, is an unnecessary and inevitably injurious disturbance of those natural human relations or rights which it is the object of government to secure, and with which it cannot interfere without the assumption of an artificial morality. If We'll Only "Make Believe."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Foley's poem in to-day's TIMES is worthy of a place in the American anthology. It breathes the true spirit. I had long believed that poetry was one of the lost arts and never could be revived. But "Making-Believe" is so true to nature and so beautiful that when I read it I immediately said to myself: "Well, the poets are not yet all dead."

It is refreshing after reading the columns of vice and crime and other world troubles to find there is an ideal world we may all enjoy if we will only "make believe." Give us more, Foley. E. N. R.

Franklin Not Its Sole Founder.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mr. Andrew Carnegie in his speech at Richmond, Va., yesterday stated that he saw in Volume II. of Fletcher's Columbian Knowledge Series that Benjamin Franklin founded the Philadelphia Public Library in 1773. The correct date is 1731. Paston says the library was planned in 1731, opened in October, 1732. Franklin acted as Secretary in 1733, and by printing the catalogue he was excused from paying the annual dues of 10 shillings. There were originally fifty subscribers for fifty years, each paying an entrance fee of 40 shillings and an annual fee of 10 shillings.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Shearer's first communication published in your paper is certainly very timely, but cannot he tell us how the schools are arranged in Elizabeth, N. J., where he is Superintendent, so as to avoid the conditions which he says exist in this city?

A LITTLE LOVE STORY.

She understands. I do not need to go
And tell her she is all the world to me.
I never speak a word to let her know
I will be faithful till Eternity.
But when, upon the way to school, she sees
Me come with two red apples in my hands
And hears me say: "Please, Sally Jane, take these,"
It is no wonder that she understands.

Or when she sees me at the old front gate
With my new sled right after the first snow,
And from her window calls to me to wait
Until she asks her Mother can she go,
I do not need to tell her why I come
In my fur cap with mittens on my hands,
For even if my feelings make me dumb
She looks at me and then she understands.

Or if she whispers sometimes when in school,
As children are quite often apt to do,
Forgetting all about the teacher's rule,
And Teacher says to Sally: "Was that you?"
Why then I see how scared she is and rise
Up in my seat and hold up both my hands
And take the blame—she looks into my eyes—
I do not need to speak—she understands.

Or if she has the measles so I dare
Not go into her house, but I can look
In through the window and she sees me there,
And if I bring a dandy story book
And leave it on the fence post where the nurse
Can come and take it in, and if my hands
Have written, "Dear, I hope you'll be no worse,"
I do not need to speak—she understands.

I do not need to tell her how I feel—
She only has to watch the things I do;
She knows my heart is true to her as steel,
And if it rains or if the sky is blue
I wait for her to walk to school with me,
And carry all her schoolbooks in my hands,
And I am just as happy as can be,
And so is she—because she understands.

DR. SHEARER ASKS CAUSE OF SCHOOL DEFICIENCIES

Concedes That Principals and Teachers Are the Best.

SAYS EACH MUST GUESS

Second Paper by Superintendent of Schools of Elizabeth, N. J., Says New York's Methods Are Antiquated.

What are some of the causes which produce the conditions which have been briefly mentioned in the first paper?

They cannot be the inefficiency of Principals and teachers. Because of the salaries paid, the schools of New York command the services of the best. The character of instruction which one discovers in the city schools compares most favorably with that found in the best schools in fifty cities of the United States which I have visited. This does not mean that all are equally good, but that the general average is far above that in other cities, where the unfortunate conditions mentioned do not exist.

They cannot be said to be the result of not having an excellent Board of Superintendents. A better board cannot be found in any city of the United States. Having a personal acquaintance with all the Associate Superintendents, as well as the acquaintance of not less than 500 Superintendents of the United States from San Francisco to Boston, I believe that I have reason for asserting that, as a body, they surpass any such to be found in this country.

Some would lay much of the blame to the fact that the present course of study is not satisfactory. There may be some grounds for believing that more time and attention should be given to the essential subject and less to the non-essential, but we will say that the defects I have mentioned did not exist years before the present course of study was thought of? It may be asserted that the conditions have grown worse or better, but where are given facts which prove either assertion? In the utter absence of any facts bearing upon school conditions, each one is entitled to his own guess.

Lack of Room One Cause.

The lack of sufficient school accommodations which makes it impossible to give a full day's instruction to each pupil, must have some influence in producing the unfortunate results. Yet the facts available are not such as to make certain how much more benefit the child six years old receives from five hours daily, than does the child who attends school but three and one-half hours. However, the longer school day is certainly best for the child and for the home, even if but little more progress seems to be made by attending a full day.

In his report Dr. Maxwell attributes this great loss of time chiefly to the presence of foreigners in the grades. Yet schools visited do not seem to bear out this statement.

In the school at Albany and Washington Streets, twenty-three nations are represented. Yet the average age of the pupils in the several grades seem to correspond almost exactly with those in other parts of the city, where the children are almost entirely of American parentage. The average age of pupils in the school above mentioned, who had been in school over three months, was only six years and four months, which is just what it would be if all had started when they should. The extra age may easily be accounted for by the age of those not promoted.

Dr. Maxwell also said that the age of entrance and size of classes "doubtless contributes to this most unfortunate result." Yet, the unfortunate results were apparent in every school visited, even though the average age of beginners was just what it should be.

In the lowest class at 206 East Forty-second Street, the average age of pupils, who had been in four months, was about six and a half years. All the pupils save one were less than 7 years old.

The average of the lowest class in the school at 200 East Forty-sixth Street was less than six and one-half years, and but six had reached the age of seven, though the pupils had been in four months.

In the lowest class in School No. 107, Manhattan, forty-four were six years old and only five were older. In the next higher class, where the pupils had been in school at least one-half a year, twenty-four were still six years old, and fourteen were just seven years old.

Entrance Age Not to Blame.

Similar conditions were found in all schools visited, so that it is very much of a question if the age of entering school has much influence in producing the unsatisfactory conditions mentioned. Every Superintendent is able to prove that under proper conditions the child who starts very young is almost always overtaken and passed by those who start considerably later.

As in all the schools visited, Principals and teachers testified that nearly all pupils entered as soon as they were six years old, the most of the 300,000 who are years behind have lost the time after they entered school. This seems to be proved by the table on Page 47 of the last report, showing great increase in the number losing time each succeeding year.

Tables on Page 43-46 of the 1905 report prove nothing, and the record is for June 30, when it is hoped nearly all were ready for an advanced grade.

In the schools visited mist of the classes were not too large, yet it was expected from 30 to 50 per cent. of the children would fail to be promoted, while some teachers stated that they had pupils who were ready to be promoted five months ago.

The reasons above mentioned and others may collectively have some influence in producing the conditions mentioned, but the fact that results are practically the same in schools and cities, no matter whethere these conditions exist or not, leads to the conviction that they need not be given very serious consideration in the attempt to determine the primary causes of conditions which are a menace to the very life of the Government. Does it not appear that there are other potent causes for this serious condition which, though undiscovered, lie at the very root of the trouble?

Visits to Schools.

One of the schools visited was No. 15, at Third Avenue and State Street, Brooklyn. In the room next to the office of the Principal I found an excellent teacher with forty pupils. Having told her I was looking for a class of pupils which contained only those who should be in the class she expressed the belief that I would "hunt long and find few, if any, such classes." She stated that she had eight pupils who should be further advanced and twelve who were dragging at the foot of the class, and should have been put in a lower grade.

The Assistant Principal said similar conditions existed in all the other classes, with the exception of one, which was accurately graded. Receiving permission to examine the teacher's records in this class I called attention to the fact that, as the pupils' records varied from 40 to 95 per cent., even this class was not properly graded. For the first time in my investigation I found in this class two or three pupils who had been advanced from a lower division to a higher in the hope that they might be able to skip six months' work.

Fearing that they might not, their names were retained on the register of the room from which they had come, so that if they failed to do so, "it would not be charged against the teacher to whom they had been sent." Of the forty-one classes this was the one class pointed out as being properly graded. Yet even it was not accurately graded.

Nowhere did I find Principal, Assistant Principal, and teachers more anxious to do what was best for the children. Yet in that school were found 40 to 50 per cent. of the pupils either too far advanced for their work or so far behind that they could not receive benefit from the instruction. The teachers said, what all know to be a fact, that a large part of the teachers' time and nervous energy was devoted to trying to drive the backward over the work which they should not be required to do to keep the brighter busy and out of mischief, and at the same time suit the instruction to those in the middle of the class. Under such conditions is it any wonder that many pupils fail to be promoted, and therefore lose much time?

Promotions Hoped For.

At School No. 73, Manhattan, the Principal hoped to be able to promote 65 per cent. of the pupils. At School No. 29, Manhattan, the Principal informed me that not more than 43 per cent. in some classes would be promoted, though a larger percentage in most classes would be promoted. In School No. 27, Manhattan, the Assistant Principal stated that not less than 50 per cent. of any class would be promoted, while 60 per cent. of some classes would be promoted.

In the school at 272 West Tenth Street the records for promotion were better than in other schools in some grades, yet in the 2B grade fifteen had not been promoted when the rest were; fifteen failed in the 2A; thirteen failed in the 3A; thirteen in the 4A; fourteen in the 4B. School after school was visited with the same result.

Everywhere were seen the effects of the attempted uniformity, caused by the promotion examination, which enforces the sentence of "in together, all together, on together, out together," if there are any left. The school life of the majority is thus shortened, and the intellectual life is crushed out of the bright who should go on but cannot.

Methods 368 Years Old.

I believe it may be proved that all the defects mentioned may be almost entirely removed by the substitution of a more pliant plan of grading in place of the Procrustean beds of grades, which are practically the same as those in the first graded school found by Sturm 368 years ago.

The plan of classification in this city binds together the bright and the slow, and fails to provide for the individual differences of pupils. The effort is made to take all pupils of each grade over the same amount of the course of study in a given time.

Twice each year one of the shackles which bind the children together is opened. Still shackled, a part of the class passes into the next higher class, where it is immediately shackled to those who failed to be promoted. The whole class is then brought back to the foot of the treadmill, and, though many have almost finished the work of the grade, all are compelled to begin at the beginning and go over the work at the same pace. Thus a large proportion wastes six months twice each year.

A hundred different determining factors affect the progress of pupils in every class, yet the plan of classification takes it for granted that, once started, pupils will be able to cover the course at the same rate, regardless of all limiting conditions. That such is not the case no one dares deny. It is not sufficiently pliant to accommodate itself to the pupils, but demands that the teacher force the pupils to accommodate themselves to it. In short, the grading which was intended faithfully to serve the children has become their cruel master.

The Chief Cause of Defects.

With grades one-half a year apart, as they are in this city, it is impossible to reclassify pupils in the year. Superintendents may recommend that it be done, but, in spite of earnest work of Principals and teachers, pupils cannot skip the work of one-half a year successfully. Statistics which I have gathered in more than fifty cities prove that not one in a hundred pupils tries to do so. The majority of those who do try lose the time later becaus of having omitted essential work.

Discouraged because of enemies in the rear, they flounder at the foot of the class until they voluntarily leave school or are quietly obliged to stop. Those unfortunate ones who, because of absence or for other reasons, fall a short distance behind their classmates, must stumble along at the foot of the class until the end of the term; failing to be promoted, they must spend a half year upon unprofitable, lifeless reviews, to escape which a great many leave school. In short, it is very easy to lose half a year, but almost impossible to gain any time.

In this city almost every teacher must acknowledge that she has many pupils who should be elsewhere; yet the system of classification is such that it is not within the power of the Principal or teacher to place pupils where they evidently should be. Every child below the High School must fit into one of sixteen ironclad beds of grades. If they do not fit, the poor teacher must waste her time, health, nervous energy, even her very life, in her effort to try to make them fit. Ask any teacher whom you know if such is not the case.

It is the duty of the Superintendent to provide some plan which will enable Principals and teachers to place all pupils where they can work to advantage. This may mean much study and constant care, but it is the one thing for which, above all others, he is responsible. Any city which fails to provide such a plan must bear the responsibility of seeing the pupils, gradually but certainly, sifted down, down, down, until the lower grades are clogged by those who should have been permitted to advance to work suited to their capacities and their differing degrees of advancement.

"THE REDSKIN'S" EFFECT ON DRAMA THEIR TOPIC

But the Playgoers Strayed Far on Several Occasions.

FRENCH CRITIC CONDEMNS IT

Mr. Brady Whacks the Critics with 3,000 Words—One of His Men Defends Prizefighting.

The subject set for discussion by the American Playgoers Club in the Hotel Astor last night was "'The Redskin' and Its Consequent Effect on the Dramatic Situation." That was the subject. The discussion was a variety of very different matters.

Amelia Bingham was in the chair. At her right sat Donald McLaren, author of "The Redskin"; on her left Wah Nah, a woman of Indian blood. It was Wah Nah who started the discussion in the wrong direction. The moment she began to speak interest strayed afar to the rolling prairies and the moaning forests, the tepees, and happy hunting grounds. In fact, her talk sounded not a little like "Hiawatha" verse.

Then things became a little mixed. The topic for discussion was completely swamped. Nah Wah's start was improved by a French critic who happened to be present and who, instead of saying what he thought would be "The Redskin's" effect upon the dramatic situation, started in to condemn the play like the critic in novels, who sits in the front row and grunts.

"The less said about these plays the bettaire," said the French critic. "It was not'ing boot a leeving ceemetagraph. The actors deed hees vair' best wees a vair' bad play and—"

But he did not continue much further. After Wah Nah's commendation, what was the opinion of a French critic worth? He had never even scalped a meal ticket. Besides that, Donald McLaren, the author, was beginning to get restless. There was a strange fire in his eye. He wriggled in his chair. There was a hum of expectation as he arose. Whispers went through the room.

"I—I—I," began Mr. McLaren, "I can't say anything in justification of—of my play. That is to say, I—I think it best. I—I really cannot say more. I told Mr. Brady I wasn't a speaker the first night, when I—really—"

Mr. McLaren sat down. He was induced to get up again, and Miss Bingham said:

"Tell the playgoers how you wrote the play."

"I—I wrote it after reading books on Indian lore," said Mr. McLaren. "I was told I did not stick to the true Indian character. But I have—I have never studied a cigar store Indian."

He stuck again. Miss Amelia Bingham whispered:

"Tell them the plot."

Mr. McLaren explained part of it in a few words. Then he sat down for good. Dr. Landes, the Treasurer of the club, tried to explain the rest of the plot, and provoked the company to much laughter by getting mixed up the relationships of the principal characters.

Then a letter was read from Mr. Brady. It was 3,000 words long, and refought his battle against the critics. Then the critics became the topic. A representative of Mr. Brady got up and eulogized Mr. Brady, drifting by natural stages into a defense of the art of prizefighting.

When it had been argued that "The Redskin" was splendid, that critics should be ostracized from all decent society, and that prizefighting was a noble sport, an elderly man got up and, clearing his throat, said very ominously:

"We have done all these things, and now, as the hour grows late, let us take up the subject of the possible effect of all these things upon the drama."

The meeting gasped. But Miss Nah Wah rescued the situation with another discussion of the play.

At the end it was agreed that "The Redskin" would have a consequent effect on the drama.

EXIT NOW THE CRITIC SLAYER

Westward Soon Goes Brady's "Redskin"—Reappearance of the Critics.

This is the last week of "The Redskin" at the Liberty.—Press Agent's Notice.

Down at Wallack's still the Squaw Man gathers dollars from the public, and upon the stage the savage Injuns—sham ones—Faversham ones—stride about in painted splendor, stride about like Hiawatha, Mudjekeewis, Minnehaha, and our other classic redskins. And across the way at Weber's, at the Empire and Belasco, Injuns likewise pound the tom-tom, smoke the peace-pipe, shoot the arrow, sound the war-whoop, scalp the pale-face, yell for pay-day, do the other things expected of the Injun. But—alas! for Brady's Redskin. Blank his verses, blank his coffers. He must vanish from Manhattan; from the plains of Forty-second; from the fields of the Rialto, from the hunting grounds of Broadway. Hard the fate of Brady's Redskin.

And the hunted funny critic looks out from his hiding-places; looks out from his lofty tree-tops, looks out from his bombproof cellars. Listens to the thund-ring echoes, to the dull reverberations of those curtain-calls of "Brady!"—mighty, maddened Big Chief Brady. Cautiously, with frightened glances, walks the flabbergasted critic by that building where he may not criticise a haughty Redskin; by that building known so strangely as the Liberty The-ay-ter. There before the curtain Brady taught us that a pale-face critic does not know cigar-store Injuns from a Cherokee or Choctaw, from a Sioux or an Apache, from a Creek or a Comanche; from, in fact, his own grandmother.

Now the trembling pale-face critic breathes again with some abandon, thanking Manito, the mighty Spirit of the Stream and Forest, who preserved his scalp and saved him from the awful wrath of Brady—mighty, maddened Big Chief Brady.

ALL FOR TINY MISS POWERS.

The Firemen, the Police, and the Ambulance Called Out for a Birth.

Joseph Powers, a bartender, lives at 324 East Twenty-sixth Street. He got home early Saturday night, but was kept out of his wife's room by the motherly looking woman who was caring for Mrs. Powers. He then sat down in the dining room and waited. At 7 o'clock yesterday morning the motherly looking woman came out and said to Powers:

"You'd better call the doctor."

Powers dashed out. His doctor was out. Powers rang up Police Headquarters and told the Sergeant about it. The Sergeant misunderstood.

"Where is the fire?" he asked.

"On the first floor of 324 East Twenty-sixth Street, Powers's flat," said Powers, misunderstanding the Sergeant.

The Sergenat notified Fire Headquarters and a still alarm was sent in to the engine house at 223 East Twenty-fifth Street.

Then the police of the East Twenty-second Street Station were notified.

The engine thrashed up. The police came panting after. Windows went up and the neighbors began to take notice. A fire truck and a hose cart rattled up. The firemen saw a light in the Powers flat, so up there they went. The nurse met them at the door.

"Keep as quiet as you can," she cautioned. Then she whispered to the leader. He turned and spoke to the others, and they turned and went out, grinning broadly.

At the street door they met Policemen Dealing and O'Connor.

"Where is the fire?" they gasped.

"You'd better send for an ambulance," a fireman said.

Five minutes later, when the firemen had gone, an ambulance clanged up from Bellevue Hospital. Dr. Hunt, who came with it, was not needed; the excitement had already brought a physician.

Then Powers, who had sat, dazed, at the dining room table, arose, went out, and drank in a deep draught of cool air.

"Guess I was excited," said he.

Then he lowered his voice.

"It's as fine a girl as you ever saw," said he.

CLEVELAND IS SIXTY-NINE.

Spends His Birthday in Florida Waiting for Spring Weather Here.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 18.—For the first time since his home was moved to Princeton, ex-President Grover Cleveland spent his birthday out of town to-day. He is now in Florida on a trip for his health, which has troubled him more than usual this year. Mr. Cleveland has already been absent from Westlands, his home, for about ten days. He is likely to remain South for another month until Spring weather arrives.

Mr. Cleveland was 69 years old to-day. On account of his absence the usual dinner party to a few of his most intimate friends had to be dispensed with. For years it has been his custom to pass the day with his family and to receive the close friends who drop in annually to tender their congratulations.

Yesterday afternoon a large delegation of students who were gathered to celebrate St. Patrick's Day decided to call on the Sage of Princeton on the eve of his birthday and get him to address the crowd, as he often does when the undergraduates are parading after an athletic victory. When they reached Westlands, however, they were disappointed by learning from the butler that the ex-President was out of town.

Mrs. Cleveland passed the day with her children. When seen to-night she said she deeply regretted the absence of Mr. Cleveland on this occasion, but trusted that he was enjoying the day and would return greatly improved. The ex-President is remarkably well preserved for his age, but he has suffered in the last year from gout, and his ill-health has cheated him out of several of his hunts in this locality.

On his present trip to Florida he was accompanied by Prof. Howard McClenahan of the Princeton Faculty.

GUILBERT IN VAUDEVILLE.

The French Singer Signs for a Month's Tour in Proctor Theatres.

F. F. Proctor announced last night the capture of Yvette Guilbert for a limited engagement at his theatres. Since Mme. Guilbert came to this country for a series of matinée recitals under the management of Charles Frohman, she had refused inviting offers from other vaudeville managers, and had booked passage to return to Paris on the Kronprinz Wilhelm within a fortnight, so that the news of her surrender to Mr. Proctor was a surprise.

The salary she is to receive has not been revealed, but it is said to exceed even that paid to Lillian Russell.

Mme. Guilbert will make a short tour of Mr. Frohman's out-of-town theatres during the next fortnight, giving matinée recitals in Boston, Philadelphia, and Chicago, after which she will return to New York to fulfill the Proctor contract, which is for four weeks. It is to be her only appearance in vaudeville.

She will open at Mr. Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre on Easter Monday, after which she will sing at Proctor's Fifty-eighth Street, and possibly at the Fifth Avenue and 125th Street Theatres. She will appear at each performance in a repertoire of English and French songs.

LAST OPERA CONCERT.

Final Programme of the Season Devoted to Wagner.

It was altogether a Wagner programme last night at the Metropolitan Opera House—by request, Herr Director Conried said—at the last concert of the season. The house was filled to its capacity. Though it was specifically written down that no encores were to be allowed on account of the length of the programme, the audience was unstinting in its applause. Hertz directed the orchestra, and ten of the Herr Director's soloists sang.

Mme. Homer gave an aria from "Rienzi," Knote gave Lohengrin's Ezrählung from "Lohengrin," Van Rooy Wotan's Abschied und Feuerzauber from "Die Walküre," and associated in the Walkürenritt from "Die Walküre" were Mmes. Alten, Bauermeister, Homer, Jacoby, Jomelli, Mulford, Ralph, and Weed. Fremstad and Knote sang a duet from "Siegfried."

SEABROOKE AS A STAR.

Comedian Will Appear at Fields's Theatre Next Fall in Comic Opera.

James K. Hackett, who leased the Fields's Theatre reecntly, has signed a contract with Thomas Q. Seabrooke by which he obtains the services of that actor for a term of years. It is Mr. Hackett's intention to star Mr. Seabrooke in a new comic opera, "The Alcayde," words by George Stephens and music by Frederick Barry.

Both the librettist and the composer are residents of Boston. "The Alcayde" will be put on at the Fields' Theatre early in the Fall.

ODDITIES IN CHOPPER'S BOX.

But He Chops Right On—Rings Cigars and Pocketbooks Alike.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" lamented a woman in a Subway station yesterday as she hurled back from the edge of the platform to the ticket chopper. "I threw my pocketbook in the chopper. Dig it out, please dig it out for me?"

"Don't get rattled, lady," replied the chopper. "Tell the ticket agent about it. Them troubles belong to him. All I do is chop, whatever you chuck in. It don't chop 'em up."

The ticket agent filled out a printed form with the name of the woman, her address and the article lost and gave it to her.

"Take it down to the offices to-morrow and you'll get your money back," he told her.

"But there's only 10 cents and some clippings in it," she complained, "and it will cost me 10 to get to the office and back."

"Can't help it, lady; let 'em pass, please."

"They chuck in all sorts of things," said the chopper, wearily. "Small packages, chewing gum slabs, pocketbooks, and all sorts of trinkets go clattering down, and I just keep on choppin'. Ain't got time to look out for absent-minded people. Men are just as bad. One of them threw a $125 diamond ring in the other day. Some of 'em chuck in their cigars and cigarettes and small change."

"Say, I put in my Prayer Book by mistake," moaned another woman as the arm of the chopper rose and fell.

"Can't help it, lady," intoned the chopper. "Fill out a blank, lady; it's chopped."

"SNOOKERS" IS THE LATEST

Coined by the Mayor, Who Would Like to Snook a Bit Himself.

New York's political lexicon has acquired a new word. It is "snook," and it refers to newspaper attack or ridicule. It was used by Mayor McClellan on Saturday night while he was talking with a group of his friends, including the reporters and Representative Samuel W. McCall at the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick dinner at Delmonico's.

Half a dozen reporters sat facing the Mayor just as the speeches were about to begin. Mr. McClellan, who was in a pleasant frame of mind, was telling stories.

"How'd you like to be back in this game?" asked one reporter, referring to the Mayor's early training as a newspaper man.

"Well," replied the Mayor, smilingly, "I've been snooked by snookers so much recently that I'm beginning to wish I were a snooker once more myself and snook a little against the snookers who're snooking me." Then he laughed.

"Why not jolly them a bit?" suggested Mr. McCall.

"I'm not proficient enough in the art," retorted the Mayor with a grin. "That's a science on which the Talleyrands and Machiavellis of Washington must have a monopoly."

WHILE speculators and investors are seeking "bargains" in Long Island or the Bronx real estate, do not lose sight of the fact that on Manhattan Island abundant opportunities still remain for profitable investment.

HOSPITAL WILL MOVE ON VICTORIA THEATRE

Concert Again Announced as for Mount Sinai's Benefit.

WANT THE LICENSE REVOKED

Hammerstein Was Warned Not to Repeat the Benefit Announcement, Declares President Wallach.

The Board of Directors of the Mount Sinai Hospital, at 100th Street and Fifth Avenue, will ask the Bureau of Licenses to revoke the Sunday night concert license held by Oscar Hammerstein's Victoria Theatre. The Mount Sinai Hospital authorities will base their request on the ground that the Hammerstein management persists in printing this notice on the programme of its Sunday evening entertainments:

Grand Sacred Concert.
(Benefit Mount Sinai Hospital.)

For the third successive Sunday the programme appeared with this notice last night, and the Board of Directors of the hospital say that after giving repeated warnings, both through their President, Isaac Wallach, and their counsel, Edward Lauterbach, the Victoria management persists in repeating the notice.

The hospital authorities declare that at no time have they solicited a benefit performance at Hammerstein's or any other theatre, that they don't raise money by that method, that Mr. Hammerstein has never offered any of the receipts of such advertised performances, and the hospital wouldn't accept them if he did, and that he has completely ignored their request to refrain from using the name without authorization.

Mr. Wallach had a representative at the Victoria Theatre last night, who got copies of the programme, which are to be used in evidence. Speaking of the subject Mr. Wallach said:

"This repeated offense on the part of the Victoria has reached the point where patience has ceased to be a virtue, and we will not only demand that the Victoria license be revoked, but will in all probability institute other proceedings of a character commensurate with the offense, which we consider flagrant.

"Mr. Hammerstein has been told several times that this notice must cease, and the management of the theatre promised us that they would keep Mount Sinai's name off the programme. They have not done so. They are now adding insult to injury. It is an outrage against common decency, and we will not tolerate it further.

"We presume that many people have been humbugged into the belief that these Sunday night performances have been really for the benefit of Mount Sinai Hospital. In all probability the receipts of the theatre have been increased thereby. But we haven't received any of the money, and we wouldn't accept it. Why the theatre should single us out as a special mark we cannot understand."

The Hammerstein managing the Victoria Theatre in the absence of Oscar Hammerstein, who is in Europe, said that the Mount Sinai notice appeared on the programme last night because the sheet had been printed far in advance of the request to have the inscription removed.

This was denied by Mr. Wallach, who said that almost two weeks had elapsed since the first notice was sent to the theatre by the hospital authorities. Under the circumstances the hospital board wouldn't accept this excuse, he said.

Site for Fynes's Newark Theatre?

The property at 889, 891, and 893 Broad Street, Newark, N. J., which belonged to the Morgan T. Baxter estate, has been sold for $160,000. The plot of ground, it is said, may be the site for the new theatre building to be erected by J. Austin Fynes. Those connected with the sale refuse to reveal the name of the new owner.

The Cearense Still Aground.

ATLANTIC CITY, March 18.—Wrecking tugs to-day failed to move the British steamer Cearense, from Para for New York, which went ashore early Friday last near Seaside Park. The work of taking out the cargo continues.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Another period of general precipitation has set in over the Middle Rocky Mountain region, the Southwest, and the interior valley.

For Tuesday the weather in Atlantic Coast districts will be unsettled, with rain in the south and snow or rain in the New England and the Middle Atlantic States, and snow will continue in the lake region. There is no indication of warmer weather. In the Upper Missouri Valley a strong area of high pressure has appeared, and a continuation of low temperatures in all portions of the country west of the Rocky Mountains for the next few days is indicated.

The winds along the New England Coast will be fresh west, becoming easterly. Middle Atlantic Coast, light and variable, becoming fresh northeasterly; South Atlantic Coast, fresh, possibly brisk northeasterly; East Gulf Coast, fresh east to southeast; West Gulf Coast, fresh and variable; Lake Michigan, fresh northeast.

FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TUESDAY.

Eastern New York—Fair Monday, followed by snow late in the afternoon or at night; Tuesday snow, fresh northeast winds.

New England—Fair Monday, rain in south, snow in northern districts Monday night or Tuesday, light west winds, becoming east.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at midnight, taken from the thermometer of the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

DEATH LIST OF A DAY.

Laurence Pike.

Laurence Pike, well known in this city, died suddenly from heart disease at the San Remo Hotel, Central Park West and Seventy-fourth Street, on Saturday afternoon. He had suffered from bronchitis for several months, and it was believed that he was on the road to recovery, when his heart gave out.

Mr. Pike was the son of the late S. N. Pike of Cincinnati, who built many big theatres in this country, among them the Grand Opera House in this city. Laurence Pike was born in Cincinnati, but had spent most of his life here. He was 55 years old.

Mr. Pike was a member of several clubs, among them the Lotos, the Manhattan, and the New York Yacht Club. He is survived by three sisters. The body was removed to the residence of his sister, Mrs. Janet P. Goin, 582 Fifth Avenue, where the funeral will take place to-morrow.

Duke Constantine of Oldenburg Dead.

NICE, March 18.—Duke Constantine of Oldenburg died here to-day. He was born in 1850. He was a cousin of the reigning Grand Duke of Oldenburg.

Obituary Notes.

Dr. SAMUEL GAMBLE, a chemist of York, Penn., died there yesterday. He was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, twenty-five years ago, and was educated at the York Collegiate Institute and the Medico-Chirurgical College, Philadelphia.

Mrs. MARY E. UBHAUS, wife of Police Captain John H. Ubhaus of Newark, died there yesterday. She was 61 years old, and for forty years had been an invalid. Two sons survive her.

JOSEPH MAYHON, a retired silk merchant of this city, died at St. Augustine, Fla., on Friday, of heart disease. He was 59 years old. He is survived by a widow. The funeral will take place from the residence of Mr. Mayhon's brother-in-law, Augustus W. Kelly, 20 West Eighty-eighth Street, this morning at 10 o'clock. The burial will be at Woodlawn.

Mrs. AURELIA SAGE BLAUVELT, wife of the Rev. Dr. C. R. Blauvelt, formerly pastor of the Reformed Church of America at Hyde Park-on-the-Hudson and editor of The Christian Intelligencer, died yesterday at Nyack. She had been ill for several years with heart trouble. Mrs. Blauvelt was well known for her interest in missionary, temperance and church work.

PETER McOWEN, 26 years old, a son of ex-Coroner Anthony McOwen of the Bronx, died on March 9 at Los Angeles, Cal., after a week's illness of pneumonia. Mr. McOwen left the home of his father at 515 Wales Avenue, the Bronx, about four weeks ago to start in business in California. The body was sent East and funeral services will be held at the home of Anthony McOwen to-day. The burial will be in St. Raymond's Cemetery at Westchester. A widow survives him.

HENRY KARSTENS, 55 years old, and for many years receiving teller of the Harlem Savings Bank, died Saturday at his residence, 66 West 120th Street, after six days' illness. Death was due to a complication of diseases. He was born and educated in this city and had long been identified with the Harlem Presbyterian Church, of which he was an elder. A widow survives him. Funeral services will be held at his late residence this evening and the burial will be in Woodlawn.

HENRY A. HURLBUT died yesterday at the Manhattan Hotel. He was a member of the Union League Club and the New England Society, and came from old New England stock. His father was the late Henry A. Hurlbut. He was a merchant in this city, and was Commissioner of Immigration for a time. Mr. Hurlbut leaves a widow. The funeral will take place at 11:30 o'clock to-morrow morning in Trinity Chapel, West Twenty-third Street. The burial will be in Woodlawn Cemetery.

WILLIAM BRANDRETH died at Ossining yesterday of heart disease. He was a son of the late Dr. Benjamin Brandreth, and was born in 1842. He studied at the Mount Pleasant Military Academy, and then became a druggist. Subsequently he traveled extensively in South America, the West Indies, and the Western States. In 1876 he opened an office in New York to deal in mines and mineral lands, and all his life was associated with mines and mining. He was a Mason, and a member of the St. George's Society. A wife and three daughters survive him.

THE FINANCIAL SITUATION

Although last week brought no measurable changes in the fundamental factors underlying financial markets, superficial developments were in the main unfavorable to the stock market, whose response was found in a notable contraction of business and wavering prices. All markets were adversely affected by the failure of the conference at Algeciras to reach an agreement upon Moroccan matters. The hopes of our own market had been raised high at the end of the previous week in the belief that the end of this vexing situation was clearly in view. It had been encouraged in this attitude by private and public advices from European centres, by the open announcement of the Spanish Premier to the Chamber of Deputies that the work of the conference would be ended in three more sittings, and by the week-end break in the foreign exchange markets, a movement which is always considered a certain guide in such matters, since it reflects the bulk of banking judgment. The decline in exchange was important, since it promised relief to our congested money market through the medium of importations of gold, but the promise was only partially borne out. An engagement of $1,250,000 gold for import was followed by such an advance in exchange rates as to render further takings of gold out of the question, and just as the previous decline in exchange had represented a cheerful view of the status of the Moroccan negotiations, so this sharp advance reflected a return to the old state of uncertainty. At the close of the week Germany was still fishing in troubled waters and European markets were sitting idly by waiting to appraise her catch. It is impossible to relegate the Moroccan situation to a minor place in the list of factors weighing upon financial markets, even though from superficial observation our own interest in the Moroccan question itself may seem very slight. While in Europe the belief is general that no conflict would follow a failure of the conference to reach an agreement, nevertheless, recognition of the fact that the suspicion of Germany which has long been rife in France would lead the French people and French bankers to move slowly in new enterprises and to maintain money reserves at a high figure engenders like precautions elsewhere and puts a very definite limit to those undertakings which involve borrowings of French funds.——How this situation works out to the disarrangement of plans in our own country may be understood when it is said that there is at least one important undertaking, the promotion of which has been attended to in New York City, but which is to be financed with English capital, that is indefinitely held up owing to the unwillingness of the London moneyed interests concerned to finance the enterprise until the Moroccan situation is well out of the way. There are probably many similar instances, perhaps on a smaller scale, but in common they serve to show how vital is the interest of our market in the clearing up of this troubled position. A part of the advance in exchange rates which made additional engagements of gold impossible last week was due to another matter which must be taken into account at all times, namely, the French demand upon London for gold following the announcement that Russia was at last preparing to issue a great loan. To a certain extent we must compete with Russia for any money or credit we receive from Europe, but thanks to the abounding prosperity of this country we should easily win our share of the favors of European investors. Last week's publication of trade statistics for February, which disclosed the fact that in the eight months of the present fiscal year the excess of exports of merchandise over imports was $398,419,000, an increase of $119,357,000 over the same period of the previous year, indicates the favorable trade position we are gaining, while recent declines in grain and cotton prices should serve, and in fact have served, to stimulate purchases of these commodities by Europe in such quantity as to further augment our ability to call upon European resources, an end toward which our heavy sales of securities are likewise working.

Of direct influence upon speculative sentiment last week were the sensational breaks in Chicago Union Traction stocks, a further decline in Consolidated Gas shares and debentures, and the weakness at the close of the period in the stock of the Missouri Pacific Railway, a development followed by unsettlement in the prices of other so-called Gould stocks. In the two first-named developments Wall Street chose to believe that it had a foretaste of the ultimate effects of the widespread agitation against corporations. The persistence of the City of Chicago in pushing the question of the validity of the franchises of the Chicago Union Traction Company's subsidiaries undoubtedly reflects the present attitude of Chicago upon public utility matters, while the reduction in the price of gas in this city, although due to no direct action by the city itself, likewise meets the wishes of its people. It is manifestly too much, however, to argue, as speculators were inclined to do last week, that because Chicago Union Traction preferred fell 40 points and Consolidated Gas 38 points as a result of these steps, court proceedings or legislative action will at once be directed against public utility corporations the country over with similar effects upon the stocks of these concerns. If, as seems to be the case in the Chicago Union Traction situation, there is a flaw in the corporation's powers, this cannot be attributed to those who, favoring municipal ownership, happen to discover the flaw, nor does it follow because one corporation charges such a rate for its product as to enable it to pay unusual and possibly unfair returns upon its stock, in addition to issuing from time to time additional stock to care for a growing and unwieldy surplus, that all such corporations are in this position, and must therefore feel the hand of Legislatures. In short, the cases are exceptional and unsafe as a basis for generalizations, while even in these specific instances it is not improbable that the fears of stockholders are exaggerated, and needless sacrifices of holdings are resulting. The weakness in Missouri Pacific and the unsettlement of other Gould stocks followed the publication of the Missouri Pacific's statement for the year 1905, in which it was found that surplus for the year was insufficient by some $18,000 to care for the 5 per cent. dividend on the stock. This, however, was not the sole cause for this movement, for it has long been understood that the Missouri Pacific was barely earning its dividends, while the other Gould roads, handicapped by important construction work to bring them to modern standards, have been in even worse case. It was rather to the announcement, made a day earlier than the publication of the Missouri Pacific report, that the two representatives of the so-called Standard Oil interests in that road had withdrawn from its Directorate that was due the pressure of stock for sale. These resignations leave the development of the Gould properties, including the ambitious project of a line from the Atlantic to the Pacific, practically in the hands of the Goulds, and Wall Street's disposition is to await the outcome before wagering on its success, or even on its failure.

At the week's end there had come no word regarding the action of the anthracite miners upon the flat refusal of their demands made by the operators. Representatives of the miners were in attendance through the week at the conference of bituminous miners at Indianapolis, and toward the close of the week, while there was nothing so definite as to encourage immoderate hopes, advices from Indianapolis seemed certainly to indicate a conciliatory attitude, this being expressed in a professed willingness to submit the matters in dispute to the Strike Commission appointed by President Roosevelt in 1902. The belief spread that no disturbances would occur in the bituminous fields. These matters, however, assume a shadowy and unsatisfactory character when set against the fact that in the last great coal strike the loss in wages was over $30,000,000 and the loss in traffic to various railroads some $24,000,000. The financial markets want definite assurance that there will be no repetition of these losses.

TOLD ROUND THE TICKER.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, one would think, must have had all he could do to make his own millions without spending any time making money for other people, yet on occasion he has spared enough time from his own affairs to increase the savings of others. One authentic incident of the kind has been made known which serves to illustrate the fact that with men like Mr. Rockefeller a very small amount of another's money may prove more of a burden than all his own millions.

A young fellow who had yet made no money of his own and knew nothing about the art of investing capital, but who nevertheless had to care for the small savings of an aunt of his, conceived the idea of appealing to Mr. Rockefeller to invest his aunt's $1,000. He went to see Mr. Rockefeller and managed to gain admittance to his office. The request was made with such frankness and with such show of confidence on the boy's part in Mr. Rockefeller's ability to turn the $1,000 into many times that amount that the Standard Oil magnate was led to accept the money and told the lad that he would see what could be done with it.

"Thereafter quarterly the boy's aunt received a check for interest on $1,000 at the rate of 6 per cent. a year. The boy had expected something more than that, but thought Mr. Rockefeller was doing things in his own way, and that the best thing to do was to wait. At the end of eighteen months a check for $1,600 came instead of the usual interest payment. The check was accompanied by a note from Mr. Rockefeller saying that his investment of the $1,000 had in eighteen months yielded $600 in addition to the interest at 6 per cent., but that he felt unwilling longer to assume the responsibility of caring for the money, and so returned the principal along with the profits.

The boy took care of the money after that, but it is not recorded that he ever discovered the way of investing it as profitably as had Mr. Rockefeller. That was a secret the unraveling of which would have been more profitable to the boy than the return of the money he had intrusted to Mr. Rockefeller plus a year and a half's interest with $600 profit added.

GEORGE J. GOULD by last week's retirement of the Rockefellers from the Missouri Pacific board is left in more complete control than ever of the properties in which he is the dominant factor. Mr. Gould has long had the reputation of being energetic and at times even autocratic in the management of his properties. Mr. Gould devotes much time to the direction of the roads of which he is the guiding spirit. It is said of him that he takes much advice, but that by a process of elimination most of those who have remained his advisers are those who generally agree with him on all points of importance. Nevertheless Mr. Gould has his cabinet, and it holds sessions almost daily. The gathering of Mr. Gould and his advisers takes place usually at lunch time in the Western Union Building. In the old days Russell Sage journeyed daily to these midday counsels. He has attended none of them of late, however. E. T. Jeffery is now one of Mr. Gould's closest associates. He was indeed made the spokesman for the Gould interests, but since assuming the title, rather curiously, he has become less of a spokesman than formerly.

T. S. YOUNG, who is one of the oldest members of the Produce Exchange and a veteran trader in the wheat pit, celebrated yesterday the fiftieth anniversary of his wedding. His fellow-members of the Exchange profited by the opportunity to present a loving cup to him. The suggestion of good-fellowship afforded by the incident seems particularly timely, in view of the animated discussions that have of late gone on within the Exchange.

GRANT B. SCHLEY, E. J. Berwin, John W. Gates, Leonard C. Hanna, and E. W. Ogleby are going South this week to hold a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company at Birmingham, Ala. The meeting will receive the reports of Julian Kennedy and other experts on the properties of the company, and will consider plans for extensive developments. Mr. Schley is a lover of out of doors and a sportsman, and it is not unlikely that the party will delay their return long enough to try at the shooting on the preserves of the Oakates Club in South Carolina, of which he is a member.

TRACTION'S EX-FRANCHISE

Chicago's Railway Securities Demoralized by Court's Decision.

HOLDERS FACE SERIOUS LOSS

Five Years of Litigation and $1,000,000 in Lawyers' Fees Spent to No Purpose.

After five years of litigation, during the course of which $1,000,000 has been spent in lawyers' fees, the Chicago traction interests last week secured from the Supreme Court of the United States a decision which at one stroke wiped out practically all their claims to street railway franchises in the City of Chicago and caused a contraction of $14,000,000 in the value of the securities affected. To understand the surprise with which the decision of the Supreme Court was received by the traction interests, it is only necessary to know the absolute certainty which those interests felt in the outcome of the appeal to the Supreme Court. This certainty on their part was increased by the knowledge that the attorneys for the city had no hope that the Supreme Court would decide as it did. It is asserted with all positiveness that the attorneys for the city did all in their power to guide the case of the city against the traction companies to some other goal than the Supreme Court at Washington.

So little hope of a sweeping decision in favor of the city did its attorneys have that in Washington on the very threshold of the Supreme Court they offered to compromise with the traction companies on the basis of allowing them all that the Grosscup decision had previously given them. That was only half of what they wanted, and so sure were the traction interests of getting the other half from the Supreme Court that the offer of the city was refused.

A long succession of attorneys who at one time or another during the progress of the litigation wrote opinions on the merits of the case advised the companies that the extension of their franchise for ninety-nine years from 1859 could not be successfully contested by the City of Chicago.

On the 5th of February, 1901, the first legal report on the validity of their franchises was made to the Chicago traction companies by ex-President Harrison. He expressed it as his opinion that there could be no manner of doubt of the validity of the extension of the companies' franchises. The same opinion was expressed by numerous other eminent counsel during the five succeeding years, but the Supreme Court has overruled them all.

Since the decision has been rendered the opinion has been expressed by one of the leading attorneys of this city that the traction interests made a vital mistake in ever submitting a question as important to them as the validity of their franchises to the chances of a Supreme Court decision. This advice has been given privately and too late to be acted on, but it is safe to assume that its wisdom, in their own case at least, is now fully recognized by the capitalists who are the heaviest losers by last week's decision.

They still have the hope that a rehearing may be had from the Supreme Court, and in time a reversal or at least a modification of the decision. This, however, is rather small consolation for their disappointment. That the loss which the owners of the traction properties of Chicago are facing is no small matter appears from the most casual consideration of the effects of the decision. With the exception of one of the subsidiary companies of the Chicago Union Traction Company the decision practically deprives all the companies of their most valuable asset—their franchise. It leaves nothing but their tangible property with the prospect of selling that to the City of Chicago should the city find some way to pay for it.

Some indication of the loss in the value of the securities of the Chicago traction companies is indicated by a comparison of present prices with the high prices of last year. These are the figures:

	Amount.	High 1905.	Present Price.	Loss.
Chicago City....	$18,000,000	200	157	$7,740,000
Chi. Union Tr..	20,000,000	13¾	5	1,770,000
Chi. U. Tr. pf...	12,000,000	54	16	4,560,000
Total loss..........				$14,070,000

The full loss, however, if the Supreme Court's decision is not modified later on, will in all probability be much greater than that here indicated. As a banker prominently identified with the Chicago interest said after the decision was handed down, no one can be expected under present conditions to purchase the securities of Chicago traction companies. The larger holders cannot have been the sellers of these stocks during the past week. They probably could not liquidate their stock without marking the price down to nothing. Under such conditions they would hardly make the effort to sell at all. With all value based on the company's franchise eliminated, it is hardly to be supposed that the tangible assets left would be more than enough, if enough, to liquidate the bonds of the companies.

Owing to the great interest that has been aroused in the Chicago traction situation by the Supreme Court decision, it is worth while to recall the details of the purchase of these properties by the Eastern capitalists, including the Widener-Elkins and the Morgan interests, who now hold the bulk of the Chicago traction stocks. The Chicago Union Traction Company was formed by the Widener-Elkins syndicate in 1899. A controlling interest in the West Chicago and North Chicago street railways was purchased for $10,000,000 in cash from the late Charles T. Yerkes. To raise this cash and $2,000,000 additional for the improvement of the properties the Chicago Union Traction Company sold $12,000,000 of preferred stock at par, with a bonus of $6,000,000 of common stock. Later the Chicago Union Traction took over the Consolidated Traction Company and increased the Union Traction common stock from $6,000,000 to $20,000,000.

Control of the Chicago City Railway Company was purchased in January, 1905, at $200 a share by Marshall Field, John J. Mitchell, and P. A. Valentine, representing a syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. It was intended to merge the Chicago City with the Chicago Union Traction, and after consolidation establish a single fare over all the lines controlled by the two companies. The protraction of the litigation prevented the carrying out of this plan, and now this and all other plans of the traction interests are put to naught by the decision of the Supreme Court, which to all intents and purposes deprives them of all their franchises. Practically the only company to escape is the Consolidated Traction Company whose franchise admittedly has seven years longer to run.

In this connection it is interesting to note that the only interest in the Chicago traction companies retained by Mr. Yerkes after he sold his North and West Chicago stock was represented by bonds of the Consolidated Traction Company. These to the amount of $5,730,000 are still held by the Yerkes estate.

Those who have studied closely the position of the traction situation in Chicago as affected by the recent decision say that the City of Chicago is now in a worse quandary than ever. The opinion is expressed in some quarters that the Chicago city authorities would not at all have regretted a decision against them which would have made possible a compromise of some kind with the companies. Apparently the cancellation of the companies' franchises by the Supreme Court leaves the City of Chicago, whose administration is committed to municipal ownership, no alternative but to purchase the remaining assets of the traction companies and enter itself into the ownership of the city traction lines.

Then comes the problem of payment for the tangible property of the traction companies, which no decision of any court can take from them without compensation. Whence is the city to secure the necessary funds? The proposed issue of Mueller certificates, so called, must needs be a failure, bankers of this city say. It is claimed that in the form in which it is proposed to issue these certificates they will be a legal claim against neither the city nor the property to be taken over from the traction companies. These the traction interests cannot, they say, be expected to take, and the public are likely, it is thought, to be equally adverse to accepting them.

This situation indeed may in the end, irrespective of a modification or reversal of the Supreme Court's decision, offer a way out of the present impasse. Failing to carry out its plan for immediate municipal ownership, the City of Chicago may be willing to grant a franchise on some terms that the companies may be willing to accept, and the much-tangled and long-discussed relations of the city and the traction companies may be put upon a more acceptable and a sounder basis, both financially and from the public's point of view. The conditions which have existed in Chicago for the past five years have necessarily been conducive to public comfort as little as they have to the peace of mind of those whose money has been invested in the securities of the companies whose franchises have now been declared null and void.

BOSTON COPPER GOSSIP.

Thomas F. Cole Widening His Field of Activity—Heinze Engineers Busy.

BOSTON, March 17.—It would not be surprising if Mr. Thomas F. Cole were next heard of in Utah. Not satisfied with his prominence in the mining camps of Montana and Arizona, this indefatigable copper genius is said to be seeking to be identified with the Guggenheims, as he is already in with the other big parties in the field.

It may be only a coincidence, but it is understood that he will meet in Chicago a party which left Boston on Thursday for an extended exploration, and will accompany them through Utah as well as Arizona and Montana. This party includes William A. Paine, Charles H. Paine, N. L. Amster, R. T. McKeever, N. B. McKelvie, George H. Flint, and Dr. Elbridge Shorey, and before they return, two weeks hence, something may be developed which will point to new activities in the copper industry.

It is understood that President Broughton of the Utah company is ready to discuss matters with Mr. Cole.

As for the general situation, let a well-posted operator speak for it: "I never saw a market which looked in every way as good as this once. It is sold to a standstill and wants to run away. The big fellows are trying to hold it back all the time, and only take stocks when the bears get too gay selling them. If they can hold the market down this month I believe you will see a big bull movement in April. I think Amalgamated alone will touch 130 before it touches par."

This gentleman evidently takes no stock in Mr. Lawson's daily threats of trouble, nor in that operator's offer to bet a million at 10 to 1 that the United Copper Company did not receive "about $14,000,000" in the settlement at Butte, as is given out.

The report that Butte Coalition may be listed in Boston arouses Mr. Lawson to threaten Grand Jury proceedings and the exposure of "bare-faced swindling."

As intimated in this column last week would be the case, the American Smelting interest has exercised its option on the control of Nevada Consolidated, the figure being 12½. It is thought that Comberland-Ely will be the holding company for Nevada Consolidated.

Announcement that the Boston Consolidated deal was off "temporarily" caused a slump and a subsequent smart rally in that stock, which had been weakening during the delay. It is now up to Mr. Newhouse; the hitch, as has been repeatedly stated in this correspondence, is over the Cactus properties. Boston Consolidated is now selling "boom off."

Late advices from Houghton are that Ashbed is developing a fair showing of copper as the result of eight months of work. Drifting is under way at two levels.

It is said that the Hancock Mine, which has been idle twenty years, is to resume. The Hancock is between the Quincy and the Portage Lake. Mr. Cole is rumored to be interested with the Ryan heirs in the present enterprise.

The announcement has been made in Butte that the Butte and London Copper Mining Company has been taken over by the Venture Company of London. The Butte and London owns 113 acres east of and adjoining the North Butte.

The examination of the Ohio Copper property, which has just begun, is said by Mr. Newhouse to be in the interest of the Venture Company and himself. Should this develop, it means another big mine for the Bingham district.

Heinze engineers are said to be examining the Eagle and Blue Bell.

Franklin expects to report a yield of 6,000,000 pounds of refined copper this year. Thirty power drills are now at work in the various openings.

Some copper has been disclosed by the shaft being sunk on the Arcadian property.

SATISFACTORY WEEK FOR BRITISH TRADE

Raw Materials Firmer—Manufacturers Doing Well.

RAW COTTON LESS ACTIVE

Home Trade in Finished Goods Improving—Wool Active and Dear—Better Demand for Pig Iron.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

LONDON, March 18.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"Business and industrial reports for the last week are generally satisfactory. Raw materials as a rule were firmer, and manufacturers seemed to be doing well.

"Breadstuffs were generally weaker on unwieldy supplies. Oats were firmer. Maize and barley were cheaper. Linseed advanced. Rapeseed was more active. Cottonseed was dull. Oils were dull.

"In the cotton trade there was less activity in the raw material, which, however, closed firm. Yarns were quiet. Manufactured goods were moderately active, with the home trade still improving.

"Native wool was active and dear. At the colonial wool auctions values were from 5 to 15 per cent. better. Woolens showed a material improvement.

"The position of pig iron improved on a better consumptive demand, and busy trade continued in the finished products. Birmingham ironmakers complain of Belgian competition.

"Copper advanced on firmer American advices and lessened stocks. Tin was firm on covering operations. Lead and spelter were firm."

PARIS BOURSE HOPEFUL.

Revival of Business and General Price Advance—Russians Weak.

Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.
LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES

PARIS, March 18.—The Bourse here is taking an optimistic view of the Algeciras Conference and its expectations caused quite a revival of business in the last few days, all sections of the market showing a renewal of activity. Purchases by capitalists tired of accumulating cash without satisfactory employment and covering by bears stimulated a general advance in prices.

As a consequence of this movement there was a better demand for money for the fortnightly settlement and the carrying rates were slightly higher.

The internal troubles arising from the church inventories were ignored, and French rentes were above 99¼ ex coupon.

Spanish and Turkish were very strong, and other Government stocks as a rule were well supported. Russians, however, were weak on Berlin sales, it being rumored that a new loan would be floated on more advantageous terms than the existing issues. Russian Treasury bonds, on the contrary, were in demand, as the privilege of subscribing to any new loan is attached to these securities.

Bank shares were in good demand, as it is expected that a satisfactory result of the Algeciras Conference will be followed by the opening of a busy campaign in which credit institutions will obtain good profits.

Rio Tintos were barely steady. The South African department was again depressed by the recent debate in the House of Commons. There were numerous realizations in consequence of the apprehension caused by the view operators took of the situation.

HESITATION IN BERLIN.

Tone of the Boerse Improves, but Operators Are Still Cautious.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES
Special Cable. Copyright, 1906.

BERLIN, March 18.—The tone of the Boerse improved last week, although marked reserve on the part of the general public and regular operators must still be recorded. This reserve is due to the fact that the Morocco Conference has not yet solved its problems. The settlement of the differences between France and Germany is an indispensable preliminary to a real revival of confidence.

The apprehensions recently felt that the wave of prosperity in German industry had spent its force were less noticeable last week in consequence of favorable reports from all branches of German enterprise, especially the mining industry.

There was no marked change in the money market. An early reduction of the discount rate of the Imperial Bank is not yet probable, although the last statement of the bank shows that its position is improved. The open market is at present affected by the large sums required for the payment of dividends of banks and great industrial companies. Dutch gold has been received by the Imperial Bank from the Netherlands Bank and further transfers are expected.

TO THE HOLDERS OF FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS
OF THE
ALBANY & SUSQUEHANNA RAILROAD COMPANY
Due April 1, 1906.

Notice is hereby given that on and after April 2, 1906, the foregoing bonds will be paid upon their presentation at the office of the United States Mortgage & Trust Co., 55 Cedar St., New York City, and the due assignment to said Company of such of them as are not payable to bearer.

The interest on these bonds will be paid as usual at the office of The Delaware and Hudson Company, 21 Cortlandt Street, New York.

THE DELAWARE AND HUDSON COMPANY.
C. A. WALKER, Treasurer.

NOTICE TO HOLDERS OF
The Fort Smith & Van Buren Bridge Co. First Mortgage 6 Per Cent. Gold Bonds.

New York, March 1, 1906.

The undersigned, Trustee under the mortgage securing the bonds named above, will receive proposals or offers to sell said bonds up to and including Monday, April 2d, 1906, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, when the same will be opened, and bonds offered at the lowest prices (not exceeding 105 and interest) to the extent necessary to exhaust the amount in the sinking fund at that time will be accepted in the order that proposals are received. The interest on bonds offered and accepted will cease on April 1, 1906. If bonds are not offered and accepted in accordance with the above, they will be designated by lot for payment on October 1, 1906, at a price of 105 and accrued interest to that date.

The Mercantile Trust Company, Trustee.
